It's better to smile and be a villain than never to have smiled at all.

When a man gets a chance to dispose of his troubles he always heaps up the measure.

An American company is constructing many asphalt streets in Alexandria, Egypt.

The author of "Sweet Adeline," says a news item, is alive. But still in hiding, no doubt.

A diplomat is a visitor to the Mussolini household who discovers that the baby resembles his father.

The ominous silence in Indiana signifies either that all is over or that the courts are trying to catch up.

Castlehill Colliery, at Carluke, Ireland, is to close down after being operated for more than 100 years.

Mr. Coolidge says congress is going to stop the Mississippi floods. Why not? Did not Joshua stop the sun?

There is no scientific foundation for the popular belief that the deeper the water the easier it is to swim in it.

Old Neptune has no respect of person. A flying princess is just as fair game for him as a flying school teacher.

"Fall frocks," says a fashion page item, "have many colored tiers." That is no sign that the scenery for fall is going to be any less enhancing than it has been during the summer. You have no idea how small and narrow a tier a good modiste can make.

REPUBLIC VS. MONARCHY

A popular government is a thousand times better than a monarchy, but it would not be if the king and his counselors were always honest and patriotic, wise and good.

There can be no perfect government for the reason that there are no perfect men.

We are told that "In a multitude of counsel there is wisdom." The extent of the wisdom, of course, depends as much upon the capacity of the counselors as upon their number—very much more; and still more upon their honesty and integrity. Intelligent crooks will destroy a government sooner than honest ignoramuses.

Very little wisdom would result from the deliberations of a thousand fools, and none at all from a million idiots. Empty buckets always come up empty out of dry wells.

It is not that there were not wise men among them, but because there were more who were not wise than those who were, and this was supplemented by the fact that the masses do not give the attention to their own affairs that they should—do not study the country's need, even many who have the capacity to do so.

Even in our own state, the patriotism of whose citizens is excelled by those of no other, thousands of our best citizens stayed away from the polls because they did not care to express choice between pee-wee candidates, while thousands of illegal votes were cast for these self same candidates.

It is deplorable that it requires a campaign for offices wherein personalities, elimination, and recrimination are indulged to bring the voting strength of the state to the polls.

Civilization itself is not a stable thing, but the principles upon which it is based are. Civilizations come and go, but these principles go on forever.

Governments do not disintegrate and disappear because of the principles on which they are founded but because of lack of principle on the part of those who are entrusted with the administration of their affairs. No government would fail did it not violate the very principles upon which it is established.

It can be accepted as an axiom that a government is no better than the people who control it, and therefore the people have just such a government as they deserve.

THE ETERNAL QUESTION

A British traveler says that recently, when in the dominion of South Africa, a very old and very black Kaffir chief asked him: "Who's that feller, govment, an' why he take my money?"

The old chap unwittingly asked the eternal question. Since man first began to set up forms of government, man has been asking that one thing. We have all been sure that nothing is certain in this world but death and taxes. The tax-eater we have continually with us. All our political squabbles, all our political parties, all our political battles are more or less based upon taxes.

The "in" want to continue to levy the taxes and spend them. The "out" want to get in to do the same thing. And half the time the plain citizen wants to know what is done with all the money. And often he gets no very good answer.

WHY NOT EGGS?

In 1923 the United States ranked fourth among the countries in exporting of eggs, when they were 30,659,000 dozen. In 1927 the United States held tenth place, the exports having dropped to 26,624,000 dozen.

Great Britain takes 34 per cent of the world's exports of eggs and Germany about 20 per cent.

Farmers of the coastal region of South Carolina could produce millions of dozens of eggs. Not yet have bell weevils attacked chickens.

In one of the counties of this state some years ago four or five gentlemen happened to be at the house of a friend who had a thousand acres and yet no eggs to sell. Even if we do have plenty of corn for exporting, why not export eggs just as well, they are very palatable.

We see by the papers that Mr. Coolidge's foes are going to attack his foreign policy in congress. Which is where Cal has the merry ha-ha on said foes, 'cause he hasn't got any more foreign policy than a rabbit has horns.

Always Ready for ANY EMERGENCY

When a careless driver darts out of a side street, you need the extra power of Red Crown Ethyl Gasoline to jump your car out of danger.

This improved motor fuel—old reliable Red Crown Gasoline combined with Ethyl Brand of Anti-Knock Compound—makes motoring more satisfactory in every way, and more economical.

Your motor starts quickly, has more power, handles more easily, goes further on a gallon. It runs more smoothly with no vibration from fuel "knocks"—even on the steepest hills or in the heaviest mud or sand.

There's less wear and tear on your motor. Your repair bills are smaller and your motor lasts longer. Carbon in your motor should never be removed. It increases compression and enables Red Crown Ethyl Gasoline to develop more power.

Red Crown Gasoline won't hurt any motor. It gives the new, high compression motors fuel economy and extra power—makes every motor do better work.

Fill up with Red Crown Ethyl Gasoline and head for your hardest hill. Your motor will show new life—better acceleration; more hill-climbing power—and never a "knock."

Be sure you get the genuine. It is sold only where you see the Red Crown Ethyl Gasoline sign.

COAL—A WANING FUEL

Paralysis of the nation's industries, once a power held within the coal miners' hands, is gradually becoming less and less possible, and one of the reasons is coal itself. Formerly the country's most important fuel, it is rapidly losing its dominance.

Railroads have cut their coal consumption tremendously in the last decade the decrease in coal use the country over has been something like twenty per cent. Fifteen years ago a coal furnished almost ninety per cent of our heat and power.

Oil has made a huge gain, as has gas, both natural and artificial. Water power, too, has cut into King Coal. Oil furnaces in homes and flat buildings are one phase of the lessened coal demand.
