Thomas Nelson and B. H. Nelson were over to Springfield on last Sunday where they were visiting with friends and on their return brought with them some tools belonging to Thomas Nelson and some furniture and hardware store equipment which Mr. B. H. Nelson had purchased some time since.

Messrs. Ivan Delles Derner and Dale Topfitt seeing that the matter of hiring their corn picked would cost more than to purchase a corn picker, they did the latter and have the job done without much manual labor. They purchased their machine through the local dealer, Mr. B. H. Nelson.

Mrs. Ruth Amick remains very poorly at her home north of Plattsmouth, and is receiving every attention that loving hands can give and the best medical skill, still she is not responding to the ministrations and remains very poorly. Her many friends are all hoping that she may show improvement and be on the road to recovery soon.

Believing that the corn picker would last for the years, and to hire the corn gathered every year would not be the best practice Everett Spangler, who expects to make farming his vocation, purchased a corn picker from Harry Nelson and installed the new machine on the farm last Monday, giving it its first tryout that afternoon.

Last Sunday evening while Charles Barrows was at Omaha, and had left his car, a Chrysler, parked in front of where he was visiting some miscreant stole the wagon, and Charles had to find some other way to come home. Install an Elevator.
Paul Richter with the assistance of Harry Nelson installed the new elevator at the new end of W. S. Beckner, which is to be used by

The elevator now has a capacity of handling grain, both shelled and ear corn and any other grain with the same facility as a regular elevator, and can take corn from a sheller as well as an elevator and might save some farmers a long haul to the market.

Looks Like Community Building.
At a meeting last week of the citizens interested in a better Murray, the proposition of a community building was considered and in a very few minutes ten men pledged one thousand dollars as a starter for the project.

The amount has been greatly augmented later, and it looks like the new building would be a go now and ready to start. Do not make the gift something which you would not want your friends to know you gave it. For women and children dresses, stockings, underwear, no furs, but what would help those who are now needing the garments. For men and boys, coats pants, clothes, overalls, and underwear, not hats or furs. These garments can be left at the post office, and an immediate response will be worth much more than to defer or delay the giving until it is too late. The shipment to go south should be gotten out by the 11th of November, that the clothing may arrive where needed before the coming of cold weather.

This clothing must be clean and washed so it can be shipped. It should also be mended when necessary, with the buttons sewed on and ready to wear. With the funeral of Mrs. L. C. Hoschar, who has been sick at her home for many years, and who passed away early this week, was held at La Platte on Tuesday afternoon, and a host of friends of this excellent woman going from Murray to pay their last respects to a woman whom all loved to honor. Mrs. Hoschar, who has made her home here for the past several years was a lady of much refinement, and one who was ever ready to do for any one in need all she could possibly do. Her association with the people of Murray and vicinity has made her many friends who are now sorrowing because she has been removed from their midst. The funeral was held at La Platte on Tuesday afternoon, where she was laid to rest among the scenes of her childhood, and mourned alike by the members of her family and all who were privileged to have known this exceptional woman.

Entertains Old Friends
Mrs. Georgia Creamer very pleasantly entertained at dinner last Sunday a number of her old friends in honor of Mrs. Charles Carroll of Murray, and Mrs. Jess Hendricks, of Royal, Nebraska, the occasion being a most delightful meeting of the old time friends.

Mrs. Hendricks is a former resident of Murray, where she made her home for a number of years and is now a telephone operator at Royal, Nebraska. Her visit was one of the greatest delight to the old friends in and near Murray and especially to learn that Mrs. Hendricks is now enjoying much better health than formerly when she was a resident of the Murray community.

Mrs. Hendricks and her two daughters have just returned from an extended visit to the south, where they spent some time with a brother of Mrs. Hendricks, making the trip via the auto route. Enroute home they stopped at Murray to visit Mrs. Carroll, a sister of Mr. Hendricks.

MYSTERY SURROUNDS FIND
Houghton, Me., Nov. 1.—The source of the wreckage found washed ashore at Fourteen Mile point, by Edward MacGregor, light keeper near Ontonagon, Michigan, was today, the wreckage, MacGregor said here today, has drifted in during the past week for two miles on each side of the lighthouse. It seemed new and freshly painted, he said. The three letters, "H. A. N."—found on a broken timber, are three feet high. Lake carriers, as a rule, do not emblazon their names in letters so large.

Inquiry in marine circles thus far has failed to reveal any vessel missing. MacGregor planned to continue his search along the beach near Ontonagon tomorrow.

THE RED CROSS AND THE CHURCHES

By Dr. S. Parkes Cadman
The Eleventh Annual Roll Call of the American Red Cross, November 11-24, assumes exceptional interest this year because of the extraordinary burden placed upon the Red Cross by the Mississippi flood. It met the emergency so splendidly as to deserve the gratitude of the nation. Its continuing responsibility for dealing with the after-effects of the flood gives it a special claim upon our generous support at this time.

Not since the Great War has there been such a demonstration of the value of the Red Cross, and its capacity to handle the greatest disasters, as during the year that is closing.

I believe the American Red Cross merits and has the confidence and unqualified support of the churches of the land. As president of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, I express the hope that all the members of all our churches will participate in the inspiring work of the Red Cross by enrolling as members. Surely every citizen who has caught the spirit of religion will desire to contribute a dollar to this great humanitarian service and with the gift breathe a prayer to Almighty God that the people of this nation may be lifted to higher planes of living through sharing with those who suffer in great disasters.

GIVE FINE SUPPER
The Social Circle club, comprising the ladies east of Murray, gave a very delightful supper on Saturday evening at the library in Murray, and which was enjoyed by a very large number of the ladies and the residents of Murray and vicinity.

The club ladies had decorated the library building and transformed it into a most homelike and cozy place, where the delicious supper was served and which made a real treat to all those fortunate enough to be in attendance.

The slight rain early in the evening made the roads nice for travel and gave a very cooling touch to the atmosphere that aided in making the evening a country one of the greatest pleasure.

The ladies feel well pleased over the result of their activities and the generous response that was made to their delightful entertainment. A number of the finely prepared suppers were sent to those who were unable to attend the event and who in this manner were able to partake of the delicious repasts arranged.

The next regular meeting of the Social Circle club will be with Mrs. A. A. Young on November 15th and every member is urged to be in attendance.

Crop Yield, Farm Price are Not Stable

Manufacturers Control Product and Cost; Farmer Cannot Forecast Output or Fix Value.

During the recent debate at Louisville, Ky., on some of the questions that involved the efficiency of American farms, the need for more federal assistance in research, demonstration and extension work in relation to soil fertility and plant nutrition or the economic position of agriculture, Chairman Butler made some impromptu observations that are deserving of a lot of thought. In substance he stated that while sheltered industries have almost complete control of the factors determining success or failure, the farmer has no control over at least five of the important factors of production. Without attempting to quote Dr. Butler's exact words he showed that—

1. The manufacturer can produce the quantity of any product he may decide upon in advance—the farmer can not.

2. He can know his cost of production in advance with a high degree of accuracy—the farmer can not.

3. He can know his selling price in advance with approximate certainty—prices of nearly all the farmers important products are determined by the world economic forces far beyond the farmer's control.

4. He can on very short or almost no notice speed up production in response to increased market demand—the crop farmer has one harvest a year.

5. He can on short notice slow down production or stop it altogether should the circumstances of the market call for such action—the farmer can not.

One year (1914) the planter seeds 37,000,000 acres of cotton and harvests 16,000,000 bales; another year (1923) he plants almost 37,500,000 acres and makes only 10,000,000 bales. Wheat farmers seeded 75,694,000 bushels; in 1923 a corresponding 908,000 acres in 1919 and got a crop of 586,000,000 bushels; in 1923 a seeding of only 53,818,000 acres yielded 586,000,000 bushels. When a reduction of 22,680,000 acres should have cut the crop about 500,000,000 bushels, the actual reduction was only 112,000,000. Examples could easily be multiplied.

Earl Gray, the noted British statesman, speaks in praise of democracy and its stability, in utter disregard of Will Durant's contempt for it. But maybe Earl Gray has not read "The Story of Philosophy."

BIBLE SCHOOL LESSON

Sunday, November 6th

By M. S. Briggs

Lesson Title: "Justice and Prosperity."

Golden Text: "Let justice flow down as waters, and righteousness in a mighty stream."—Amos 5:24.

The Farmer Rhonhet

The farm often produces more than oats, corn and hay, for out of the farm life one learns many things which are not known to the refined people in the cities. Life and death are two things which come under the observation of the farmer more often than to the dweller in the city. The farmer is nearer nature and all its fullness and therefore nearer to the Great Jehovah, who created the world and the fullness thereof. Away from the maddening crowds is often the ardent desire of many people who are kept in the crowded maelstrom of the city life and its complex conditions.

Amos was a farmer, not the kind who live in the city and drive not in their Packard for an hour and look at the other people doing the work, but the kind who went barefooted to his work and was browed by the sun and wind, and who did not fear the rain or the boiling sun, but was there every ready for the task which each day brought forth. He was a real worker, doing with his hand the severe work which the time and the place demanded.

Besides this work he also had charge of the sheep of the flock and their care and protection. He was charged with taking them out and again in the evening bringing all of them safely back to the fold, and should one become crippled in any way, he had to place it on his shoulder and carry it to the fold. Then again, some times it was not possible to return to town with the flock and he had to remain in the fields with them as was the case of the shepherds on the evening when the Christ child was born. This life cultivated some traits of character that would be well for all to have, such as Justice, Dependability, Faithfulness, Loyalty to the cause of the employer and the sheep, with many others, which go to make up the sum and substance of the life of real honest Christians. Amos learned his lessons well, and then, for he was alone with God in the great open spaces, communed with the creator and ruler of the heavens and the earth. Therefore, when the time came for him to deliver his message to the two kingdoms, Judah and Israel, he did not have to wait for a call to service as do the preachers of today, but burning with the theme which he had been directed to deliver, he goes and in no mistakable words tells the rulers and especially of the Kingdom of Israel the doom which would come for their misdeeds. He accused them of selling the righteous for silver and the poor for a pair of shoes, and again he said, "You have slept on the garment of the poor," for it was the law that if a garment was soiled at night, for it was the protection of the owner, for the night his covering.

Justice to be Meted Out

That famous old poet who said "Man's inhumanity to man makes countless millions mourn," was right in every sense of the word, for the double dealing, the theft, the false pretenses, the grinding down of the poor, the extortion of much work for little pay—these things are sure to bring a harvest, and one which will not please the one who has to reap the results of his misdeeds to those with whom he lives, for did not James in the Fifth chapter and Fourth verse say, "Behold, the hire of the laborer who have reaped down your fields, which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth; and the cries of them who have reaped are entered into the ears of the Lord Sab-a-oth (hosts). Ye have lived in pleasure on the earth and have been wanton; ye have nourished your hearts and in a day of slaughter. Ye have condemned the just, and he did not resist you."

How About Our Times

Just now we are experiencing a condition which threatens the very existence of the agricultural portion of our industries, for while the prices of their commodities are lowered at every sunny day or copious shower, for there is reported an over abundance and at the same time the living which he has to have and which he, and in fact all consumers have to purchase are kept at the highest peak all the time. Because of such a condition as this, Amos, the prophet said, speaking for the Lord: "I will turn your feasts into mourning, and all your songs into lamentations; and I will bring a sack cloth upon your loins and baldness upon your heads."

"Behold, the days cometh, saith the Lord God that I will send a famine in the land—not a famine of bread; nor a thirst for water, but of the hearing of the word of the Lord and shall not find it. In that day, shall fair virgins and young men faint for thirst."

That justice might be done to all was the prophet sent to that land at that time, and that we may take heed to the bit of history, is this lesson selected for your study.

High Tribute is Paid Archbishop Harty of Omaha

Southern California Catholic Attend Funeral Service at Los Angeles.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 31.—High tribute was paid to the memory of Archbishop Jeremiah J. Harty, bishop of Omaha, by Catholics of southern California here this morning. Three bishops and more than 40 clergymen of the church sang a pontifical high mass of requiem over the remains of the prelate who died here late Saturday.

Celebrant of the requiem mass which began at 10 o'clock and lasted until high noon was Rt. Rev. John P. McGinly, bishop of the diocese of Fresno and life-long friend of the deceased prelate.

A guard of honor maintained a vigil over the remains which lay in state throughout Sunday night at St. Agnes' church and until the services began this morning.

Arch priest at the requiem mass was Rev. Clement Moloney, pastor of St. Agnes' church, with whom the archbishop has been residing since he came here more than a year ago. Msgr. George Donohue was deacon of the mass and Rev. C. Sullivan was sub-deacon. Responses for the mass were sung by the boys' choir of St. Agnes' church which the prelate sang the Gregorian chant as prescribed in the ritual.

After the mass the remains of the archbishop were removed to a local funeral parlor where they were prepared for the journey to Omaha, which began at 6:05 tonight. Father Maloney accompanied the casket. The final church ceremony over the prelate's body will be conducted Friday in Omaha where burial will take place.

Hastings Store Safe is Robbed

Between Three and Five Thousand Dollars in Cash Taken From Stein Brothers Company.

Hastings, Neb., Oct. 31.—No trace of the robbers who looted the safe of Stein Brothers company here early Sunday, has yet been found. Entrance was through the front door some time between 7:30 and 10 o'clock Sunday morning and it is estimated that the haul totaled from $2,000 to $5,000 in cash.

The night watchman left the store at 6 and the day porter swept out the front vestibule and dalks at 7:30, observing nothing wrong at that time.

At 10 o'clock, when Edmund Stein vice president of the firm, arrived at the store he found the front screens securely wired shut. The combination on the safe had been bent down so that the tumblers could be tripped. So deftly had the work been done that the safe was not even marred.

Twenty dollars in pennies and 50 dollars in two cent stamps as well as all checks and paper were discarded. Nickles and dimes were allowed to remain in their tills, indicating that the robbers had worked unburiedly and made their selection of loot carefully. The loss is covered by insurance.

OPPOSES WEDDING BALLAD

New York, Oct. 31.—A desire to make a bonfire of all the copies of "Oh Promise Me" and similar sentimental ballads sung at church weddings, is expressed by the Rev. Paul Lindemann, editor of the American Lutheran, in the current issue of that periodical.

"A disharmonious note is struck at weddings when a well-meaning singer sentimentally pleads, 'Oh Promise Me.' Or gives the assurance, 'I Love You Truly,'" Mr. Lindemann wrote.

"We have suffered long under the strange notes brought into the wedding ceremony in church, which, after all, a service and should retain its religious character. 'Perhaps some day we can have all the copies of 'Oh Promise Me' collected for a huge bonfire. We shall be there to apply the match.'"
