ABOLISH WAR? CERTAINLY!
Two learned gentlemen held a debate the other night on the question of abolishing war. The decision was that there can be no decision on that question, and we could have written it before the debate ever started.
Should war be abolished? Certainly, just as long as it can. But the habits of Mars are such that there never can be any decision on eliminating the old fellow—while we're human.
Benjamin Franklin thought that war should be abolished. Philosophically the Philadelphia printer was a genuine pacifist, hating war with all the feeling that Quakers hold against it. But Franklin saw the time come when his philosophy had to be put aside for another phase of life a little more important, the principle of tolerant existence.
Benjamin Franklin was a philosophical pacifist, but he signed the document that was in effect a declaration of war against Great Britain. Inclined to the ways of peace and love though he was, he went to France and won her help in that Revolutionary struggle. He came back and signed another document committing the new republic of America to the raising of an army and navy good and sufficient for the country's defense.
War should be abolished, certainly, but there are times when war becomes laws, just as much law as the policeman who shoots down the gunman and bandit.
The new marriage idea seems when you get down to the core of it, only the unconventional alliances between sexes that are as old as civilization, trying to clothe themselves with the respectability of marriage.

BECK, VARE AND CONSTITUTION
Meet Mr. James M. Beck. Is this the Mr. Beck we have heard so much about, the authority on constitutional law, the author of "The Vanishing Rights of the States, the former Solicitor-General of the United States, the distinguished Washington lawyer, long a resident of the national capital where he lives in a fine house as befits one of his possessions, attainments and high station?
Yes, yes. But shake hands now with Mr. James M. Beck of 1414 Spruce street, Philadelphia. It is a humble flat, this Spruce street abode, situated on the edge of the business area, in the roar, confusion and squalor of a tenement sector. The domicile is found within the First Pennsylvania Congressional District. That is William S. Vare's old district which last month elected Mr. James M. Beck to represent it in Congress.
Yes, the Washington James M. Beck and the Spruce street, Philadelphia, James M. Beck are the one and the same James M. Beck. Congress is curious. It has ordered an inquiry into his eligibility. "Is the Philadelphia residence genuine or is it a bit of Pennsylvania political strategy? Is Mr. Beck a bona fide Representative in Congress or is he adviser as guide, philosopher and legal adviser of Mr. Vare, who certainly needs a lot of guidance, philosophy and legal advice to squirm into the Senate.
The organic law is, of course, explicit on this point—that no person shall serve in the House of Representatives who is not an inhabitant of the State from which he is elected. That is the Constitution. But, as was asked long ago, "what's the Constitution between friends?" The country knows Vare's answer and, apparently, Beck's answer. The country will be interested in the answer of Congress to that question.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

JUDGE NOT BY APPEARANCE
One of the sayings that have become quite popular of late is to the effect that the fapper, though fair to look upon, is really quite dumb. The modern youth of the feminine variety has come to be regarded as a person who probably has to go through "that foolish stage where her mind turns to wild garments, a rouged face, lipstick mouth and all that.
Sometimes this is true, sometimes not. An Arkansas City fapper of the high school type showed the other day that even a girl who uses rouge and lipstick can think quickly and act in a crisis.
A six-year-old boy fell into a lake near the town. The fapper was the only witness. She saw some men at a distance and shouted to them, but they did not hear. Stripping off her coat, she plunged in and managed to bring the boy to shore.
Now, what to do with an unconscious boy, whose lungs are filled with water? The girl knew. Without help from anyone, she applied the first aid knowledge of which she had read casually in the newspapers. She pumped the young man's lungs dry and kept pumping until he breathed again.
To all appearances, this little lady was one of those modern, pretty, but dumb, sweet, but intelligent fappers whose thought are concerned mainly with discoloring their faces and marcelling their hair.
Sometimes the appearance doesn't mean a thing.
A prominent local ardent supporter of the eighteenth amendment was lately hailed to court in a western city on a charge of violating the auto speed law. He had to pay a pretty good fine, but said plenty of others were doing the same thing. Law enforcement did not sit well on him. But, if one law, why not all?
Life is a give and take proposition. Nobody can have anything he wants. Everyone must be prepared to make some concessions. Observance of the golden rule promotes happiness and contentment where selfishness provokes unhappiness and dissatisfaction.
Now if one or two more prominent "mentionables" will renounce the candidacy for President, we may see that famed mythical phenomenon of the office seeking the man.

Mrs. Ruth Snyder has faith in Governor Al Smith, she says, because "he is a humane man." But, perhaps the only humane scene the Governor can think of when passing on Mrs. Smith's plea for life, is a bedroom in an apartment in New York, where a sleeping man was slain without a chance.

RED CROWN ETHYL GASOLINE makes motoring safer, more economical, more satisfactory.
Safer, because your motor has a great reserve power for a sudden burst of speed. This prevents many an accident, enables you to pass another car quickly, sends you away first when traffic signals change.
More economical, because this combination of Red Crown Gasoline and Ethyl Brand of Anti-Knock Compound gives you more of the power that is in Red Crown—more miles to the gallon. It cuts out the cost of carbon removal because Red Crown Ethyl Gasoline does away with fuel "knocks" that cause motor wear and strain.
More satisfactory, because your motor is more responsive, runs more smoothly and lasts longer in good condition.
Red Crown Ethyl Gasoline won't harm any motor. Quite to the contrary, it will improve any motor's performance. It is recommended for constant use as the ideal motor fuel in winter as in summer—for old cars and for the newest high compression motors.
Fill your tank with Red Crown Ethyl Gasoline and make your own test for power, smooth operation, freedom from fuel "knocks," and mileage.
But be sure you get the genuine. It is sold only where you see the Red Crown Ethyl Gasoline sign—by reputable dealers and service stations in every where in Nebraska.
