A Merry, Merry Christmas

is the Wish of the Lundberg Garage to all our Friends—and that the year 1928 may give you 365 days of Good Health, Prosperity and Plenty and that your friends and our friends may ever continue to be our friends.

OLAF LUNDBERG - Nehawka, Nebr

'Twas the night before Christmas, when all through the house
Not a creature was stirring—not even a mouse;
The stockings were hung by the chimney with care,
In hopes that St. Nicholas would soon be there.

—Moore's "A Visit from St. Nicholas."

Our Christmas Wishes are that St. Nicholas will leave you so many gifts the year 1928 will find you more happy than ever before.

Six Men on Subsea Craft are Known Alive

Divers Working Arund Sunken Submarine Communicate by Tapping of Hammers.

Provincetown, Mass., Dec. 18.—Six men imprisoned in the wounded hull of the submarine S-4, which lies on the ocean floor in 100 feet of water off Provincetown harbor, were hopefully awaiting rescue tonight, while their span of life grew rapidly less.

Divers who went down to survey the hull of the submarine rammaged and sunk yesterday by the coast guard cutter, Paulding, brought back the pathetic story of an undressed conversation conducted on either side by rappings on the steel hull.

"How long will you be?" was the question asked and repeated by six men, perhaps the sole survivors of the S-4 crew, from their prison in the forward torpedo compartment of the vessel. But the only answer the rescuers could give to the plea was a quick "one."

"We are doing everything possible," the divers tapped out in the international code.

No Serious Gas Condition
There was no serious gas condition in the compartment, the submarine men said, but the air was poor. Air lines were applied to the valves of the sunken vessel and immediate steps were taken to supply those with purer atmosphere, but even the most optimistic among the officers in the salvage expressed little hope that the lives of the men could be saved. The damage to the hull of the submarine appeared to be great.

Pontoons dispatched from New London, Conn., and Brooklyn, N. Y., were delayed by wind and rough seas and had not reached here yet early tonight.

It was admitted that raising the submarine by pontoons, especially in the prevailing weather conditions would require considerable time.

Rear Admiral Frank H. Brumby, in charge of the work of salvage, said every effort would be made to speed up the work.

Hope and Despair Alternate
During the more than twenty-four hours that the men on board the S-4 were imprisoned before their messages were heard, hope and despair had alternated in the hearts of those directing salvage operations.

The first ray of hope came when early today the hull was located by means of an anchor. Later the S-4, a sister ship of the S-4, was able to receive replies to signals. Divers who went down from the mine sweeper Falcon, signaled by means of hammers and received replies from the forward torpedo compartment. Finally the actual messages were exchanged.

The report of the divers that there was a large hole on the starboard side of the S-4 under the control compartment led to the belief that a large number of the crew must have perished in the collision. While there was no definite proof that men were not still alive in other parts of the hull, officers said it was unlikely that compartments other than the forward torpedo section had escaped flooding.

Heavy Sea at Scene
A stiff breeze was blowing tonight, stirring up a heavy chop in the open sea off Wood End, where the submarine went down. Three mine sweepers, with the Falcon in the center, acted as the base for diving operations. The submarine tenders Wandank and Bushell were anchored some distance off, while four coast guard cruisers moved about. Strong search lights from the navy vessels lighted up the scene.

Capt. E. J. King, who had charge of salvage operations in the case of the S-51, sunk off Block Island two years ago, arrived here today by sea-plane to perform a similar service, while a fast navy destroyer went to Boston tonight to meet Commander Edward Ellsberg, who came out of retirement to volunteer his services as director of diving operations. Commander Ellsberg filled this role also in the case of the S-51.—State Journal.

SMITH ASKING FOR DELAY

Washington, Dec. 18.—A favorable reply to the request of Frank L. Smith of Illinois for postponement of the hearing into his claim for a senate seat is expected from the senate campaign funds committee tomorrow. Chairman Best has called a meeting of the committee for that time, and there was every indication tonight that Smith's request for a delay until after Christmas holidays would be granted.

Reed has been conferring with Chairman Shortridge, of the senate privileges and elections committee, with a view to co-operations in considering the case of William S. Vare of Pennsylvania, who also has been refused the oath of office as a senator pending further hearings as to expenditures in his primary campaign.
