RUSSIA OVERPLAYS HER HAND

Russian diplomacy has again overplayed its hand. Now it is Nationalist China which does what England did a few months back. The Shanghai government has presented the Soviet Consul-General with his passports, and given him a week's no-

Thus the inability of Russian diplomats to forget that they belong to the Third International has led their country to another disaster of considerable magnitude. It is, perhaps, the greatest diplomatic disaster the Soviets have suffered, because it means the loss of an ally. A recent bulletin issued by the American Committee for Fair Play in China attests to this relationship between the Compliments are the red fires that two nations. It shows that Russia has made great contributions to the Nationalist cause. She has given! Patients and long suffering seems considerable ammunition and some money. She has supplied advisors to both the army and government. Philosophy works in all right if If it weren't for women and gold What did she apparently hope to gain from this aid? The bulletin offers a quite reasonable answer:

First of all, it would seem, an independent and united China could centrol Japan and offer a broad barrier to Europthe Far East. Russia also wishes to secure trade for the Siberian coast, and to maintain her outlet to the Pacific.

But the Russians are apparently not content with merely increasing The entry book for the presiden- the security of their country. The tial race is still open. No handicap bulletin from which we have quoted ends with a warning:

> If Russia continues her friendly attitude towards China, and does not destroy the confidence of the Chinese people by trying to alter the normal course of the Chinese Nationalism, these two vast countries will undoubtedly co-operate for mutual protection and economic benefit.

BRITISH "JUSTICE"

One of the favorite themes of Britons is a comparison of their courts with ours. They say that a man gets a much squarer deal in a British tribunal than in an American. But we have our doubts.

In the last few years a number of rich and highly connected women have been brought before the British courts charged with "kleptomania." Oh, dear no, not theft is only committed by poor, vulgar people. Theft is a crime, "Kleptomania" is a disease. And the rich and highly connected women always bring into court an array of highly paid and
