CRIME AND INDIVIDUALS

Judge Frank Murphy, of Detroit, speaking before a group of club women recently, had some rather pertinent things to say about the crime situation.

Discussing the great growth in arrests and convictions in late years, the jurist said:

"The solution, if we are to keep crime down to the minimum, is not in law but in developing in the hearts and minds of the people those ideals and capacities that teach self-control. This is the task of the homes, the schools, and the churches."

Rather well said, we think. We can't reform ourselves by starting to work from the outside in. Every betterment that we ever hope to get must begin within the individual.

A DANIEL COME TO JUDGMENT

Wedding presents are the property of the bride. However, no one really cares whose property it is which at the wedding. It is when the matrimonial ship has gone on the rocks that property rights must be adjusted. And frequently, be it said, the adjustment calls for diplomacy, tact and a Justice of the Peace.

Last November, a local matron was granted a divorce and the custody of the child. But for some reason, the Court failed to mention who was to have and to hold the following: one washing machine, one sewing machine, one ironing machine, one ironing board, one vacuum cleaner and two rugs. But the question was not left long in abeyance. The lady had the divorce and the custody of the child. In a short time, she had the list of properties that begins with the washing machine. Her former husband brought a replevin suit. Diplomacy and tact having failed, the Justice of the Peace stepped in.

From the conflicting testimony, it appears that the washing machine belonged to the wife, whether by purchase or as a present. The Justice wisely ruled that even if her former husband had helped with the wash, his interest in the machine was only academic. "And it must follow as the night the day" the other properties also belonged to her. Such was always our contention, but we are glad that the Justice made it a point of law. In fact, the only thing that puzzles us is the inequitable distribution of the rugs. A man could use a rug.

GREAT BRITAIN AND WAR

We've been hearing a good many jingles lately talking about war between England and the United States. Some of these people seem to believe that England's leaders are sitting up nights planning for the conflict.

But W. C. Bridgeman, first lord of the admiralty in England—he'd be called secretary of the navy over here—isn't one of them. In his recent report to Parliament, Bridgeman points out that "many important services either have been deferred entirely or are being provided at a leisurely rate which the expectation of a prolonged period of peace alone warrants."

In other words, England is letting her navy take it easy because England sees no cloud on the horizon. And that wouldn't happen if Britain really thought there was any likelihood of war with the United States in the near future.

INTO A MAD MARKET

The frenzied activities on the stock exchange recently, with tales of fabulous gains made by fortunate speculators, have had thousands of citizens who ordinarily leave the market strictly alone to "take a plug" in the hope of making sudden gains.

This is unfortunate. The stock market is a trick place even for the expert. It is no place for the man of small means. The most foolish thing you can do is risk a few hundred dollars that represent years of saving. Of course, you may double your money. But, on the other hand you may lose it all over night. If you have savings, leave them in the bank where they belong.

THE TACITURN MR. HAYS

The word comes from Paris. Informed that he was the ex-Cabinet officer, who with Senator Smoot and former Senator Lenroot, had advised Fall to write the McLean letter, Will Hays said: "I will not comment on any phase of the oil question while in Europe." And if that senatorial committee would stop badgering him Mr. Hays would never comment on any phase of the oil question while in the United States.

Next to who should be captain, the hardest thing for the youngsters to decide is who is to go after the baseball after it has gone through some kitchen window.

Secretary Hoover says the eighteenth amendment must be worked out constructively. Thus opening up a new line of thought. It sounds pretty good.
