The man who lives up to his ideals usually remains poor.

Much that passes for wit owes its humor to its own absurdity.

Better swallow your indignation when you thirst for revenge.

The Chicago definition of a bomb outrage is one with a defective fuse.

If a man's story is incoherent, he is angry, intoxicated or on an oil trial witness.

It's usually the thing you haven't got that would seem to make life worth living.

When the people wake up from a longer slumber than usually, look out for squalls.

America is a country where a couple who can't be amicable get an amicable divorce.

Eleven of the twenty-nine presidents of the United States have been of Scotch ancestry.

County Commissioners that do their duty, is a blessing to the taxpayers of any country.

Let us hope Calvin Coolidge has more success convincing a book agent he doesn't want a thing.

Will Coolidge do the farmers a good turn by signing the farm bill? Not on your life, Mary Anne.

Len Small got just what was coming to him in the election Tuesday, and a warning to "Big Bill" Thompson.

The most indignant denial we have read lately is that of an Ohio editor, in reply to a Will Hays as an Ohio man.

So far as the bathing beauties are concerned, the only pageant abandoned was the one scheduled for Atlantic City.

An address before the D. A. R. it is our presumption, must be as cautious as a political platform discussing prohibition.

It was a nice day, and fair turn out.

The primary is over, and now comes the work.

March winds are trying to give April a few turns.

The Democratic idea of harmony is to be equally divided.

Only a silent man can realize the folly of talking too much.

Well, how do you like it? If you don't like it, you can lump it.

Hoover is not the man for president and the farmers know it.

The talking movie may even give us the "squash" of the custard pies.

Some of our leading politicians seem to be pretty hard-boiled in oil.

Sometimes when a woman argues the best she can do is convince herself.

If it weren't for the optimist the pessimist would never know how happy he isn't.

Much of his garden already is up, thanks to the blackbirds and neighbors' chickens.

Some women should give charity a job at home by casting their bread upon the water.

From the way the democrats vote for Charley Bryan, they surely want him for governor.

The wake-up that Chicago got Tuesday was the best ever for the hotbed of villains.

Honest people wake up once in a while. They surely got in some good work in Chicago Tuesday.

If Voliva finds the earth is flat, as he contends, his discovery may solve the mystery of lost golf balls.

Whoever said a thing is not lost if you know where it is, never knocked a baseball through a kitchen window.

Why Pay War Prices?

THE GOVERNMENT USED MILLIONS OF POUNDS

We are not exactly certain what a picture of Woodrow Wilson will adorn the new $1,000 bill. Fortunately we remember what Mr. Wilson looked like.

It would be a fine stroke if somebody should convince Big Bill that Chicago bandits are emissaries of King George.

Otis F. Glen, is the man who will go to the Senate from Illinois. He defeated Frank L. Smith by a vote of 400, as majority.

A person works two months in the year just to pay his taxes. He wants to know what two months they are so he can take a vacation during that time.

Before committing himself on the daylight saving plan, a St. Joseph young man asks the petters who clutter up the byways during the summer season.

Speaking of Sinclair's jail sentences, which we have not for a long time, we believe that if Sinclair actually were lodged in jail that would make the jail uncommon.

Evidently the office boy is of Mormon descent. Every year, about the time the baseball season opens, he has to take a couple of days off to help bury his grandmothers.

THE RESTLESS AMERICAN

If you were asked to pick one word that would characterize modern Americans, what word would you pick? J. D. Mooney, president of the General Motors Export Co., says that the first thing he notices when he returns to this country from abroad "is the restlessness that I see all about me." And perhaps that one word—"restlessness"—is about as apt a word as you could choose.

At the close of the Revolution, the American colonists, with restless haste, began to swarm over the back country behind the Alleghenies. They roamed deep into the forests, founded new cities, dug canals, sent steamers and barges up and down the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, and in a generation had hewed out a new empire.

They had not finished before the Louisiana purchase abruptly extended their horizon a couple of thousand miles farther west. Again the restless urge seized them and they were off. The great plains were settled and cleared of savage enemies. A war was fought with Mexico, and the great empire of California and the southwest passed into American hands.

When the expansion of territory ceased, the restless ones found new outlets for their energies in industrial expansion. All over the land mills began to shoot their black smoke toward the sky. New railroads were built, new mines were dug, new industries founded; there was no leisure, no time for resting and taking stock, no time for developing the arts. Always there were more jobs to be done, and always the restless American threw himself into them with enthusiasm.

Today we have no more virgin territory to settle. Our industries are pretty well stabilized. Yet the old restlessness exists and it is still finding outlets. Americans are looking abroad; the energies that formerly went into expansion at home are now building up an industrial and financial empire that is embracing the whole earth.

America today has nearly $15,000,000 invested abroad. Young men, in ever-increasing numbers, are being sent far afield to look after these investments—to Europe to Africa, to South America, to the islands of the far east. In their wake go the salesmen, and following them go steamers bearing American goods. The restlessness that developed a continent is now extending its influence over every land.

Restlessness; yes, it's a pretty good word for us. Most of the time we don't know exactly where we are going, or why; yet we keep eternally at it, driven by the urge that has been bred in us. And, without quite realizing it, we are changing the civilization of the world.

OUR REAL NEEDS

It is astonishing how few gardens and family milk cows there are on small farms in Nebraska, and, for that matter, on the plantations as regards renters, the principle of private economy and conservation of resources as a whole being the same as regards all consumers.

Much of the lack of farm prosperity is due to the fact that there is not sufficient business judgment exercised by farmers. If our farmers would classify themselves as business men and assume responsibilities accordingly we would obtain a great deal of individual thinking and enterprises that is now entirely absent.

The fact that one good cow will produce as much food annually as is contained in the carcasses of four beef steers of one thousand pounds each, which requires more than two years to produce, is truth of staggering importance when associated with moral responsibility attached to every citizen who is mentally qualified for citizenship.

The great void in the economies of Nebraska is the fact that we overlook the importance of producing all the necessities of life that are possible. We depend too much upon producing money with which to buy things.

Acquiring money for spending purposes is the large idea. The more important philosophy, that of producing necessities for the purpose of avoiding expenditures takes second place, even if any position at all, with the average citizen. The plan of seeking money for purposes of expenditure and ignoring the other principles finds its own weakness in disappointments that arise due to development of unforeseen events and conditions, and to the fact that costs often exceed revenues, thereby making such farm policies very much more speculative, consequently hazardous.

Easter couldn't chase winter entirely away so we'll have to depend upon baseball to do it.

WOMEN AS VOTERS

England, having enfranchised women over 30, now proposes to extend the ballot to women over 21. The so-called flapper electorate is estimated as numbering five million. If all women over 21 in England voted as a sex, they would have a majority over male voters of two million. There is some speculation as to what influence the flapper vote will have on the policies of the Empire, whether it will go Tory or Labor, whether it will follow Stanley Baldwin and the House of Lords or Ramsay MacDonald and H. G. Wells.

To us this speculation seems idle. The notion that women would vote as a sex has been exploded in the United States, where it has been demonstrated that for the most part women in Democratic families vote Democratic and women in Republican families Republican. It will be so in England too. It is absurd to think that the mere accident of sex supplies a community of interest between the daughter of an English peer and the daughter of a Welsh coal miner.

Nor, for that matter, would such a condition be desirable. Problems of government by and large have nothing to do with sex. To draw sex lines in politics would be a silly distinction, as though men have a different interest than women in such things as farm relief, flood control, the sick coal industry or corruption in government. Moreover, even on problems that intimately concern sex, as woman suffrage itself, and woman labor laws, there is no unanimity in the sex.

We expected too much from the feminine vote in the beginning. It was merely a piece of sentimentalism to think that women would revolutionize society by their vote, that they would go to the polls as one beautiful and idealistic person to usher in the millennium. We have suffered a disillusion on that score which we richly deserve.

A SIGN OF PROSPERITY

Federal reserve bank statistics show that in February of this year more automobiles were sold than in February of 1927. This happens to be significant, since it is the first time in 18 months that any month's sales showed a gain over the same month in the previous year.

Add to this the fact that many potential buyers are believed to be holding off for a while to wait for Ford to get into full production and you have a sign of the times that is quite encouraging. It would seem that the automobile industry is in for a big year.

And if the whole auto industry prospers, the prosperity of the rest of the country is bound to improve.

Don't Neglect Your Kidneys!

You Can't Be Well When Kidneys Act Sluggishly.

Do you find yourself running down—always tired, nervous and depressed? Are you stiff and achy, subject to nagging backache, drowsy headaches and dizzy spells? Are kidney excretions scanty, too frequent or burning in passage? Too often this indicates sluggish kidneys and shouldn't be neglected.

Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, increase the secretion of the kidneys and thus aid in the elimination of waste impurities. Doan's are endorsed everywhere. Ask your neighbor!
