Platform Committee Locked on Farm Relief

Whether to Try and Placate Farmers or Uphold President's Stand Is the Question.

From Wednesday's Daily—
The republican national convention at Kansas City this afternoon took adjournment at 1:30 until this evening at 7:30 when it will reconvene and by which time it is hoped to have the committee on resolutions ready to report.

The committee has been in session since yesterday and the farm relief plank seems to be the chief stickler in the program as the advocates of the various farm relief measures are insisting on a specific declaration as to the enactment of favorable legislation while the supporters of the president feel that his stand should be approved.

Forecast of the platform point to a praise of the Coolidge administration, reaffirmation of the republican tariff stand as well as endorsement of the foreign policy of the administration, a plank on law enforcement similar to that of the last convention.

The convention spent a very inactive session today with the delay in the committee reports. The credentials committee report was adopted by a unanimous vote after the Texas contest was brought to the floor of the convention and the committee was not challenged by any of the contesting delegations.

The greatest interest in the convention now seems to be that of who will be the running mate of Herbert Hoover, the names of Vice-President Charles G. Dawes, Senator George Moses, Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas, Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, Senator Edge of New Jersey, Congressman John Q. Tilson of Connecticut and Samuel McKelvie of Nebraska being among those suggested.

Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire, permanent chairman took over the gavel at 12:30 and gave a fifteen minute address of his usual style of humor and sharp thrusts at the democratic party.

Lemon Sherbert For Hot Weather

A frozen desert is especially fine for hot weather is lemon sherbert. It can be made as follows: For a gallon, take two and one-half quarts of milk, two cups of sugar, two egg whites, one pint of lemon juice, and one teaspoon of gelatine. Dissolve the gelatine in four tablespoons of boiling water, and add it to the milk. Leave this in the refrigerator overnight. Place it in the freezer and when it begins to stiffen, add the strained lemon juice and the beaten egg whites. Continue freezing until hard.

Juices of orange, pineapple, grapes and grape fruit may be substituted for the lemon if desired. Water may be used instead of milk and the product will be ice instead of a sherbert.—L. R. SNIPES, County Extension Agent.

HAS NEW LUMBER YARD

The writer was a visitor at the bustling little village of Cedar Creek recently, and found that town a very live place for the number of its inhabitants, and doing a good business. A. O. Ault was in Omaha for the day but the store was being conducted in the very best manner by Robert Stivers and the son of Mr. Ault. J. H. Hesselnow, who was just arriving from the daily distribution of the mail to the surrounding community, immediately departed for Wabash where there was to be a meeting of the rural carriers of the county, and where they were looking after the business of the delivery boys. Walter Schneider had just been receiving corn and shipping it, and is making a good man for the place. R. H. Lohnes who has just taken over the new lumber yard showed the writer around, and spending of business said it was very satisfactory both as to the reception of grain, and the sale of lumber and builders ware of which he is carrying a good stock. S. J. Reames was over after the business at the confectionary, thus keeping the business going.

All say the business is very good and that Cedar Creek is doing her full quota in all lines.

Isler Shows Drawing Large Crowds at Lot

Shows Are Clean, Attractive and Make Tourist Park a Place of Real Activity.

From Wednesday's Daily—
The attractions that Louis Isler has gathered in his high standard set by this well known showman, and they are pleasing large numbers each night this week at the "lot" on the Tourist park on Washington avenue.

The shows that represent the Isler aggregation are larger and better even than those which were with the company three years ago when they were here and all are kept up to the high standard that Mr. Isler has set for his shows.

The large crowd last night found many interested moments in visiting with "Major White," the tiny fellow that is one of the real treat to behold as the little fellow is only twenty-three inches in height and weighs less than thirty-five pounds and is eighteen years of age.

Clever and entertaining also is the monkey auto drome where the little monkeys drive the tiny racing cars in the personnel of real racers with the assurance of speed along the race track and providing plenty of thrills for the crowds.

The minstrel show, well named, "Happyland," is a great feature of the show and one of the best attractions of its kind that can be found in a carnival show and having some high class artists and entertainers in the personnel of the company and one that is always a good evening of entertainment for either the young or the old.

Last evening the Wheelock athletic show was a big attraction for the men who were on the grounds and the athletic exhibitions given by the carnival people were very entertaining and in which the various contenders showed their stuff in fine shape.

In "Egypt" the audience finds entertainment in the dances of the orient and which proves a very fine feature of the carnival for the lovers of this form of entertainment.

The thrills and delights of the "Hen House," Oh Boy and "Just for Fun" furnished entertainment for a large number last night and here all of the mystery and unexpected thrills of the unknown awaits the visitor.

The riding devices are the very best that can be made and the show as a whole did a fine business, the "Merry Mix Up" and the "Whip" being among the most popular while the Ferris wheel and Merry-go-Round, two of the reliable features of the carnival were also liberally patronized. The sea plane was much enjoyed by the little folks that were in attendance at the carnival. The scenic railroad was also one of the features of the show that drew the attention of the older as well as the little folks and many enjoyed the rides on this real clever device.

There is not an attraction on the lot that does not come up to the very highest standard in this line of entertainment and each show is managed by very clever ladies and gentlemen that do their utmost to provide the very best type of entertainment for their patrons.

PURCHASES MEAT MARKET

The City meat market and grocery which has been operated by A. J. Tritley for the past several months, was today sold to Frank Vocelka, of Omaha, who will arrive in the next few days to take over the shop and operate it in the future. This is a very neat and attractive market and one of the most popular in the city and Mr. Vocelka will make an ideal man in the conduct of the shop as he is a man of experience in this line of work.

Mr. and Mrs. Vocelka have come to Omaha recently from Chicago and will make their home here as soon as possible and will be glad to accept of the moving of their household goods to this city. To the new merchant and his wife, the residents here will extend their best wishes.

W. E. Rosencrans, who has been out in the west part of the state at the present time, is expected to return here, came in last evening for a visit here with the home folks.

State Congress of Morals Plan of Prof. Gregg

Nebraska Educator Says Restoration of Mosaic Decalog is Problem

Grand Island, Neb., June 8.—A cry of a "Congress of Morals" for the state of Nebraska, to meet next winter "in connection with or immediately following the meeting of organized agriculture," was raised by Prof. F. M. Gregg, author of the recently-published Nebraska school textbook on moral education, at the 61st annual convention of the Nebraska Christian Education, which closed here Thursday night.

Professor Gregg declared that the problem of today is restoration of the Mosaic decalog.

Drastic Treatment Advocated

"Extreme conditions call for drastic treatment," declared Professor Gregg, after outlining what he considers the evils of the age. "It would seem that so threatening a moral status would call for the most heroic and immediate amelioration. Is it not time in our own Nebraska to call a great congress of morals?"

"If say 400 or 500 men and women, representatives of Parent-Teacher associations, State Teachers' association, Nebraska Council of Christian Education, Credit Men's Association of Nebraska, commercial clubs of the state, denominational conferences, county attorneys' organization, Kiwanis, Rotary and Lions clubs of the state—if representatives of these and other altruistic groups could meet for a few days, could we not accomplish great things in the way of definite findings and recommendations?"

Sees Cigaret Conspiracy

In outlining various phases of "the compelling task," Professor Gregg declared: That 350,000 people in America get their living in whole or in part by resorting to crime; that the average age of the criminal has dropped from 25 to 19 years in less than five years; that $3,000,000,000 worth of property is stolen in America every year; that divorce has become more widespread in America than any other nation; that road houses and public stations for ubiquity, and that "as the crowning conspiracy of evil in our country there is the utterly conscienceless and increasingly successful attempt of the cigarette manufacturers to put into the mouth of every man, woman and child above 10 years of age."

Scores "Animalistic Standards."

He scored companionate marriage and the hip-pocket flask. "The widespread talk about trial and companionate marriage has its full share of responsibility for the trend of society toward the animalistic standard of life," he declared. "The madding of 40 bathing beauties on the sands before the sea wall at Galveston, Tex., last Sunday in the presence of 100,000 lascivious spectators is only one more instance of the sex degeneracy of our time."

A resolution adopted called upon Charles W. Taylor, state superintendent of education, to call a congress on morals and character.

Dr. W. S. Bovard, Chicago, secretary of the board of education of the Methodist Episcopal church, offered this fourfold creed for the churches:

Belief in the primary of pertruth; that the school is the best method yet devised for putting sons; in the personalizing of truth into the warp and woof of human life, and that the manifest activities of business should be transmuted into manhood.

North Platte was tentatively selected as the 1929 convention city.

CEDAR CREEK WINS OVER OMAHA TANNERS

Cedar Creek beats Harness Bill's team from Omaha on the local diamond in a sixteen inning game of two and three. Nessen pitched a most wonderful game allowing no runs over home plate after the fourth inning, striking out nineteen men and he was just as good in the sixteenth inning as he was in the beginning. This team beat Bellevue at Shenandoah, Iowa the week before. Gauer played a good game on first and Sprieck making the winning score on Schneideisbit. All the boys played good ball. It being a good game from start to finish. Next Sunday we play Weeping Water at Cedar Creek. Come out and see a good game.

Forecasters of Weather Meet in Conference

Delegates Are Told Their Work Deserves Thanks of All Nations

London—A unified system of weather reporting for all countries, so that air and ocean navigators wherever they may be always receive the same kind of information, is the object of a conference of 200 delegates of the International Commission for Synoptic Weather Information now in session here.

Sir Philip Sassoon, Under Secretary of State for Air, presiding at a luncheon at the Savoy given by the British Government in honor of the guests said: "Weather forecasting is no longer guess-work, based on insufficient data, but is a matter of quick information gathered from as wide an area on sea and land as is possible."

The more widely, he continued that they could extend the areas in which observations were regularly and scientifically obtained, and the more efficient and practical the steps taken to insure the speedy and accurate dissemination of knowledge so procured, the more reliable would become the daily forecasts and the greater their value to aviators, agriculturists, holiday makers and many others.

Greater Speed and Sureness

He congratulated them on the success already attained in devising methods by which the necessary information could be obtained and transmitted with yet greater speed and sureness, particularly from the wide ocean spaces which were so greatly affected by weather conditions in western Europe. Meteorology knew no national frontiers and worked for the good of all peoples. Those who aided the advancement of this knowledge, he said, deserve the gratitude and thanks of all nations.

Later in the day the delegates accompanied by the Fellows of the Royal Meteorological Society inspected the Croydon airport. Captain Entwistle, superintendent of the aviation services division, explained the development of meteorology for flying purposes. He said that air liners of five nations were now arriving and departing daily, and effective organizations were essential to successful and regular operations of the air routes.

Meteorological reporting stations were now established at all terminal airdomes and intermediate points and the central station received from these hourly reports as to the direction and speed of the wind near the ground, the weather and the extent and height of the clouds and visibility.

Hourly Reports Assured

Collective messages giving information from different stations were interchanged by wireless telegraphy at fixed times after each hour of observation between the countries concerned, and in this way pilots were assured of hourly reports of conditions along each route.

In addition special reports were obtained every three hours of wind direction and speed at various heights to enable pilots to select the best altitude to fly. Further special short period forecasts were issued so that a pilot knew what changes to expect and there was an international exchange of these reports. The general system had now been elaborated to include weather reports of alternative routes, so that when storms or fogs prevailed on a normal route, the organization indicated if it was possible to use the alternative.

The expectation is that the conference will arrange for the circulation of warnings of sudden weather changes by wireless to every airdrome and aircraft of each nation, including the United States.
