FARM BUREAU NOTES

Copy for this Department furnished by County Agent

Spraying the European Bind Weed

On the farm of Geo. Althouse and Fred Manners, near Eagle, we used Sodium Chlorate to spray the bind weed and the Canadian Thistle. This was done under the direction of Mr. Stewart and Mr. Goding of the Agronomy Dept. of the College of Agriculture. These experiments will be watched very closely and if successful many farms near Eagle will use it.

Dairy Herd Improvement Association

R. B. Stone of Nehawka again has high cow in the Cass Johnson Oteo County Association. She produced 1798 pounds of milk, 78.6 pounds butterfat and had a test of 4.6 during the month. Mr. Stone also has the high herd in the group of five to fifteen cows. His eleven cows produced an average of 44.2 pounds butterfat in the month. A. O. Range of Plattsmouth, had the second high herd in the group of sixteen cows and up. His sixteen cows produced an average of 29.9 pounds of butterfat.

Cass County to Have a Home Demonstration Agent

The Farm Bureau Board feels that the County can raise $400.00 among all the people of Cass County who favor bringing a Home Demonstration Agent into the county so that the women and girls of the county can have the same opportunity of receiving the Extension work that the men and boys have. They hope that when anyone is asked to help or contribute in staking down a large brush tribute to this that they will gladly do so.

The Short Ditch Becomes a Long One

Ditches in Nebraska have a habit of getting larger instead of smaller in most cases and they grow deeper by the action of what is known as overfalls, or we might say just plain water falls. No doubt you have noticed this action on your farm. Near the lower part of the ditch a small water fall starts. Year by year it eats back into valuable farmland and eventually may cause a ditch which is 20 to 30 feet deep and from 60 to 100 feet wide. The amount of water passing over the overfall may not be great but the damage done may be considerable. Sometimes a second overfall starts below the first one and they chase each other upstream in a merry procession.

Often times checking the first one will also way-lay the others. There are several methods used and while they are more or less temporary will give considerable relief. One system to construct a large apron of woven wire and brush which is staked down after the overfall has been shoveled off so it is more of a slide than a direct drop. In many cases a plank chute has been used effectively to conduct water from the higher level to the lower one, although galvanized sheet iron could be used for the same purpose. Any of these methods however, must be considered more or less temporary affairs as the real way to check an overfall is to construct below it a soil saving dam with a large tube running through it to the upstream side. In this way the ditch can be filled, the overfall checked and the job is permanent for many years.

The Farm Bureau Office would be glad to advise you regarding ditches and give you information as to how they may be controlled.—L. R. SNIPES; County Extension Agent.
