An enemy knocks a man down; then a friend proceeds to kick him.

Executive ability is the faculty of getting some one else to do your work.

Men wish they didn't have any harder time than boys think they are having.

The first geological period, called the azoic, contained to trace of life in any form.

Paying work progressing nicely! If they hurry, they'll get done before cold weather hits us.

The millions that Philadelphia bootleggers are said to have in the banks, no longer can be called liquid assets.

Nearly everything has its virtues—even a losing football team, which acts as a powerful reform on betting alumni.

Joe Robinson, democratic candidate for vice president, is a wonder, and addresses large audiences in every address.

Somehow or other, when we read about the size of the grape crop, we always recall that grape jelly can be made synthetically.

A year or so hence both the wets and the dries will probably have to admit that they expected too much of the November election.

David Lawrence says Nebraska is nobody's state. David is a pretty well informed correspondent and radio speaker and knows whereof he talks.

Walter Donaldson, song writer, has been sued for $16,500, an alleged gambling debt. Ordinarily we try to be neutral in such matters, but there ought to be some retribution for "My Blue Heaven."

MYTHS OF THE CAMPAIGN

It would be impossible to debunk a great political campaign such as that in which the people of the United States are engaged. Myths are very persistent, and they gain in stubbornness from the passions of the people.

In the recent election which sent the Labor party out of power in England there was an excellent example of the extent to which pure myth can affect the result. The opposition made public a letter which it claimed had been sent to England by Zinovieff, an official of the Russian government. This letter directed the communists in the British Isles to proselyte in the army and thus paralyze the defenses of England against a popular uprising. It was never charged that the Labor party had anything to do with the letter, which has subsequently been proved false. Nevertheless, it so alarmed the people that the present Tory government was swept into power. Denials of the genuineness of the letter during the campaign were futile.

There are three such myths in the present presidential campaign. They will probably persist to the last. One of them is that Mr. Hoover fixed the price of wheat during the war and kept the wheat growers of the United States from getting a big price for it. Mr. Wilson answered this charge by saying that Mr. Hoover did not take any direct part in fixing the price of wheat, which was done by a commission on which the food director did not sit. It has additionally been pointed out that wheat growers outside the United States were far from enriched by wheat prices, which fluctuated with such violence that it would be difficult to prove how our farmers lost anything by having the price fixed.

A second myth is that democratic rule is synonymous with hard times. There have been severe depressions under both republican and democratic presidents. There was one last winter in which millions of people were thrown out of employment. There was one in 1907, when Mr. Roosevelt was in the White House, and another in 1893, when Cleveland was beginning his second term. The economists do not relate prosperity to politics. Only the republicans do that. It is futile, as opposition to a myth always is for a time, to point out that the Federal banking act, the work of democrats, has probably operated as the best business stabilizer the country has ever known.

A third myth is that the tariff is responsible for high wages enjoyed by American workmen. Delegations have come here to study this phenomenon from both Europe and Asia. They have all agreed that American wages are due to the great natural wealth of the country, improved manufacturing and business methods, and the superior productiveness of the American workman. Not one has found that the tariff has anything to do with it, yet that myth is so persistent as to be a considerable factor in all our national elections. It is too much to hope that the country will reduce these things to their true worth. Truth is only stranger, not stronger, than fiction.

EIGHT BARREN YEARS

Republican misrepresentation of the farm issue proceeds apace. Secretary of Agriculture Jardine, in a statement issued at Washington, talks about all the horrible things that would happen to the farmer if the tariff were to be reduced.

He neglects to mention the fact that on the farmer's major cash crops, such as wheat, hogs, corn and tobacco, the tariff is not working for the farmer, and on cotton there is no tariff at all. He neglects to mention that the republican party has failed utterly so much as to recognize this glaring injustice, let alone proposing to correct it, and what is still more important, he forgets to say that it is one of the cardinal points of the democratic platform and of Governor Smith's policy to give the farmer the full benefit of the tariff to which he is entitled. The American farmer will not be fooled by Secretary Jardine's attempts to blind them.

After eight years of republican opposition and hostility in the White house, it is too late now for republican publicity agents to try to change the record.

THE FAKED FIDDLE

Sometimes it does seem as if it hardly paid a man to struggle after the truth.

Joseph Brennan, of New York, had a violin—an heirloom handed down by his grandfather. Brennan, for years, prized it highly. It bore a label with the name "Guarnerius," and Brennan's life was made contented and happy by the thought that this fiddle was a masterpiece—an instrument worth probably $100,000.

But Brennan the other day decided to seek the truth. He went to an expert. And the expert cruelly told him that his violin was a fake, and not even a very good fake, worth perhaps $100 at the most.

Now the violin, instead of sweetening and brightening his life, is a source of unhappiness and regret.

However praiseworthy the pursuit of knowledge may be, Brennan would be far, far better off if he had continued to take the superlative excellence of his ancestral fiddle on trust.

CURTIS, THE INDIAN

Senator Curtis's political swing-around-the-circle of the Indian tribes is a dramatic event. It means that the Sioux, the Blackfeet, the Cheyennes, the Crows and the Osages are ready to take their places as citizens.

If they bring the same idealism and philosophy and knowledge of living to our civilization that they held in their old tribal lives—before they were polluted by white men—they will have much to offer.

Incidentally, it is to be hoped they learn more about us than we seem to be able to learn about them. The Associated Press persists in speaking of Curtis's Kaw grandmother as an Indian "princess." There never was such a thing as a "princess" in any Indian tribe. All our tribes were pure democracies.

WILL ATTEND CHURCH MEETING

The district convention of the Christian churches of the southeastern Nebraska district will be held at Plattsmouth on Tuesday and a very large number of the members of this faith from this section of the state will be in attendance. The local church will have a good representation at the meeting as Rev and Mrs. H. L. Grassmuech are to represent the clergy, Mrs. Hal Garnett, church, Mrs. J. R. Stine, the Sunday school and Miss Helen Stout, the Christian Endeavor society. The members of the party will enjoy a picnic dinner at Plattsmouth and take part in all of the proceedings of the meeting which includes the churches of five counties.

W. C. T. U. RESOLUTIONS

We wish to express our gratitude to the Father above for all our past blessings and to ask his guidance for the unfinished task before us.

To express our appreciation to all who helped make the program of 1928 a big success.

To our County president, Mrs. Joe Wiles, for her untiring efforts, and to our State president, Mrs. Clayton for her presence and her fine talk to us.

We also express our appreciation to the W. C. T. U. of Union for their hospitality and the bounteous dinner served us also to the church for opening her doors to us.

To the singers and all others who rendered any service for our convention.

Signed—
MRS. FRED H. GORDER,
MRS. E. H. WESCOTT,
EDITH F. SHRYOCK,

Not because it is new—but

WE DON'T urge you to buy RED CROWN ETHYL GASOLINE because it is new and different—or just because we sell it. We believe you will like it better than any gasoline you have ever used.

It is a combination of always-reliable Red Crown Gasoline with Ethyl Brand of Anti-Knock Compound, and gives every motor smoother operation and more power. The ideal fuel for the new high compression motors, Red Crown Ethyl Gasoline eliminates gas knocks and loss of power in motors that are carbonized—actually uses the high compression carbon causes to develop more power. Costs more by the gallon but less by the mile. Give it a thorough trial in truck, tractor and passenger car.

From motors with ordinary compression, you get quick starts, strong acceleration, all the power you need and big mileage per gallon from old reliable Red Crown Gasoline, the balanced gasoline. Uniform, dependable, economical—Red Crown Gasoline keeps a good motor on its good behavior.

For economical and constant motor efficiency, buy gasoline and oil where you see the Red Crown Sign—the sign of quality products and prompt, courteous, obliging service everywhere in Nebraska.

These two Quality Fuels meet all Motor Needs

DISMISSAL FROM MIND FOR JUST A MOMENT

Dismissal from your mind for just a moment all silly and unfounded fears about the prohibition enforcement in event of democratic victory, and ask yourself this question: Shall we be so blindly diminutive in our souls, so ungrateful in our hearts, so meanly derelict in our duty as to conspire with our hereditary enemies to surrender all that is near and dear to us, and utterly forget the hard-fought victories of our forefathers to make this a white man's government?
