Barth is Re-Arrested on Murder Charge

Burlington Agent Facing Second Degree Count—Manslaughter Case Is Dismissed

Wahoo, Neb., Oct. 2.—Conrad Barth, Burlington special agent, held in connection with the death of Gordon Grigor, seventeen year old Cleveland youth, was rearrested here this afternoon on a charge of second degree murder, following the quashing of manslaughter charges against him this morning in district court.

Grigor was killed beneath the wheels of a freight train at Ashland, Neb., last July 12, when he and his companion, James Berwald, eighteen also of Cleveland, were routed from a box car by Barth. A chase, with the agent, according to witnesses brandishing a sap, resulted in young Grigor climbing to the top of a box car. In the alleged struggle that followed the boy fell beneath the train.

Judge H. D. Landis ordered the manslaughter charges dismissed, saying the evidence was insufficient to hold Barth. County Attorney C. F. Galloway of Saunders county then filed murder charges, declaring that considerable new evidence had been uncovered.

THE FASHION SHOW

It is gratifying to know that a number of Plattsmouth's leading merchandising establishments are now making ready for the second great style success from every point of view, it naturally follows that the experience gained by, and the encouragement received from, will be the strongest factors in making each succeeding style show still greater and better.

This is precisely what the people of Plattsmouth and vicinity may expect without taking a chance on being disappointed.
