Religious Societies Lose Out in Will Contest

Will of Miss Carrie Countryman Is Set Aside in Lancaster County Court Friday

Probate of the will of Carrie Countryman, former Cass county lady, who gave most of her wealth to the American Bible society and other religious organizations, was denied by County Judge Reid, at Lincoln, Friday afternoon. Brothers and sisters of Miss Countryman, who had an estate of around $15,000, claimed she was not competent to make a will. Judge Reid declared in denying the probate that the woman was not, in his opinion, mentally competent to make a will.

It was claimed by the contestants that Miss Countryman had for a number of years been mentally affected and Dr. Miles Breuer testified that she was not competent. Dr. W. D. Guttery, who said he had written a book on insanity, testified that Miss Countryman was not a paranoiac as was claimed by the contestants. Later, in answering a hypothetical question, he said that if the condition afflicting a person were such as the attorney outlined in the question, the person would be a paranoiac.

In the final argument the attorney for the contestants read symptoms from the doctor's book to prove that Miss Countryman was a paranoiac. He claimed that the book, written before 1923, could not have described Miss Countryman's condition better than the doctor had done in his book. It was claimed that her delusions over religion caused her to refuse to consider the claim of her brothers and sisters in making a will. The Lincoln Trust company was appointed administrator.

WRITES FROM HOSPITAL

Immanuel Hospital
Omaha, Neb., Jan. 11.

My Dear Journal—
Since I cannot manage to speak to you, I have to write. Since the work of the air will not carry off words, I am to unload them on paper.

Like the burro of the mountain states, paper is patient and accepts the lead of sense or nonsense, which I have upon it with patience. I have been here in this quiet place over a month. Even the New Year was quiet. The rustling of the elevator the distant cry of a baby or the definite orders of some physician and the quieting response of a nurse are the only sounds I hear. Besides the wind howls outside and the splashes from time to time in the fountain in the hall.

Over four weeks I have been here. Finally the plaster cast has been taken off my foot. The fractured bones have pressed together and have mended by compulsion. No regard was taken of muscles, of tissues, of flesh or skin. Now the muscles are stiff and joints move slowly and muscles and tissues have to take new life. In time of lesion they have taken on colors of green and black and blue. Thousand of little parts have to return to what nature meant them to be.

That takes time.

"You cannot preach next Sunday, pastor," the verdict of the Dr. said. "Oh no, maybe a week later."

But release is in sight.

I can sleep better after the cast has been removed. After four weeks of nervousness, I am sleepy and drowsy and lazy.

I am satisfied with the verdict. If I should go now I would be a burden to some one. A week from now I shall be better able to move. I am thankful for these weeks of forced vacation. They showered waves of sympathy, of kindness over me. It is a singular pleasure to know of so many kind people who think of your suffering. It shall be more than that to see their kind sparkling eyes again, to nod to them, and being nodded to, and waved and smiled, and even shake hands with them. The human heart is over hungry for these things. Auf Wiedersehen.
O. S. WICHMANN.

Creamery Has Large Output of Butter

Churning on Last Regular Butter-making Day Brings 1,000 Pounds of Butter.

From Friday's Daily—
The Cass County Co-Operative Creamery & Produce Co., at their new plant in this city are gradually increasing the output of the delicious CasCo brand of butter, as the demand for this splendid creamery product increases and finds a ready market among those who appreciate the very best of butter.

The churning at the plant resulted in 1,000 pounds being turned out under the skillful hands of Phillip Hoffman, buttermaker and manager of the creamery and which was of the finest quality.

The machinery of the plant will, Mr. Hoffman states, be able to handle 1,200 or 1,300 pounds of butter at each churning, but this somewhat taxes the capacity of the machinery and the output is held at the 1,000 mark at each operation of the plant.

The plant is kept spot and span and after each operation of the churning the vats and churn and all parts of the equipment used in the buttermaking is subjected to the most rigid cleaning and kept in the most sanitary condition and to fully realize just how much effort is made to keep this plant in the pink of condition at all times, one must see the actual care that is given by the management to the upkeep of the plant and the buttermaking equipment.

HERMAN DETTMAN AT ELMWOOD

Herman Dettman and children and families of Imperial, Neb., who were here last week visited a short time with relatives and friends before returning home. He wishes to express his sincere thanks to the many Elmwood friends who so kindly assisted and also with the many words of sympathy and floral offerings extended them in their hour of sorrow because of the death of the wife and mother.

Perhaps there is no man who ever lived in Iowa who is better known in this community and county than Mr. Dettman. Having been in business for a good many years here he was naturally well acquainted with everybody. Mr. Dettman likes it at Imperial, where he has made his home for a good many years and where he has his hands and the interests. He says that many times his friends stop when they are passing that way and he always enjoys a visit with all who come his way.—Elmwood Leader-Echo.

Wm. F. Moran Dies at Nebraska City Thursday

Widely Known Nebraska Attorney and Democratic Leader Succumbs to Long Illness

The death of William F. Moran, dean of the Otoe county bar, occurred yesterday at the St. Mary's hospital, following an illness of some months and in the last few weeks of which the recovery of the patient was practically given up.

Mr. Moran was born in Wheeling, West Virginia, January 19, 1864, and has been a lifetime resident of Nebraska and Otoe county as he was brought by his parents to Nebraska City when but five years of age.

The funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. Saturday at the St. Mary's Catholic church at Nebraska City.

His life during his earlier years was that of the typical Nebraska farm boy. He attended the Otoe county district schools, read a great deal in his odd moments, managed to get enough money together to attend Peru Normal School, taught school in the county for several years, and then entered Campbell College, Holton, Kas., from which he graduated in 1890. Then he came to Nebraska City and studied law under the brilliant Thomas B. Stevenson. He was admitted to the bar in June 1893, at once entered in on a practice which was both varied and successful.

Soon after his admission as an attorney, Mr. Moran formed a partnership with the late William C. Sloan. Sloan retired after a few years and Mr. Moran carried on alone until recently when his son, Edwin, University of Nebraska graduate, stepped into the office as his aide and partner.

In Politics Early

Mr. Moran interested himself in politics almost as soon as he could vote. His early years as a political leader were with the Populist organization, potent with picturesque in Nebraska life. Later, when the People's Party had performed its mission and seen many of its reforms adopted, Moran joined the Democratic organization and has been a staunch defender of its principles through victory and defeat. He was in his contributions to the party, looked upon as a counselor and frequently was a candidate for office. He had served several times as county attorney, had been mentioned as a likely candidate for district judge, and for nine years had been city attorney, working at the task right up to within the last few days of his life. He had attended many Democratic national conventions as a delegate, served on important committees and his advice on party problems had been eagerly sought.

Mr. Moran was always interested in fraternal organization work. He was active in the Knights of Pythias, holding a charter member of the Eagles, holding many offices; had long been prominent in the Elks. He was a member, of course, of the Otoe County Bar Association, one of its officers. He had a great interest in his public work, was a forceful speaker and when he addressed a jury, especially in criminal cases, was always able to draw an audience. He was a member of St. Mary's Catholic church.

A Diligent Worker

A hard worker, close student of his business, willing to take part in any community activity, Mr. Moran had undermined his health through his work for various organizations and for his profession. For two years in spite of warnings that he must relax to a greater extent, he had persisted in "carrying on" when exertion meant sacrifice of health.

Mr. Moran was married in Chicago, in September, 1895, to Miss Maude L. Canada who survives. She is the daughter of a famous early day Otoe county sheriff, William T. Canada. Three children also survive: Edwin Moran, Nebraska City; Miss Gertrude Moran, New York City. All were at the bedside when he died. There are three brothers, John R. and Andrew P., Nebraska City, James Moran, Lincoln; and one sister, Miss Ellen Moran, Davenport, Iowa.
