Senator Reed of Missouri, says rum is sunshine. It has always been moonshine, so the metaphor is unanimous.

Mr. G. Hog must have gotten mixed up on his months this year, and came out on January 2nd instead of February 2nd.

We are more convinced than ever that prohibition is an effeminate reform. Senator Borah had to have the last word.

The Nebraska legislature is now well organized and under way. It is sincerely hoped the going will be good all the way.

A headline in the Kansas City Star, "Jury Hears Conrad Hug," prompts the newspaper to ask if that is a new kind of necking.

One thing that seems even shorter than woman's skirts and hair is the time you are allowed to park in the only place you can find.

The recent honors heaped on the inventor of the airplane are enough to make any man feel that he'd rather be Wright than President.

Owing to the fact that Lindbergh has announced his engagement, Omaha girls can take it easy now and do more looking around at home.

A lady on trial in New York says she can't remember shooting her husband. Goodness! She should have tied a string around her finger.

The man who says we do not have any more of the old time winters, like the ground hog who sees his shadow has crawled back out of sight.

We hope Colonel Lindbergh, who is fishing off the Florida coast, catches a few flying fish to show the fishish expert when he calls on him.

Hattiesburg is to have a $200,000 moving picture theatre. Alternating between revivals and movies is the principal occupation of the people in Hub city.

A health authority warns that currency is covered with germs. Possibly this explains the reason for the editor's good health.

The opinion of those Standard Oil stockholders seems to be that perjury isn't naughty if it doesn't interfere with dividends.

A woman automobilist tried to run down the traffic cop at the corner of 16th and Farnam street the other day, but he gave her the slip.

The farm relief organizations are rounding up their work with the certainty that some time this year a measure will be passed in their interest.

We may expect future wars to be deadlier and more expensive if the outlawry of war has the same effect on them that prohibition has had upon liquor.

About the only names not noticed thus far in the lists of those Hoover will probably appoint as cabinet officers are Harry Baugherty and Albert B. Fall.

There seems to be some trouble about fixing the valuation of railroads. However, when they get into the hands of the receiver no such questions arise.

Henry Ford says the day will come when capital punishment will be a thing of the past. We also have noticed that the old models are rapidly disappearing.

Coolidge doves have gone out of style; at least they are not to be found on marriage licenses. The doves disappeared about the time women were granted suffrage.

The president of an eastern university says college girls spend $300 a year for their clothes. And the bad thing about it is that they get so little for their money.

SECRETARY KELLOGG'S NOTE

In moving to reach a satisfactory agreement with the League of Nations which will protect the rights and interests of the United States and open the way to our participation in the Permanent Court of International Justice, Secretary Kellogg is attempting a thoroughly practical and efficient effort to promote peace and civilization.

The Senate reservation which the majority of the nations in the League declined to accept does not offer an insuperable obstacle to agreement. It is the fifth reservation, which forbids the Council of the League to seek an advisory opinion from the Court on any question in which the United States may claim an interest. The objecting nations think that this gives the United States too much power to restrict the action of the Council. They say that the United States could exercise this right of interference in such a way as to make it a practical veto. There is undoubtedly ground for the objection.

Mr. Kellogg suggests that an informal conference might lead to the formulating of a reservation in such a way as to protect all the vital rights and interests of the United States and at the same time be unobjectionable to the League members.

Although the State Department has denied the report that Mr. Elihu Root, who has gone abroad ostensibly to participate in deliberations looking to the revision of the Court's protocol, is a formal representative of the Government, yet it is understood generally that he will endeavor to forward the object that Mr. Kellogg has in mind. He consulted with the President and Secretary of State before leaving, and the purpose of his visit is in line with the object of the administration.

The accomplishing of the object of Mr. Kellogg's note would supplement the treaty outlawing war. It would do much to give practical effect to that treaty because it would make the United States a participant and a supporter of the World Court, the international tribunal which is charged with the legal settlement of international disputes, and with the codification, interpretation and application of international law. It offers the strongest hope for the substitution of reason and law for the sword in settling differences between the nations. It is permanently working to establish a higher civilization among all the nations.

If a reasonable formula for protecting the rights and interests of the United States is devised, it is difficult to see how the Senate can reject it. It has approved the multiple treaty outlawing war as a national policy, and it cannot logically reject a reasonable proposition for the participation of the United States in the work of a court designed to adjudicate disputes which might lead to war.

The Senate has changed since the days of the rule of the irreconcilables who would not listen to any proposal to put the United States into either the council of the court, established by the international covenant of peace and the League of Nations. The number of irreconcilables in the Senate has been reduced, and several have changed their views. There is now ground for hope that reason will prevail in the Senate's attitude and action.

It is gratifying to note that the Coolidge administration, after prolonged inactivity, is moving practically towards the active participation of the United States in organizations designed to maintain the peace of the world. Mr. Coolidge could not find a finer achievement in the cause of peace than that of leading the United States to co-operation with the nations in assuring the success of the international court. It would be a long step toward further co-operation with the League of Nations.

At the recent dinner of all New England Brawn clubs, Charles Evans Hughes told this tale to adorn a moral. An athlete, greater in brawn than in brain, carefully chose his courses so that the strain might not be too heavy. In due course of time, he, and kindred souls enrolled in Semester 2, the leading cinch course of the curriculum. All went well until the midway exam. Then the athlete was stopped cold by the paper before him. In desperation, he scribbled this note to be passed to one of his satellites in the back of the room: "For God's sake, who was Jehovah, and what did he do?"

T. Gilbert Pearson, president of the National Association of Audubon Society says the last he heard, only a few of the Bok nightingales remained alive, "and one or two may persist until Spring, when we may hope they will burst into song." If they do, it will probably be more due to their desire to bear Mr. Coolidge out than to endorse the climate.

HAIL PEDESTRIAN!

A Federal district judge, who must have been struck by an automobile some time in his career, has finally got in his revenge. He has established definite rights for the pedestrian when crossing a street.

"When a pedestrian steps from the curb to cross the street, having a green signal with him," this judge ruled recently, "he does so by way of invitation, and he cannot be charged with contributory neglect if the signal switches when he is in the street. Caught in this position, the obligation rests upon the motorist not only to observe the situation, but to wait until the crossing is clear."

What a glorious victory for the jaywalker! Now he has the law on his side all the way, defying the law when the red light or the traffic sign was against him. For him or against him, everything's in his favor.

Yet we motorists can't afford to overlook the importance of the pedestrian's rights, whether he's right or wrong. That's a paradoxical statement, but it seems to be a paradoxical fact that the pedestrian has rights even though he may be wrong. So we must respect them, both ways.

In a way it's no more than proper that some definite decision was made concerning the pedestrian. Many an old person, guided only by the traffic lights, has found himself stranded in the middle of a main street with automobiles coming at him from both directions. Many an accident has occurred as the result of this bewildering situation. Therefore it is necessary to advise the pedestrian in this predicament as to just what to do.

Let him walk right on—the law is with him.

But let him beware of the driver in a hurry—law or no law!

THE TREASURY OF BORAH

The prohibition prophets are beset by bitter doubt, one fear, as they ponder the almost heretical concession of Mr. Borah that the eighteen amendment may possibly "be a mistake." They of the true faith know that this law is pure as the silver purity of the stars, that it is a legislative Holy Grail, that here Vox Populi is indeed Vox Dei, that he who wavers in his devotion is not of the stuff of concern consecration.

True, the man from Idaho has welded a brave and shining lance against the Saracens, but just the same, his spirit is not fortified with the sublime conviction. Recall your Machiavelli: "He who is an object of suspicion is no longer guiltless."

PUBLIC AUCTION

There is the germ of treason in his soul. He is potentially capable of betraying the cause. So don't be surprised if the Royal Academy of Westerville eventually prop Borah's portrait on Poe's "Cash of Amotillado" and condemns him to sit forever in canvass along with Benedict Arnold, our American wrestling trust and the "black Sox" of baseball infamy who throw the World Series in the "yellow-splashed October of 1919."

Next Monday is the 4th of March, and a new president steps in.
