AUTOMOBILE HORNS

The city of New York has begun a campaign under a law which makes unlawful the unnecessary blowing of horns and other sound-making devices that are unnecessarily loud or harsh, and thus inaugurates what may be a national crusade. Let us at least hope so.

In the early days of automobiles, when the world was in the horse and buggy age a horn was an absolute essential. Today, in most cases, it is used by drivers in lieu of brakes and thus it is not only annoying but extremely dangerous. Many drivers today dash through a populated district without abating their speed one bit, sounding their horns almost continuously so that they may take the right of way by reason of their insistence and their recklessness.

The difficulty is that many drivers think that the sounding of a horn is the mark of a very careful driver and is to be commended rather than condemned. Such, however, is not the case, for the good driver is so careful himself and has his car so constantly under control, that he has absolutely no need of a warning signal. If he is approaching a dangerous intersection he does not sound a long blast on his noisemaker, but approaches the crossing at slow speed and makes certain that it is safe to proceed before he does so.

Car drivers need education in this regard. Civilization today is noisy enough without the incessant and irritating squawk of auto-horns. Let every driver join in the movement to abate the nuisance.

THE ART OF LOAFING

Remarking on the art of loafing, President John Grier Hibben at the Princeton opening simply played a modern variation on the old theme. "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." Only Jack probably went about his loafing in a simple, untutored way which did not permit him to get the benefit which comes thru indolence properly directed.

To do nothing gloriously, to sit on a sunny bank and "watch the snails whiz by," is a glorious prospect to the mind, especially when it is weary from the monotonous, not overhopeful grind. But that is not the kind of loafing which was in the thought of President Hibben. Aimless dawdling, while beneficial to a certain length as a measure to permit recuperation from fatigue, bodily or mental, is an ideal way to invite the accumulation of rust which encumbers thought and to render difficult getting back into the harness.

Constant, unvaried endeavor leads to brain fog rest, with change, is a weariness to the flesh, constant loafing is a disease and, moreover, a deterioration of the mind and a poisoning of the spirit of man. Substitute work for study and the application is made wider.

One looks eagerly for announcement of a new course in loafing at Princeton. It is not found. So one must develop one's own technique. Which might well occupy the first few available hours of idleness. That occupation, indeed, might not be far away from applying the art of loafing.

THE GERMAN WAY

A friend, late returned from a tour of Germany, asserts that no disfigurement of the beauty of German highways is permitted. These ways are lovely, and they are so kept.

Order, tidiness, are German cardinal virtues. There is, we are informed an almost entire absence of unsightly advertisements in towns and villages or on the roads leading to them; the open country is left undisturbed by billboards & posters on farm buildings. Conditions are maintained in the alluring and picturesque way of the olden time—the remote from the hectic day of a commercial competition which has prostituted the mountain trails, the sylvan ways, the pastoral loveliness, even the skies and clouds in America with vulgar announcements of this or that excellence on superiority in the way of commodities which would be supposed to appeal to the public need or its vagrant desire.

The walks among the hills and mountains around the German towns are said to be ways of delight where the beautiful points of view are preserved from this modern contamination.

The German thought has been cultivated, it is said, to a consideration for the welfare of the countryside in a sensible way; and what is encouraging and gratifying is that every inhabitant appears to feel it to be an obligation to assist in the maintenance and safeguarding of beauty of this character and to take a commendable pride in such action.

Premier MacDonald has made himself very popular with the people of America. Evidently he is a wonderful man. And daughter Isabelle has won herself a home with all visitors if she wants to remain.

The Arab uprising in Palestine with consequent massacres of Jewish people has created a new problem for Great Britain which holds the mandate. But world problems are not new, and this is but one of them.

WOMEN ASSAIL TARIFF

Senator Capper's belief that the present tariff revisor will be judged by its final effect on the retail prices of sugar and shoes is enthusiastically supported by Anne O'Hare McCormick in an article "The Tariff—Can We Afford It" in the current issue of the Woman's Journal.

"All tariffs come down at last to the prices of sugar and shoes," Mrs. McCormick says. "And not only our own sugar and shoes. The high protectionists argue that we pay too low a price for imported sugar . . . if thereby we put . . . our sugar growers out of business. Yet perhaps we pay too high a price for domestic sugar if thereby we ruin the major industry of the neighboring island of Cuba . . . and destroy the buying power of one of our best customers."

The writer again cites sugar as an example of doubtful wisdom in tariff making: "It (tariff) preserves the American wage level and the American standard of living by adding at least two cents a pound to the cost of sugar in order to build up a home industry based in many states on Mexican peon labor.

"Read recent reports of conditions in the Colorado sugar beet fields where a Mexican family of six, the youngest six years of age, works from nine to fifteen hours a day for eight months or $600, and at night shares one room in a horrible hovel with a similar family."

Voicing a fast widening realization that "tariff is primarily a woman's issue," Mrs. McCormick sums up the intensive interest that women have recently demonstrated in tariff-making:

"Tariffs, once you extract them from dreary pigeonholes in House bills and Senate bills, lead to the most exciting excursions and explorations. The bi-partisan committee of women recently formed to scrutinize the proposed rates as they touch the consumer has already discovered how the most technical and elusive items are domesticated at last and land inevitably in the household budget. When you come down to cases, tariff is primarily a woman's issue. Woman is the ultimate consumer. It is her business to balance earning power and buying power and fix the levels of living."

The Consumer's Committee to Investigate Living Costs is almost undoubtedly the "bi-partisan committee of women" to which Mrs. McCormick refers. It is only one factor, however, in a concerted action of women against the Hawley-Smoot Bill that has been gathering momentum during the past few months. The Republican Business Women, Inc. of New York City, representing 500 members of 110 trades and professions, have sent a resolution to all Republican members of Congress protesting increases in tariffs that will raise the prices of food and clothing. The Non-Partisan Fair Tariff Committee, speaking through its treasurer, Mrs. William Swan, stated last week that "Although women constitute more than 80 per cent of the ultimate buyers of the country, the fact has been ignored by both houses of Congress."

The influential National League of Women Voters has tariff on its study program. Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin, National Chairman of the Living Costs Committee, declared: "The question is so intimately linked up with the household budget that no intelligent voter, either a man or woman, can ignore it. We found a surprisingly satisfactory response throughout the country."

Another nation-wide women's organization, the National Housewives' League, has voiced its attitude thru its president, Mrs. Julian Heath, who calls for "a merger of house wives to protect with economic foundation of the American Home." The Women's National Civic Organization is represented on the Non-Partisan Fair Tariff Committee by its president, Miss Ella T. Sullivan.

Woman's attitude toward tariff legislation is well summed up by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the governor of New York, in an interview in the New York World, when she declared that unless the American public becomes more actively interested in its own welfare than it has in the past, the increased tariff will be a reality. Said Mrs. Roosevelt:

"Adding $1 to every 100 pounds of sugar is not where we will feel the tariff most. It is the way the manufacturers will so unpleasantly conscious of a higher cost of living. Those manufacturers who face an increase will not only charge the public an added sum, to take care of the tariff, but they will avail themselves of the opportunity to tack on a still bigger fact, it will be the large manufacturers who will benefit most, the middle and lower classes who will suffer most. The very rich can go ahead and pay big prices."

PROFESSOR AT FAULT

Dean Max McCann of Lehigh University declares in the current North American Review that the American college professor himself is largely to blame for the prevalence of students who range football games and fraternity dances above their studies in importance.

Too many professors, says Dean McCann, are more concerned with their own research work than they are with teaching. As a result they spend most of their energy on their own pursuits, and their classes get dull and boring.

In such circumstances, the student is hardly to be blamed if he concludes that his studies are unimportant. No teacher of real ability ever found himself unable to hold the eager attention of his students, no matter how pressing were the competing demands of athletics and the collegiate social whirl.

Harry Sinclair wrote to the newspapers to say that there was no sinister purpose in having that jury shadowed. Probably merely an interesting bit of research work of the Smithsonian Institution?

There is plenty of candidates for U. S. Senate in Nebraska. Some of them are not dry enough behind the ears to go so far away from home.

The Gasoline Multi-Motor

Farm Homes Need the SPEEDY MAYTAG

OUT on the farm where washings are big and time is valuable, the Maytag is especially appreciated.

The Maytag Gasoline Multi-Motor is interchangeable with the electric motor by removing only four bolts. Fifteen years' development has brought the Multi-Motor to a high state of perfection. Bronze bearings, flood-proof carburetor, Bosch high-tension magneto and speed governor, give it a smooth flow of reliable power. A thrust of the foot pedal starts it.
