Directors of Farm Bureau Discuss Fee

Market Act Still in Experimental Stage, Thompson Says; Chicago Meeting On.

Chicago, March 20.—Directors of the American Farm Bureau federation went into quarterly session Thursday to discuss recommendations made by executives of the various state farm bureau federations.

It was understood the directors would take no steps not definitely approved at the last convention of the federation, although some board members reported a growing sentiment in the organization for the equalization fee in farm relief.

A. J. Olson, president of the Minnesota State Farm Bureau federation, Renville, Minn., said sentiment in Minnesota is strong for the equalization fee provision, which was not included in the agricultural marketing act.

Favor Equalization. "In a general way, he said, 'farmers back home feel that before this marketing act will work satisfactorily, the equalization fee will have to be applied. The sentiment prevails in my own organization and in other groups as well. Some of the groups which did not favor the McNary-Hatgen bill now are strong for the equalization feature.'

Sam H. Thompson, president of the national federation, declared the directors would not discuss any question about the farm board.

"A month ago," he said, "the organization pledged its support to the farm board and we are wholeheartedly behind Chairman Alexander and the board members in their efforts to carry out the marketing act. When the act was being debated by federation agreed to suspend the equalization fee and took the position that if a better way could be found, the new plan would be considered on its merits.

Had Little Time. "In the few months the farm board has been in existence, it has scarcely had time to give the thorough test to the marketing act. This board is entitled to."

"The farm bureau federation has not abandoned the equalization fee," said William H. Settle, president of the Indiana bureau, "but it is not pushing it."

Settle is a member of the executive committee of the Farmers' National Grain Corp.

Both he and William C. Spargo, president of the New Jersey bureau, declared the federal farm board needed more time to demonstrate the effectiveness of the agricultural marketing act.—Omaha Bee-News.

FINE MEETING

Pleasant Ridge Community club met in regular session Friday evening at the school house in Dist. No. 41.

The evening's entertainment was a district school and the unruly boys and girls certainly kept the schoolmaster busy, even the arrival of the school board failed to show how proficient they were.

The evening's entertainment was put on by Gordon Wilcoxen and John B. Kaffenberger.

Miss Margaret Anne Pitz favored the audience with one of her splendid readings and we hope to have the pleasure of hearing her again.

With good weather and good roads the school house was filled to capacity.

Pleasant Ridge Community club meets the third Friday of each month. Try to attend our next meeting, as the latch spring is always out.

Care of Disabled Persons Real Problem

Education of Injured to Permit Them Taking Up New Lines of Endeavor in Life.

The increase in disease and accidents growing out of the massing of people in communities and the introduction of machinery into industries and agriculture has created an alarming situation despite the splendid achievements of the organized safety movement.

The total number of accidents occurring annually has grown steadily. Both the state and national governments have tried to prevent accidents through the enforcement of safety codes.

In 1928, twenty-four thousand persons were killed at work in the industries of America. In that year, one hundred and thirty-five thousand workers were permanently disabled through industrial accidents.

During this same year, seventy-two thousand persons were killed by motor vehicle and other public accidents and one hundred and forty-four thousand persons were permanently disabled through such accidents.

Organized statistics on persons disabled by disease are not available but in the year 1928, a total of two hundred and eighty thousand persons in our country were disabled by accidents.

Distress follows rapidly in the path of accidents and disease. Often families find themselves without bread winners and without means of support. Children must be taken from schools. Wives and mothers must find employment outside the home.

But, personal distress is not the only result for industry, the community and the state are deprived of the services of thousands of skilled workers.

In 1920 the federal government undertook to promote a program for the rehabilitation of disabled persons. National legislation provided that the states could use proportionate amounts of a one million dollar appropriation if they would pass similar legislation and appropriate like amounts of money for the conduct of the work. Forty-four states and the District of Columbia are now co-operating with the federal government in this great program.

State rehabilitation departments employ staffs of trained persons to analyze the problems of the disabled and to assist them to make satisfactory readjustments in remunerative employment. With some, it is simply a question of finding new suitable employment; others must be trained for new work and some must be provided with artificial appliances.

The only objective of the vocational rehabilitation service in each case is the placement of the disabled person in remunerative employment at a job he can do in spite of his physical handicap.

Since 1920, forty thousand disabled persons have been returned to self-supporting employment by this joint program of the state and federal governments. They were fitted for 500 different kinds of occupations.

For the past forty-two weeks, an accident study which is being conducted by the Nebraska Press Association and this department covering all accident notices which have appeared in Nebraska's more than 400 weekly and daily papers shows that Nebraska accidents in this period have disabled almost four hundred people.

The Nebraska rehabilitation service in eight years' time has succeeded in re-establishing four hundred disabled persons at a cost of approximately $200.00 each. At the present accident rate, we are disabling in the state in one year as many persons as can be re-established by this department with our present funds in 8 years.

The rehabilitation of disabled persons must be expanded to meet this great economic need. H. R. 10175 now pending in Congress calls for an extension of the present rehabilitation act and continuance of the present appropriation of one million dollars by the federal government.

In the light of our present knowledge of a peace time disability rate from accidents which exceeds our World War disabilities, it is imperative that federal appropriation for this purpose must be increased.
