STATE BANKERS TO OMAHA

Omaha—Nebraska bankers will gather here Thursday to discuss means and ways of curbing bank robberies in the state.

The protective committee of the State Bankers association will discuss more stringent means of preventing robberies and stricter punishment in case of capture of the bandits.

Among the ideas brought out by Omaha bankers are larger rewards for captures and a well equipped and enlarged state police force.

William B. Hughes of Omaha, secretary of the association, Tuesday night said that among the measures to be discussed were a $3,000 reward for dead bank robbers; creation of a state police or constabulary equipped with every known device for speeding after and capturing bandits; passage of a "Baumes law" providing for life imprisonment after three felony convictions and the improvement of present alarm systems.

Howard O. Wilson, vice president of the Livestock National bank of South Omaha, is chairman of the committee. Other members are Hughes, Charles E. Wood, chairman of the Talmage State bank, and R. H. Barber, vice president of the Fort Kearney State bank of Kearney.

UNDERGOES OPERATION

September 17th Anniversary of the Constitution

President General of the Daughters of the American Revolution Writes of Adoption.

Through the courtesy of the Plattsmouth Evening Journal, Fontenelle Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, are printing the following article for "Constitution Day," written by the President General N. S. A. R., Mrs. Lowell Fletcher Harbart.

The 17th day of September marks the 143rd anniversary of the birth of the constitution of the United States, and, although assailed and attacked continuously by "conscientious objectors" of all stripes, it remains standing solidly as the rock of Gibraltar, a sufficient proof of its soundness.

On the 17th day of September, 1787, thirty-nine American patriots affixed their signatures to the document under which this nation has developed into the happiest and most prosperous country in all the world.

September 17th should be proclaimed a legal holiday throughout this great land, so that all may be reminded to pause and contemplate with reverence and appreciation the service rendered the nation and its people by those great patriots, and to honor the national charter itself.

Just what is this mystic document which was so ably prepared by these founders of a new government? "It is a simple, plain, practical, plan of government, made," as Robert Morris said, "by plain, honest men." It consists of a preamble, seven articles and nineteen amendments. In style it is clear, concise, and direct. It is not ambiguous and vague; it is not flowery and ornate; it speaks in simple, everyday language, practical, definite, and to the point. It indulges in no fine-spun theories about the science of government, nor does it expatiate on the type of government it outlines. It settles immediately on sound, fundamental specifications.

The constitution is broad, comprehending the whole plan of our government; but it is brief, merely an outline, the "core and law" leaving details to be supplied by statute. The original constitution contained less than one hundred sentences. With its amendments it does not exceed over seven thousand words, and it can be read in half an hour. However, more than four million were consumed in writing the constitution, while it required almost a year to have it ratified by the various states and another year to establish the new government. It has long been considered the greatest document of its kind in history.

Tempests of political strife, emotion, and passion have beaten in vain against our great constitution. It has successfully withstood every test of time and circumstance. Let us hope that the American people will continue to uphold its principles and ideals and safeguard it against the new radical attacks that are being made against it, and attempts at its subdivision.

Constitution Hall was erected by the Daughters of the American Revolution to symbolize the fact that this organization has not out-grown the constitution, that they do not consider it archaic or outworn.

I cannot agree with those who proclaim the constitution "older and more out of date than the oldest cotton gin." Such slanderers of this masterpiece should move on beyond our borders into countries whose governments offer that desired "newer and brighter prospect for human happiness," that different "freedom" which they speak, and allow loyal and satisfied citizens of this country to enjoy the happiness, freedom, and protection which has been made possible by our own constitution.

Let us remember what Lincoln said: "Continue to execute all the express provisions of our national constitution, and the Union will endure forever; it being impossible to destroy it except by some action not provided for in the instrument itself." The time has come when all should be put to the test of either subscribing to constitutional doctrines or admitting disloyalty to the United States. The constitution must survive, the government of the United States can properly function by public indifference to the constitution, the "core of the law."

Let us awaken anew to the benefits which we derive from the constitution, and let us all thank God for providing us with the talent of those thirty-nine great statesmen who were responsible for the document. Let us pray that we may always be able to defend it against its most vicious attackers, so as to preserve "The Land of the Free and the Home of the Brave."

ATTENDS D. A. R. LUNCHEON

From Wednesday's Daily—Mrs. L. O. Minor of this city was a guest this noon at the luncheon at the Hotel Fontenelle at Omaha, given by the Omaha chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The luncheon was given in honor of the 143rd anniversary of the signing of the constitution of the United States, an event that is being observed by the D. A. R. in all parts of the country today.

Farm Price Index is Sent to Low Ground

Department of Agriculture in Report Says Level is Below Record Hit in 1921

Washington—A 3 percent recession of farm prices from July 15 to Aug. 15 was said Tuesday by the department of agriculture to have sent the farm price index below the lowest level reached in 1921. This decline followed a sharp break in the farm price level the preceding month. As of Aug. 15 the index was 108 compared with 111 on July 15, with 123 on June 15 and 143 a year ago.

From Aug. 15 to Sept. 10, however, price advances at primary markets outweighed declines, although cotton and wheat failed to maintain their gains into the first part of September. The gains have been most noticeable in hogs, cattle, potatoes and butter, the department said.

"While the drop between June 15 and July 15 was general for practically all farm products included in the index," the department said, "there were some advances between July 15 and Aug. 15 but not sufficient to offset the downward trend in other commodities. All grain and hay prices averaged higher on Aug. 15 than on July 15, reflecting the drought conditions.

"Hog prices advanced on a lighter volume of marketing and prices of eggs, butter and wool also advanced from their very low levels in July. But considerable declines took place in apples and potatoes, which because of light crops in 1929 had not declined to the same extent as other commodities earlier this year, and beef cattle and sheep and lambs declined to new low levels. The farm price of cotton was also lower by half a cent a pound on Aug. 15."

Wheat prices continued at a low level, with some prospects of improvement in the demand for wheat before the end of the season. At present, prices were described as depressed by increases in estimates of production in the United States and Canada, and shipments from Russia, in the fact of a world wide financial and business depression.

The department termed the price of wheat low compared with price, adding that it seldom happened "that a bushel of corn can be sold for more than a bushel of wheat."—State Journal.
