BIG BUSINESS AHEAD

That the period of the greatest business the world has ever known is just ahead of us and that the development of that business will proceed just as rapidly and just as far as trading restrictions between countries permit it to proceed is the opinion advanced by Walter Parker, economist, of Orleans, in a summary of world conditions just issued.

"Given adequate purchasing power, industry, commerce and finance are now in the best position they have ever been to foster and develop world trade quickly and on a record-breaking scale," he says.

"There is abundant capital. Surpluses, except in some raw commodities, have been greatly reduced. Economic readjustments have taken place in every direction. The practical means of utilizing credit to the full have been developed, particularly in the United States by the Federal Reserve System," are some of the reasons given for this encouraging prophecy.

"The whole world believes the destiny of the United States is prosperity," says Mr. Parker.

The report goes on to point out that last year the income of the people of this country was ninety billion dollars, exclusive of increment, a sum far in excess of that of any other nation in the history of the world.

In the process of our economic development, our backsets, however severe, have always paved the way for permanent good. Mr. Parker declares. "Last fall, during the severest value decline, particularly in point of scope, this country has ever known, there was no money stringency. The call money market having become an efficient method of quick large volume financing."

But as individuals as well as business, agriculture and industry, we, in this country, must learn to think in terms of world commerce, world economy, and world psychology, and, as a nation, we must develop our foreign markets in the following three ways, Mr. Parker declares.

"To sustain its prosperity, the United States must produce a surplus, and it must sell that surplus abroad. To successfully compete with Europe, it must produce a better and better product at a cost reflecting greater and greater economy.

"To assure adequate overseas markets, the United States must use its great power and wealth in aiding overseas markets to develop ever growing outlets for the products they have to sell. Those products, seeking manufacture must come to the United States in ever increasing volume.

"Whatever practical, backward races need to be helped in their efforts to develop a greater earning power and a greater need. All backward races, and these number a billion or more people, now feel an urge in that direction and are in a better position than ever before to take advantage of opportune help."

Looking ahead the most competent analysis see a gradual industrial recovery and then a long period of highly prosperous business, the report continues.

In all probability a period of the greatest business the world has ever known is not far ahead. That development will proceed just as rapidly and just as far as trading restrictions between countries permit it to proceed, Mr. Parker believes.

PROGRESS AND FADS

With much being made of science in business the counsel heard here and there that the craze for modern methods can defeat its own purpose is often viewed as out of tune with the times and reactionary. And yet the plain truth is that in many cases the effort to be scientific at all costs results merely in gathering together a mass of data, some of it relevant but most of it valueless.

The trouble is that too many business men are eager to renderlip-service to what is new or to what is considered efficiency. They have little idea of what they are striving to accomplish to begin with, and they wind up after a lot of misdirected energy and expense with little or nothing to show for it. It is small wonder, then, that real scientific progress in business makes such small headway.

This fault of lip-service does not hold, of course, for all, but it is far too common for the welfare of business. And the tragedy of it is that the many enterprises addicted to it are actually having more trouble with their imitation services and products than if they operated on the old time lines.

Too much that is called progress is not progress at all but merely a change. We as a nation are getting into the dangerous habit of deceiving ourselves into believing that every new thing is a step forward.

A FEW WORDS OF TRUTH

Former Gov. Smith of New York has effectively silenced the Republican politicians, big and little, who have been whimpering about the unfairness of the Democrats in charging the Republican party with the responsibility for the business depression. No intelligent man believes any such thing, and no responsible citizen, so far as we know, has made any such charge. The position of the Democratic party was stated by Mr. Smith in his Providence speech with characteristic clarity and honesty. He said:

"I do believe, and I don't believe that any Democratic leader in this country believes, that the Republican party is responsible for the depression. We have too many brains. But we do blame the Republican party for promising a continuance of prosperity when they knew they couldn't do it.

Everybody knows that the Republican party has plumed and paraded itself as the party of prosperity. Its accredited leaders have preached that doctrine so long that many of them, like the eminent Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, have talked themselves into believing it. And they have persuaded a majority of the American people that the election of a Democratic candidate for President means hard times and the election of a Republican good times.

Never was this argument more smugly, arrogantly and successfully employed than in the campaign of 1928. Never was a candidate arrayed in such a regalia of superlatives as was Mr. Hoover. He was presented as the "miracle man" of our political history, equipped as no predecessor in the office ever was to guide the nation to new heights of plenty. Mr. Hoover accepted the magician's role.

The myth is now exploded. Whether partisan sophistry can put Humpty Dumpty together again, we don't know. It has frequently done it. We have had panics under previous Republican administrations, though none so protracted as the present and none so devastatingly disillusioning. That Mr. Hoover is open to criticism for his deportment during the depression cannot fairly be denied. He has made optimistic forecasts which events, unfortunately, have not fulfilled. Statements have been made by his Cabinet officers which, in the extent of unemployment, for example, have not squared with the facts, and in other instances have been more rosy than real. That he has done, and is doing, all that he can do, according to his philosophy, to relieve distress and hasten the return of prosperity, goes without saying.

But there can be no question that the Republican party conducted its campaign two years ago on false pretenses, and its blunder, or its sin, has found it out.

Mr. Smith has told the truth. The man has a rare talent for truth telling. It was this talent, plus his administrative skill and political sagacity, that made his governorship of New York a record of memorable achievement. His few words in the Providence speech are the outstanding utterance of the present campaign. A plain, simple, truthful utterance, but, as the Baltimore Evening Sun observed, "it took Al to say it."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

American cigarettes have become so popular in France that the French Regie, the state-owned organization which controls the manufacture of all tobacco products in France, has just put on the market a new cigarette identical in size, shape and appearance with popular blends in the United States. Removal of harmful irritants which includes the use of ultra-violet rays has resulted in a tremendous increase in the production of cigarettes in the United States and official government figures so far for 1930 are well in advance of the mark for the corresponding period of 1929. The new French cigarette is advertised as an "American blend" and will sell for 6.50 francs, or about 27 cents, which is the price of the ordinary American 15 cent package of cigarettes in France. It is evident that French smokers, like American are demanding modern methods in the manufacture of their short smokes.

AMERICAN CIGARETTES POPULAR

Down in Kansas City a merchant named Lee Muchenberger, shared a belief somewhat current throughout the country that business would be better if people would only spend more money.

Unlike a lot of business men, however, Muchenberger had the courage of his conviction, all the way up to the hilt.

To prove his theory Muchenberger went to the bank, drew out $1,500 and proceed to give his employes $30 each on condition that they go out and spend it immediately.

It made business better, of course, among those merchants where the money was spent. The chief trouble is that the other business men in Kansas City did not follow the example.

A man who walks five miles while playing a game of golf kicks his head off when he has to walk three blocks from a parking space to his office.
