Parasitic Flies

Save $100,000 Peach Crop

Scientists Turn Insect 'Thieves' Into Orchard to Catch 'Thieves'

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 24.—A few thousand dollars' worth of parasitic flies saved almost 100 thousand dollars' worth of peaches in Connecticut this year.

This bit of scientific news, issued at the Connecticut agricultural experiment station today, forecasts a possible curb to the peach scourge that has covered much of the United States east of the Mississippi river, the oriental peach moth.

The Connecticut saving was from the ravages of this moth, which is responsible for most of the wormy peaches.

The flies are the latest chapter in the scientific version of setting a thief to catch a thief, one of the most effective of all crop protections.

Attacks Eggs.

The parasitic flies were developed by nature, but man's strategy arranged the unusual success of the Connecticut campaign. Two kinds of flies were used, which, so to speak, caught the moths both coming and going. One band robbed the moths' eggs; the other their young.

Attack on the eggs were made by trichogramma, a fly so small that it is almost invisible. It bores holes in peach moth eggs and through them inserts its own eggs. From such eggs no moths at all are born, but only trichogramma.

The other flies, macrocentrus, are much larger and lay their eggs on the bodies of the peach moth larvae. This allows the larvae a chance to do damage, but not very much, for presently the cocoon out of which a peach moth should emerge sends forth macrocentrus, which like the tiger has the moth inside.

Live Flies Shipped.

These two types of parasitic flies were sent to 140 Connecticut orchards which a year ago lost 200 thousand dollars from the peach crop. The trichogramma was distributed in the form of about four million eggs on cards which were hung in peach trees to hatch. About 12 thousand live macrocentrus flies were shipped.

The director of this experiment is Dr. Philip Garman, assistant entomologist. He says he wishes to be pessimistic before offering predictions, and to try the flies for one or two seasons more, "just to make certain that nature in some manner unbeknown to science may not have added some special conditions of her own which partly account for this year's success."—World-Herald.

Urge Congress Pass Waterway Funds Quickly

Resolutions of Association Ask Five-Year Program Be Pushed Ahead—Dawes Is Re-Elected

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 25.—Resolutions adopted by the Mississippi Valley association at its closing session today call on congress to provide "by direct appropriation or other suitable financial arrangement" the funds needed for completion of the association's five-year program of major waterways.

The association re-elected W. R. Dawes, Chicago, president; Thomas F. Cunningham, New Orleans, La., vice-president-at-large, and Richard S. Hawes, St. Louis, Mo., treasurer.

Speakers named 100 million dollars a year for five years as the amount needed to insure success of the program, but the resolutions do not name a definite sum and do not carry the suggestion of a federal bond issue, which is favored by some of the association's leaders.

Unemployment Is Cited.

Present conditions of unemployment are cited in the resolutions as one of the reasons why the plan, if it had been adopted by congress last year, would now be of great benefit.

"We urgently call on congress," the resolutions say, "to consider if it did not err in 1929-1930, when although increasing appropriations for inland waterways it still fell far short of arming its engineering and construction forces with money and authority to proceed adequately and efficiently with the five-year program."

"We desire again to petition and advise congress that the highest interest, not only of the region for which we speak, but of the country as a whole, demand that the inland waterway projects, approved in principle by congress, be completed where physically possible within a maximum of five years."

Back Illinois System.

Congress is also asked to end the "apparently unnecessary delays" in the waterway program, which 20 million dollars has been spent by Illinois and for which congress has authorized the expenditure of $7,500,000, to provide a connecting link between the Mississippi valley system and the great lakes.

MISSOURI DEVELOPMENT

The committee reaffirmed its last year's position that vital parts of the waterways system, to be improved with least possible delay, are "the main lines north and south from a point as far west as the archduke canal from New Orleans to New Orleans, and connecting waterways, and east and west from the up-rivers, such as the Ohio and Lake Erie canal, and the great Kanawha and the Tennessee and Cumberland; up the Missouri to Sioux City and as a point as far west as a satisfactory channel can be secured; the intracoastal canal from New Orleans to Corpus Christi, Tex., the interoceanic canal eastward from New Orleans, the Alabama-Coosa, the Arkansas river and the Red River."

187 Known Dead, Hundreds Hurt in Japanese Quake

Tokio, Nov. 26.—An earthquake stratched a belt of death and destruction across the northern part of the beautiful Izu peninsula early today with a toll of dead and injured mounting steadily as fragments of the disaster story emerged from the stricken area.

The governor of Shizuoka prefecture, which includes the Izu peninsula, announced the quake dead to be at least 187, while the number of injured was likely to bring the total casualties to nine hundred.

Other sources indicated the toll might mount much higher. An accurate tally of the dead was impossible owing to the destruction of communications.

Fires Follow Shocks.

The chief of police at Numazu reported 165 dead in the Numazu police district alone, including 37 killed at Shimada, eight miles southeast of Mishima.

The fate of a large portion of southern Izu was still undetermined, while reports from such important centers as Atami, Ito, Nagasaki and Shuzenji were meager.

Although first reports, designated Mishima as the center of the quake zone, that railway junction appeared to have suffered less than resorts to the southward. At many places fires followed shocks, greatly increasing material losses.

Climax of Series.

At the village of Nakazato, near Mishima, 20 persons were killed and 50 injured. At another nearby village, Numazu, one was killed, one injured and fire broke out.

The quake apparently was the climax of a series which have been felt recently on the northern part of the Izu peninsula. The Mishima region has experienced an average of three hundred minor shocks daily since November 10, including a fairly severe quake yesterday afternoon.

The Tokio central observatory recorded the quake as beginning at 4:03 a. m. (1:03 p. m. Tuesday, C. S. T.) and quickly reaching a dimension of 40 millimeters. The seismograph continued to record shocks for 30 minutes.

In Resort Area.

The Izu peninsula is noted for its centers of popular resorts. At Atami, a famous geyser, dead since the earthquake of September, 1923, resumed activity.

The Izu peninsula projects southward from the principal Japanese island of Honshu, Nagoya, one of the peninsula's largest cities, lies at the northwestern base of the peninsula, while Shizuoka, another large city, is at the opposite side. Nagoya is about 150 miles southwest of Tokio, while Shizuoka lies about one hundred miles from the Japanese capital.

JURORS ACQUIT ARCHDUKE

New York.—A jury Monday night acquitted Archduke Leopold of Austria of a charge that he attempted grand larceny when he authorized sale of a Napoleon necklace, the property of his great aunt, the Archduchess Marie Theresa. The Austrian nobleman, in certain circumstances an heir to the Hapsburg throne, which fell during the latter part of that country's participation in the World war, was cleared by the American jurors of the first of charges against him in about four hours of deliberation.

The defendant stood unmoved as he heard the verdict. Judge Bertell ordered bail continued for the archduke on another indictment charging the actual grand larceny of the necklace. The verdict clears the archduke of a charge of having been present on Feb. 11, last, when Col. Charles L. Townsend and his wife sold the necklace for a low price to David Ziffer, a Jew who intended to remove the diamonds and sell them separately.
