Highway Program to Cost Over a Million

Measure in Congress Would Add $1,750,000 to Expenditures in Nebraska

State Engineer Cochran said Saturday night that public construction projects calling for expenditures of approximately $1,241,000 will be undertaken in Nebraska within the next few months. Most of these will be advanced to provide additional employment.

If Congress adopts a measure now in its hands for immediate advancement of federal aid funds to the states for highway construction, Mr. Cochran added, $1,750,000 more will be available for furthering congressional employment relief plans.

If this extra money is allotted to the state, about 250 miles of paving, 500 miles of graveled highways and the necessary bridges will be built.

The largest of the projects will be completion of pavement between Gretna and Ashland—the last unit in the Omaha-Lincoln highway, a fourteen mile gap—and incidental construction of a new right of way near Gretna. Also called for is a new bridge over the Platte river south of Gretna. The bridge is to cost $150,000. Immediately after it will be started. An overhead crossing at Columbus is to cost about $250,000 and one at La Platte will require about $65,000.

An 800 foot overhead crossing at Fort Crook will cost about $125,000. Both this and the crossing at La Platte will cross federal highway No. 75, main traveled highway from Omaha to Kansas City. Railroads, together with federal and state governments will finance the program. Another huge crossing is proposed for Grand Island on the Lincoln highway over the Union Pacific tracks. It will cost about $125,000. Proposed one cent addition to the gas tax would enable the legislature to materially expand this program, Mr. Cochran said.

PRESENT FINE PAGEANT

From Monday's Daily—

Last evening at the worship hour at the First Methodist church was presented a very beautiful and impressive pageant appropriate to the Christmas season. "Why the Chimes Ring." The story was of a great cathedral whose chimes ring. The story was of a great cathedral whose chimes were to ring only by the giving of the perfect gift. Kings, of great wealth, seers and scientists brought their gifts in vain and it was with a child with two pennies, his sole possessions came with his gift that the bells pealed forth and the chimes mingled with the voices of the angels in rejoicing.

The various characters in the story were well taken by the members of the church and Sunday school and made a most impressive presentation of the story and with appropriate scriptural readings by the pastor, Rev. C. O. Troy.

The beauty of the production was enhanced by the special lighting effects of the platform and which was arranged by W. F. Evans.

Mrs. E. H. Wescott, director of the choir was in charge of the presentation and also was heard in one of her very beautiful solo numbers, during the progress of the pageant.

MEETS WITH BAD LUCK

From Monday's Daily—

Late Saturday night a young man, giving the name of Orville Norton and his home as Nebraska City, arrived here from a sojourn in Omaha and had evidently partaken too freely of the distilled spirit of the corn. He was having difficulty in retaining his car after having stopped here for a lunch, and at this time Officer David Pickrell came along and escorted the young man to the city jail to rest up from the overindulgence and to save himself as well as the public from his driving on the highway in his condition. Sunday morning Judge C. L. Graves was called to his office and held a short session of police court as the young man wished to be released and accordingly he was given a fine of $10 and costs for the offense and being able to travel was sent on his way.

The Meaning of Christmas to All the World

Sermon Delivered by Judge James T. Begley at the St. Luke's Church Dec. 21st

Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea, in the days of Herod the King, beheld there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem, saying: "Where is he that is born King of the Jews? For we have seen his star in the east and are come to worship him." When Herod the king had heard these things, he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him, and when he had gathered all the chief priests and scribes of the people together, he demanded of them where Christ should be born. And they said unto him, "In Bethlehem of Judea." "For thus it is written by the prophet, And thou Bethlehem in the land of Judah art not the least among the princes of Judah for out of thee shall come a governor, that shall rule my people Israel." Then Herod when he had privily called the wise men, inquired of the diligently what time the star appeared. And he sent them to the young child, and when ye have found him bring me word again that I may come and worship him. When they had heard the king they departed, and lo, the star, which they saw in the east, went before them, till it came and stood over where the young child was. When they saw the star, they rejoiced with exceeding joy. And when they were come into the house, they saw the young child with Mary his mother and fell down and worshipped him: And when they had opened their treasures they presented unto him gifts: gold, frankincense and myrrh.

Thus in a conquered province of the Roman Empire in a city of oppressive name to a woman and a man of the lowliest station, a man child was born, and they called his name Jesus. His life was to be brief, but thirty-three years from the manger to the cross. An exile in childhood, executed in the flush of manhood as a malefactor, yet he was to be immortal among men. He was to found a kingdom and acquire fame that would endure when Rome's stately monuments and costly palaces should become dust. All men were to be his subjects. Yet he was never to command an army, lead a charge, or storm a fortress. Violence was to have no place in his establishment of his dominion. He was to spill no blood. His empire was to be founded by sacrifice but the sacrifice was to be his own life. Only his own blood was to be shed. The quality of his soul was to be his only weapon. But with it he was to destroy Paganism, overthrow idolatry and set the bondage free. He was to redeem the human race and win immortality, not for himself alone, but for all the sons of men. Through him whosever would, throughout all the centuries was to have eternal life. His life on earth with the exception of his exile in childhood, was confined to Palestine, a little country forty-five miles wide by 145 miles in length. The east and west had not been met. Each nation and each community lived unto itself with no means of communication or intercourse except by courier or messenger, through long, slow, fatiguing journeys. He possessed neither name nor wealth, nor place, nor influence. In material possessions he was poor, poorer than the birds or foxes. They had nests and holes, but he had not where to lay his head. He went mostly among the common people; and many days of his brief ministry were spent upon the highways and in the fields. He knew the sound of the hills better than the halls of state.

How impossible it seems that one born of such parentage, in such a land, of such a race, amid such an environment, and in such times, should in three brief years of teaching and ministry, set in motion moral tides which should sweep all people, change the laws of all nations and overturn the altars of all religions. And how unbelievable that such an one, writing no word and speaking only to ignorant fishermen who could remember but little of what he said, should acquire fame that should obscure the geniuses of all time, draw in his train inhabitants of all lands, and link with himself all human hopes and destinies. Even the benefactors of the race who are known are soon forgotten. Neither marble nor bronze; Nor brush nor chisel, nor the art preservative itself, can perpetuate their names or make their deeds to the passing succeeding multitudes. Only this manner child has been able to triumph over oblivion, and achieve enduring universal fame. To Him has been given a name, "That is above every name," and because his personality was greater than his environment, he alone is loved, adored and worshipped everywhere in America, Europe, Asia, Africa and the farthest islands of the sea.

To satisfy ourselves that Jesus is worthy of the place he holds in the affections of mankind, we have only to note his influence upon human thought, institutions and affairs. He was not a physician. Yet he cured the sick; cleansed the unclean; made the maimed whole, caused the deaf to hear and the blind to see; he has created a spirit of compassion in our modern world. He was not a lawyer. But he knew the principals that abide. And with the passing years the principles he declared are finding lodgment, more and more, in the hearts and minds of men. Statutes are bulldied, and constitutions are founded upon them. He was not an author. So far as we know, he wrote no word other than a single line in the dust of the ground which disappeared within the hour of its writing. But the gospel he preached, written out by others, has survived the vicissitudes and cataclysms of the centuries.

The successful author is able to reach but comparatively few of the world's population. Only the exceptional work is translated into foreign languages but the words of Christ have been published throughout the world in 77 languages and dialects. From the day of his birth he has had a part in all literature, in all story, in all history, and in all song. Although not widely known as an orator, the literary work of his discourses are incomparable. They grip the moral faculties of all. They speak to the elemental, universal soul. He knew every form and aptitude of human speech; illustration and imagery, epigram and metaphor, parable and allegory, simile and symbol. He understood every human passion, and could have played upon them all. But he only spoke to the better angels of our nature. He was neither poet nor musician. But for 19 centuries he has inspired the world's greatest music. But for Him the symphonies of Mozart, the melodies of Schubert, and the harmonies of Beethoven would have found no expression, Mendelssohn's "St. Paul" and his "Elijah," Hayden's "Creation," Handel's glorious "Messiah," and his "Israel in Egypt," would have forever gone unvoiced and uncomposed. Without him the wealth of literature which now enriches the world could not be. Neither Milton nor Pope would have spoken, Dante and Shakespeare would have remained dumb, Tolstoy and Browning and Longfellow and Whitier, would have had no vision and found no voice. Emerson and Carlyle, Bacon and McCauley, and Hugo and Lowell would have left no message. Paul and Luther and John Wesley would have had no mission. The great Christian hymns would have remained unwritten, there tines uncomposed. Without Him there would be no "Coronation," "Nearer My God to Thee," "Rock of Ages," "Jesus Lover of My Soul," or "Lead Kindly Light." No glorias; no hallelujahs; no peans of praise; no Te Deums of Thanksgiving; no sonnets of consecration; no odes of devotion. The race would be spiritually bankrupt. Jesus was not an artist. He never painted a picture or carved a piece of statuary in all his life. But if all that he has inspired were taken out of the art galleries of the world, there would be little left of the great masters, either old or new. But for Him, Raphael would have been visionless, Michael Angelo without genius, Murillo, famous. There could have been no "Enunciation," in fact art and Hoffman's "Christ in the Temple" would have found no canvas.

He was not an architect. But in a little more than 19 centuries the world has been filled and enriched with a multitude of architectural forms of marvelous combinations, dedicated to his worship. Church, temple and cathedral, the Sistine Chapel in the Vatican, St. Denis Cathedral in Paris, St. Sophia's in Constantinople, St. Paul's in London, St. Peter's in Rome, attest the draught he has been upon the architectural genius of the race.

He was no statesman. Yet no statesman of any age or any nation has so widely, so profoundly, or so ably influenced the affairs of state or the destinies of nations, or so moved the destinies of the world as he. His rule and dominion will be the same. "For unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace." Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end.

Oh, holy child of Bethlehem, Descend to us we pray, Cast out our sins, and enter in, Be born in us today.

We hear the Xmas Angels, The great glad tidings tell: O come to us, abide with us, Our Lord Emmanuel.

This morning Santa Claus made his formal entry into Plattsmouth and was received by a large crowd that numbered into the thousands as the genial visitor that represented the spirit of the holiday season made his way through the main part of the city to the lodge which was arranged on the court house lawn.

Viewing with the Santa Claus in the interest of the little folks was the reindeer that were used in the hauling of the sleigh of Santa, he having with him, Dancer, Prancer, Blitzen and Vivien, to haul the sleigh, the reindeer being attended by an Eskimo family of man and wife and little Eskimo boy.

The children begin assembling near the court house long before the hour set for the arrival of Santa and by the time that the parade was to form there were hundreds of the children cheering and playing on the lawn and patiently awaiting the arrival of Santa and his force.

The parade formed at the American Legion building and moved south on Sixth to Main street and thence east on Main street to the Burlington and then counter marched to the court house.

Chief of Police Jess Elliott headed the parade on a white charger and followed by the car containing Mayor Sattler, E. A. Wurt, president of the retail section of the Chamber of Commerce, F. M. Bestor, the treasurer and F. P. Busch, the secretary. The high school band under the direction of B. E. Preceding the sleigh of Santa Claus came the guard of honor, comprising the elected representatives from the schools of the county and who were given the added honor of being welcomed in the enclosed space where the lodge was located.

After greeting the guard of honor, Santa proceeded to greet all of the children and also to distribute candy remembrance to the little folks.

In the handling of the affairs Dr. O. Sandin, as director of the parade with J. H. McMaken, James Begley, Jack Troop and Francis Libershal, proved real workers.

The message was received here this morning by Albert Timmas, announcing the death of his mother, Mrs. Rosina Timmas, which occurred last evening at San Francisco where she has been making her home with a daughter at that place for the past year. Mrs. Timmas was not in the best of health for some years. The deceased lady was an old time resident here and had a very large acquaintance in the city who will regret to learn of her death. A more extended sketch of the life of Mrs. Timmas will appear later in the Journal.

Death of Mrs. Louis Keil at an Omaha Hospital

Well Known Resident of This Part of Cass County Dies After Long Illness

From Monday's Daily—
Last night at the Lutheran hospital at Omaha occurred the death of Mrs. Louis Keil, well known resident of this portion of Cass county and who has been in failing health over a period of some ten years, but in the past few weeks has been in very critical condition, little hope being given for her recovery.

Mrs. Keil was formerly Miss Christine Schroeder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jorgensen Schroeder, and at the time of her death was nearing her forty-fifth birthday, she having been born on February 9, 1886. Her parents came to this county and settled in the vicinity of Cedar Creek where they have since made their home and where on January 30, 1905, she was united in marriage to Louis Keil, a member of one of the pioneer families of this part of Cass county. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Keil continued to make their home on the farm until a few years ago when they moved into this city and have since made their home here. In her childhood Mrs. Keil was baptised in the Lutheran faith and has since been a member of this church. She is survived by the husband and one son, Carl, and a foster daughter, Miss Thelma Johnson, the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jorgensen Schroeder of Cedar Creek, three brothers, Peter Schroeder of South Side, Omaha, George and Hal Schroeder of Cedar Creek and one sister, Mrs. Mary True, of Cedar Creek. One sister, Anna, preceded her in death.

In her residence here Mrs. Keil has made many friends who share with the members of the family circle the grief that her passing has occasioned and in the circle of her acquaintance she will be greatly missed.

The community Christmas carols at the First Presbyterian church on Sunday afternoon were attended by a very pleasing number of the residents of the city. The event was under the leadership of Mrs. Robert Reed as chairman of the committee and Miss Cora Williams as the director of the singing. Mrs. H. F. Goss played the accompaniments on the pipe organ of the church.

The devotionals of the afternoon were led by Rev. H. G. McCluskey, pastor of the church.

The quartet composed of Miss Catherine Schneider, Miss Cora Williams, Frank A. Clodt and L. O. Minor gave a very beautiful number, "In the Silence of the Night" while James Begley, Jr., one of the youthful musicians of the city was heard in the Christmas song, "Night of Nights."

The entire audience joined in the singing of the Christmas carols and whose beautiful musical message brought tidings of the coming of the King of Kings and of universal rejoicing.

The Smith Brothers Co., which has the contract for the laying of the natural gas line for the Consolidated Construction Co. across the Missouri river at this place, will employ barges in the work of battling with "Ole Man Ribber" and placing the pipe line under the waters of the uncertain and tricky Missouri.

The contract for the work has been let to the Lyman-Richey Sand & Gravel company and whose employees will at once start work on the construction of the new barges to be used in the work of laying the pipe across the river, sinking the various lines and anchoring them to the bottom of the river.

The placing of the pipe line on the river bed is a real piece of engineering work and one that has attracted national and international attention, all of the leading papers having carried articles on the work and a commission of the Soviet government of Russia having been here for the purpose of inspecting the work.

Civil War Vet Clears Mystery of Skeletons

90-Year-Old Veteran Tells of Mormon Colony Deaths from Smallpox in 1849.

Jobe F. Jones, one time resident of Mills county, now at the Iowa State Soldiers home at Marshalltown, a veteran of the civil war and now ninety years of age, has apparently cleared up the mystery of the finding of skeletons in graves south of Council Bluffs.

On Wednesday, Mr. Jones en route to Plattsmouth to visit a brother, stopped in Jewett, where these human bones were found, and talked with officials. Mr. Jones, the son of Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Jones, was born October 14, 1840 in Muncie, Ind. He came the same fall with his parents, who located in a little settlement called Birchler on the Nishna river near where the town of Hamburg now stands. The family resided there until 1848 when they came to Mills county and located on Waubesa Creek.

During the winter of 1849, Mr. Jones recalls that with his parents and a Mormon woman who was a servant in their home drove overland to transact business in the government land office in Kanessville, a small settlement which later became Council Bluffs. He recalls that along the hills just where these human bones were recently found, there was a settlement of Mormons, about 400 in number, living in dugouts along the hills. This was a group of Mormon people, who were pressing on toward the promised land in the wake of Brigham Young.

Mr. Jones recalls that he saw a number of human bodies piled on the ground on the top of one of these hills awaiting burial and that the bodies had been divested of all clothing, as clothing in those days was too scarce and hard to secure to permit the burying of clothed bodies. Preparations were being made to bury all of these bodies in a common grave and Mr. Jones wanted to press up the hillside and visit the Mormon camp but was persuaded not to do so by the Mormon girl who worked for them, as she explained that there was an epidemic of some contagious disease which had caused so many deaths in the camp, and explained that in her experiences in traveling and living with the Mormons in their westward march she had encountered four such epidemics and that the bodies of ones killed to pass around on the outskirts of the camp. He said they later found that the girl had been correct and that smallpox in a violent form had taken a heavy toll of life in this little Mormon settlement that winter where without adequate burials and proper housing facilities the death rate was heavy. Mr. Jones therefore believes that in the disinterment of these human bones, the unwritten book of the early day history of this country has been opened on a chapter of sorrow and tragedy which will be read in the hearts of those who read this little Mormon settlement on the hills northwest of the present town of Glenwood just 80 winters ago.

Mr. Jones enlisted in Company F, 15th Iowa regiment which was organized at Keokuk, March 19, 1862, and which was composed of men largely from Mills and Fremont counties, and served with the Union forces until the close of the war. Mr. Jones, while in Glenwood, visited Comrades A. D. French and Earl Hodges and enjoyed visiting with the older resident concerning events here and there three quarters of a century ago. Despite the fact that he is past 90, Mr. Jones retains his physical vigor, enjoys good health and is able to travel about alone.

ALUMNI GAME FRIDAY
The alumni of the high school, who have in the past played on the blue and white basketball teams, who are here or can reach here by Friday evening, will participate in a game with the 1930-31 Platters, the old timers, to see how good their condition may be as well as to give the locals a good working out. In the tentative lineup of the alumni will be Ed Wescott, "Bun" Galloway and Ralph Mason of the 1928 class, Geo. Rebal of the 1927 class, Joe Hartard of the 1929 class and Roy Turner of the 1936 class.

The game should be a pleasing treat for the fans and give the opportunity of viewing the former stars of the years gone by.

MRS. D. A. YOUNG BETTER
From Monday's Daily—
The many friends over the county of Mrs. D. A. Young, pioneer resident of this community, will be pleased to learn that this estimable lady is now showing some improvement. Mrs. Young is at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Guy White in this city and has been cared for by Mrs. White and Mrs. Lawton, another daughter. The trouble of Mrs. Young seems to be clearing up and it is hoped the effects will soon pass and Mrs. Young be restored to her former good health.
