It's never too late to spend. Money doesn't talk until it gets big.

That step to success isn't a side-step. It's fine to begin at the bottom if you don't stop there.

Many a man with a laugh coming doesn't see it until it is gone.

Men who long for the old days would hate to go without socks.

Suggested sales slogan for farmers overstocked with wheat: "Say it with flours."

Keep out of trouble. It is very disconcerting to learn how few friends you really have.

The prices of diamonds were cut in half in Amsterdam recently. The way of all flesh!

Any good car would last five years if there were on telephone poles along the highway.

The hardest thing about lying to your friends is it makes you think they are lying to you.

Many a chicken has crossed the road to give us an object lesson in the peril of jay-walking.

Senator Borah is urging an extra session of Congress, but he argued the President into this once.

Maybe it's too much to expect lame duck sitters to vote against lame duck sessions.

Experience is a fairly good teacher, but her pupils usually need a post-graduate course.

It must be nice to be rich and keep the grocer satisfied with a promise to mail him a check.

"The past," says Carl Sandburg, the poet, "is a bucket of ashes." Yes, the scene has shifted.

Since worry makes one bald, what a pity man can't worry with his face instead of his head.

John Ringling, circus man, has taken a bride. And now skeptics are saying he hasn't got a show.

Some of the citizens of Omaha who started the New Year with a lot of hip, hop, horray are now seeing green hippotami.

Senator Hefflin wants to stop trading in stock margins, and we've begun looking around for the fellow who hasn't.

An alcohol denaturant that makes the consumer sick without killing him will take his mind back to the good old days.

According to reports, some people's liberality to the church is exceeded only by their liberality to the bootlegger.

The magnet road sweeper used in Oregon to clear highways, picked up 13,870 pounds of metal on state highways last year.

Sinclair Lewis' motto, judging from his utterances abroad, seems to be: "Every day and every way I am growing bitter and bitter."

Sinclair Lewis declares that American professors like their literature "very dead." They have always favored rather grave reading.

A western farmer claims to have found a dime inside a hen's egg. That's the first live stock of the year to pay a cash dividend.

What has become of the old-fashioned woman who went over popular novels? Oh, she's out in her car bending other people's fenders.

Secretary Hyde is trying to stimulate the use of corn sugar, and he can't claim he isn't getting plenty of co-operation from the home-brewers.

There's a youngster in our neighborhood who has his father's eyes, his mother's mouth, his grandfather's hair, and a voice like the family auto horn.

It has been decided that chewing gum is not a food. From the amount on chairs used by the happy steno we suspect it is a building material.

A traveler just back from Greenland says there is no unemployment problem among Eskimos. It seems they are always doing a whale of a business.

Chile being one of the few South American countries where a revolt has not been pulled off seems to be making efforts to get into the general class.

Someone has said that Adam got into trouble because he had too much time on his hands, so even in Eden the eating of apples was due to unemployment.

There used to be a quaint idea that the successful high school student was he who graduated with honors; now it's the shifty runner who gets bids from the big football colleges.

A POSER FOR MR. STIMSON

In the course of 1930, with its frequent revolutions, our recognition policy has suffered some abrupt alterations. Woodrow Wilson's principle that we should not recognize a Latin-American Government which came into power by violence has been lost in the maze of political coups to the south of us.

Panama's strange case is a poser. Washington had specifically warned opponents of the Arosemena Government that revolution would not be tolerated by the United States.

But revolt has become so general in Hispanic America, and our rigid principle so flexible, that a headstrong group of Panamanians took the bull by the horns, revolted, succeeded.

A way out of the dilemma may come through the action of the Supreme Court of Panama, which declared Arosemena's election void—very sensible, since he is in jail—and called the Panamanian Minister to the United States as the de jure President.

Spiritualists tell us that Sir Conan Doyle is trying to get a spirit message through to the earth. Not a chance!

The conviction grows that those investors who got stung buying at the top of the market are just waiting for an opportunity to buy at the top of another market.

Conditions may return to normal despite the fact that legislatures in 43 of the 48 states are to hold regular sessions this year.

With things going like they are, about all that's needed to make Mr. Hoover jump in the lake is a rumor that Al Capone has been entertaining the Wickersham Commission.

One New Year resolution we have decided upon is not to write any editorials about conditions in China.

Mrs. Mabel Willebrandt's transition from chief enforcement of prohibition laws to counsel for California grape juice is the greatest liquid performance the world has witnessed since Gertrude Ederle swam the English Channel.

A Los Angeles poetess who belongs to one of those queer cults so common on the Pacific coast has just married the sun—Perhaps she was looking for an unusual combination—a red-hot husband who won't stay out at nights.

The first through airplane from Los Angeles to New York arrived eleven minutes late. Probably the delay was caused by some California passenger stopping at a refueling point to tell about the glories of California climate.

Motorists throughout the United States may look forward to a good year, for current activities of state highway departments and other governmental organizations indicate that 1931 will equal if not exceed the record construction of 1930.

Major Clarence M. Young, Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Aeronautics, just has announced that the scheduled airline lines of the United States carried more passengers during the first six months of 1930 than during the whole of 1928.

In some ways this is a funny world. Al Capone, who has horns and cloven hoofs as far as most of us are concerned, now steps forward as a great humanitarian, providing free meals for some thousands of jobless Chicagoans daily.

PANAMA'S FAMILY ROW

Panama has added another to the lengthening list of Latin-American states which have gone through revolutions since the beginning of 1930. Harmodio Arosemena has been elected from the presidency of the Supreme Court has proclaimed Dr. Ricardo J. Alfaro, Panamanian Minister to the United States and first designate, President.

Like others in the Republic, this revolution has been an overturn of public authority carried through in a short time and with few casualties. (To be exact, there were eight men killed.) Like them, too, it has been practically confined to the capital.

It could hardly be otherwise, for along the famous "10-mile strip" row known as the "zone," and chiefly at its two ends, are concentrated the only groups of population living on a standard of life approaching that of European civilizations.

On the Atlantic side there is Colon, which has about 30,000 inhabitants, and on the Pacific side the city of Panama with about twice as many people. Outside the Canal strip there are 450,000 people in the Republic.

The concentration of the national life, economic, social and political, in the two main towns, identifies not only Panamanian revolutions but all Panamanian activities with the Canal strip.

In these days of three-room apartments another old-time custom that has faded out of the picture is that of borrowin' a cup of sugar or a couple of eggs from the neighbors.

Getting in the rumble seat now gets even more and better results than getting under the mistletoe used to.

Women getting into politics hasn't improved the country as much as having cookbooks become the best sellers would.

There is a lot of bunk about this talk of how a girl used to entertain her beau with the family album—when the old folks retired they weren't any more interested in the pictures of the family than young couples now would be.

It isn't until after the honeymoon that an average groom wakes up to the fact he isn't making enough to be able to afford a wife.

One of nature's greatest mistakes, it sometimes seems, is that she didn't make the tongue more frail, so it would tire quickly.

Do college girls really enjoy smoking, or do they indulge in seances with My Lady Nicotine merely to appear sophisticated?

The latter theory is probably true in many cases. Here is a conversation alleged to have taken place between two college girls at home for holidays:

First Co-Ed: "Is anybody looking?"

Second Co-Ed: "No."

First Co-Ed: "Then we don't have to smoke."

THE HOPE FOR 1931

Business conditions throughout the entire world will show a decided improvement by the end of the year course is clear. If Alfaro returns to lead the way, this is the prediction of Irving T. Bush, President of the Bush Terminal Company and one of America's foremost authorities on shipping and foreign trade.

SAVING THE CHILDREN

Although the traffic fatality figures are almost invariably extremely discouraging, there is one single ray of light to be derived from them.

This represents a real achievement when you consider that the population has grown considerably in that time, that there are many more autos on the streets and that the total casualty list has considerably increased.
