Asserts Farm Board to be a Major Issue

Shouse Says Campaign in Agricultural Belt Will Be on This Line—Is Returning East

Chicago, Ill., April 21.—Declaring the Hoover administration had made a "fiasco of farm relief," J. J. Shouse, democratic leader, predicted today the federal farm board and its operations would be one of the principal issues in the 1932 campaign.

"Curtailling of acreage and production," said the chairman of the executive committee of the democratic national committee, "was the best remedy the republican party had to curtail the ills of agriculture. And they could have made a campaign for this without creating the farm board and appropriating 500 million dollars for its operations."

The 1932 campaign in the farm belt, Shouse said, will be a referendum on the question of success or failure of the farm board operations and the democratic party is "perfectly willing that it should be."

Tariff Another Issue.

Discussing tariff changes that would be "beneficial to agriculture," Shouse said the "Hoover-Grundy tariff" would be made another point of contention for votes.

The party leader, headed east after a visit to Pacific coast states, said that he "did not minimize the importance of prohibition as an issue," but that he felt unemployment is still the major political question before the people.

"It is significant that the only measures offered in the last congress to cure unemployment were done so by a democrat," the former Kansas congressman said, "and they were opposed by the administration."

Killed by Pocket Veto.

Only one of the measures introduced by Senator Robert Wagner (N. Y.), was passed by both house and senate. Providing for joint state-national employment bureaus, it was killed by a pocket veto.

Shouse predicts its passage again in the next congress. "The Pacific coast visit," Shouse said, "surprised me in the disappointment against the Hoover administration." In California the party leader said the "chargin' against Hoover was noticeable in a remarkable degree."—World-Herald.

SUIT GOES TO HIGH COURT

Washington—William Rogers, former Ku Klux Klanman, brought his $60,000 damage suit against Senator Watson and seven other prominent Indiana republican circles to the supreme court. In addition to Senator Watson, M. Bert Thurman, republican national committeeman for Indiana, Milton Clauson, Earl Killick, George V. Coffin, James A. Collins, Albert Ward and Russell Duncan, were named in the suit.

Rogers, who charges conspiracy to injure his reputation, appealed from the refusal of a federal district court in Indianapolis to pass upon the case. That court said it had no jurisdiction. Rogers testified before a senatorial committee that Senator Watson had shown him a Klan passport. He charged that his name was forged to an affidavit which represented that his testimony about the Indiana senator was false. A federal grand jury failed to indict Rogers on a perjury charge growing out of the affidavit. He filed his damage suit in 1929.

You can run 1,500 or 2,000 miles without draining new POLARINE out of the crankcase.

But few engineers would recommend such a dangerous practice, with any oil.

Engineers know that clean oil of the right grade is essential to full power and long life in any motor. They recommend changing the oil at between 500 and 1,000 miles—even when the motor has an oil filtering device.

New Polarine is made to meet every modern engineering specification. It is refined from the most suitable crudes until wax, tar and all other harmful, non-lubricating materials are removed.

New Polarine clings to metal surfaces—resists thickening by cold and thinning by heat. It is furnished in every grade recommended by the Society of Automotive Engineers and will do everything for your motor that oil can do. Consult the chart for the correct grade to use—25¢ a quart for all grades.

Court Passes on Question of Mortgage Right

Holds That Where Taken During Life of Superior Lien Is Junior Thereunto

In a case from Nemaha county in which the administrators of the estate of William Tynon appealed from a finding that their mortgage, although originally first, was declared to be a second lien to that of the receiver of the Nemaha County bank, the supreme court Friday entered an order directing that it be given first place.

The mortgage had been executed by George Redding and wife for $3,000 to the bank and sold to Tynon. Later Redding gave one to the bank for $2,500 to secure another debt. The court below held that the Tynon mortgage had expired by limitations of the statutes, suit on it not having been commenced within ten years after it became due.

The supreme court says that as the bank acquired its second mortgage before the first had expired it is a junior encumbrance, who must be one who acquires his encumbrance after the statute has run against the prior encumbrance. It is held to be abhorrent to equity and an unworthy and unnecessary construction of the statute, to hold that this bank, under the existing circumstances, may outrank a senior mortgage by a junior mortgage, and that the legislature never intended its act should so operate.

The receiver also lost in another case in which the Tynon estate was seeking foreclosure of an $8,000 mortgage Tynon had bought from the bank on land owned by H. B. Bohlkman and wife, which they had deeded the bank in payment of a $20,000 debt, subject to this and another mortgage. The receiver pleaded the same statute of limitations as in the other case, but the court says that as it took the property before the first mortgage had expired by a limitation law, it took title subject to that mortgage, foreclosure of which is decreed.

The case has been closely watched by a number of trust companies and building and loan associations, who occasionally encounter similar situations. Where a search of the records shows the existence of a mortgage more than ten years old, the presumption of law is that it has been paid and not released of record. Hence it is safe to make a loan and take a mortgage secure in the knowledge that it is the first lien. The decision of the court is that if the second loan is made before the ten years has expired, it is a second lien regardless of the fact that no effort has been made until after the ten years has expired to foreclose the first mort-
