Paving Under Way at LaPlatte

Next Few Days will See Completion of Work—Rapid-Dry Cement Used—Road Open Soon

From Monday's Daily—The present detour at LaPlatte will soon be a thing of the past. Saturday the paving force of F. L. Busche got started pouring the concrete ribbon that is to extend north from the end of the Platte river bridge to connect with the old paving a mile further north. The paving operations were started a few hundred feet north of the detour "turn-out" and Saturday night the mixer was almost up to the new viaduct. Today's run will put them well on their way to close up that gap, after which they will pour the stretch south to the Platte river bridge, and in any event will probably be done by the latter part of this week.

The use of Rapid-Dry cement will hasten the curing process that in the earlier days of paving operations required twenty-one days before traffic was permitted to venture thereon.

Now, it is expected traffic will be permitted to travel over this newly completed stretch within seven or eight days after the last of it has been poured, thus eliminating one of the detours between Plattsmouth and Omaha on U. S. 75.

A turn-out at the north end of the Platte river bridge is being provided and the last remaining fifty feet of the paving there will be bridged over to permit traffic to continue over this short one-way road, practically without interruption, during the few days required for the concrete to cure.

On completion of the work there, the machinery will be taken to the south end of the old paving at Fort Crook and begin working south from there, so it will be but a comparatively short time until the road be opened up from Walnut Grove corner straight through to Omaha, thus cutting out another detour.

After that, the only detour left will be the one around the Pappio viaduct, and this will doubtless be continued for several months before the new viaduct is ready to travel over.

DEPARTS ON OUTING

From Wednesday's Daily—This morning at an early hour an auto party of Plattsmouth people departed for Victoria, Minnesota, where they are to enjoy an outing and fishing trip for a short time in the interesting lake country. The members of the party comprised Mrs. Elmer Lohnes, Miss Helen Smetana, Miss Julia Vogtsch of Omaha, John Bauer, Jr., Wallace Warner and Charles Howard.

Frans Family Holds Reunion at Auburn

Ninety Members of the Family Join in Observing Very Pleasant Gathering

Some ninety of the members of the Frans family gathered Sunday at the beautiful memorial park at Auburn, joining in the observance of the day of pleasant association and in getting better acquainted, the members of the party representing branches of the family in Missouri, Nebraska and Kansas.

The family have had a number of the reunions in the past, but last year the gathering was omitted, but this year the members of the family circle decided that once more the ties of blood should be observed in the reunion.

This family are descendants of William and Rebecca Frans, who were among the earliest settlers in the great west. The head of the family, William Frans, was born March 1, 1831, and the reunion this year marked the 100th anniversary of the grand old pioneer, and founder of one of the leading families of the eastern part of Nebraska. Mr. Frans was born in Missouri, coming west in the last years of the 40's to Fort Kearney, Nebraska, where he remained until 1851 when he located in Fremont county, Iowa, and there engaged in looking after a homestead of eighty acres until in 1854 when he again returned to Nebraska and homesteaded near Rochelle, Nebraska, where he remained until 1862, when he and his kinsmen returned to Missouri. Mr. and Mrs. Frans were married in Buchanan county, Missouri, and the wife accompanied the husband on his trips to the new state of Nebraska in the early territorial days of 1854.

Mr. Frans moved to Cass county and located at Factoryville where his son, R. H. Frans had embarked in the mercantile business and later the business was moved to Union and where members of the family are still occupying a large part of the community life. D. Ray Frans, a grandson of the pioneer founder of the family being engaged in the banking business. Mr. William Frans was called to the last reward many years ago.

Those who participated in the reunion were as follows: Judge W. H. Frans and wife, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Tee, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Knapp and son, Billy, W. T. Frans, Mrs. S. P. Vestel, Mrs. Bernice Barrackman, Mrs. Pearl Vestel Edds, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Frans, Raymond R. When weather and soil conditions are favorable a good crop of corn is likely to be the result. However, if the seeds were not previously planted. In the same way, although stem rust develops best in warm moist weather, there would never be any rust if the rust spores were not previously carried into the grain field with favorable weather conditions, etc. In general, the stem rust parasite develops best in moist warm weather.

The movement for the eradication of this shrub in Cass county is being looked after by a squad from the state agricultural department comprising Greth Dunn, Harlan Bollman, Jesse Livingston and Ralph Bush, who are now working in Elmwood precinct in the vicinity of Elmwood.

WRECK NEAR NEHAWKA

Three people were injured in an automobile accident Tuesday morning when the car belonging to Glenn Rutledge was run into by J. M. Teegarden of Weeping Water, at the Murdock corner, three miles north of Nehawka.

Those injured were Mrs. Glenn Rutledge who received bruises on her arms and her left leg, Mrs. A. B. Rutledge whose spine was hurt and Mrs. Forrest Cunningham, who was bruised. Genevieve Rutledge was uninjured.

Mrs. Rutledge, who was driving, was going north when Mr. Teegarden coming from the west ran into her left hubcap, the impact causing her car to turn over on the right side. The left fender was torn loose from the body, where it was struck, and the left hind spring was broken. The top was almost completely torn from the car and it was through here that they crawled out of the car. Mr. Teegarden's car was slightly damaged. R. C. Pollard drove them in to the doctor.

Common Barberry Eradication Work in Cass County

Squad of Four Young Men From University Now Working in Elmwood Precinct

When we are told that the apparently harmless looking shrub, which was first introduced into Nebraska in the early seventies largely for ornamental and culinary purposes, and now known as common or rust-spreading barberry, plays a major role in development of local epidemics of black stem rust in wheat, oats, barley and rye, we wonder in regards to the "why." And yet, when we pause to think of it, there are numerous human and animal diseases which have complicated life development, and which require more than one host in which to complete their life cycle. Is in any more curious to learn that certain plants have similarly complicated life cycles and that black stem rust is one?

When an epidemic of malaria fever breaks out down South, sanitation agents go out and drain or kerosene the swamps in an attempt to get rid of mosquitoes because it is realized that the germ or organism causing malaria fever in man spends part of its life cycle or development in the human being and part in a certain kind of mosquito. By draining or kerosening the swamps and killing off the mosquitoes, malaria fever may be very largely controlled.

Facts about the harmful barberry and its relationship to black stem rust on small grains are just as clear-cut as those about the mosquito and malaria fever in man spends part of farm practices, in line with lowering grain production costs, demand the destruction of all stem rust-spreading barberries. (The shrub popularly called common or European barberry).

If barberry causes rust, why do we not have rust every year? As a matter of fact, the amount of damage caused by stem rust in any one year depends very largely on weather conditions. However, rust would never develop if there were no rust spores in the region. Rust, being a tiny plant growth on the grain stem, is favored by certain kinds of weather, and its development hindered by other kinds, such as the same as corn or any other crop is influenced by temperature, moisture, soil conditions, etc. In general, the stem rust parasite develops best in moist warm weather.

When weather and soil conditions are favorable a good crop of corn is likely to be the result. However, if the seeds were not previously planted. In the same way, although stem rust develops best in warm moist weather, there would never be any rust if the rust spores were not previously carried into the grain field with favorable weather conditions, etc. In general, the stem rust parasite develops best in moist warm weather.

TRAGEDY VISITS CONNOR HOME

From Monday's Daily—The home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Connors, at Omaha, was grief stricken Saturday by the death of Billy, the four year old son, who was crushed to death by a flower box that he had pulled over on himself.

The little boy with three sisters, Betty Jane, 7, Virginia, 5, and Pauline, 3, with James Williams, 2, a child of a neighbor of the Connor family, were playing in the yard of a neighbor, Hans J. Peterson, when the fatal accident occurred.

The bright hued flowers in a flower box in the Peterson yard attracted the attention of the little Connor's boy and he started to pull on the heavy iron flower box, apparently trying to climb up to the box, for a closer inspection of the flowers, the box being some three feet off the ground.

The base of the flower box was old and the wood suddenly crumbled and the box crashed over on the boy, crushing his head and neck.

The other children called Mrs. Connors and who released the little lad who was unconscious and apparently dying. The police ambulance was called and rushed the boy to the hospital where he died a few seconds later.

The lad is survived by the parents, the three little sisters who were present at the tragedy, as well as another sister, Lucile, 18, and three brothers, Harry, 21, of Kansas City, Harold, 19, and Donald, 11.

The funeral services were held this afternoon at the Connors home, 2424 South Twentieth avenue, South Side, Omaha.
