Edward Murray was shelling and delivering corn to the Murray elevators on Wednesday last week.

Eugene Nutzman and father, Fred Nutzman, shipped two cars of very fine cattle to the South Omaha market last week.

Word from Ashland where Peter Opp is staying with his daughter, Mrs. C. C. Chapman, is that he is getting along nicely at this time.

Edward Murray and the wife were over to Plattsmouth on last Friday where they were looking after some business matters and doing some trading.

Robert Shrader was a visitor at both Murray and Plattsmouth on Monday of this week, being guest at the home of his brother, Homer Shrader, for a short time.

Victor Wehrlein accompanied the shipment of cattle to Chicago and reports that there were plenty of cattle on the market but was pleased that their stock sold so well.

George W. Rhoden of Plattsmouth, who has been spending some time in the west at the home of his son, Glen Rhoden, when W. O. Troop and son came home, accompanied them.

Mrs. John McAlister of Desatur, who was here, called on account of the death of Green Piggott, and remaining for the funeral and for a number of days, departed this week for her home.

Word from A. A. McReynolds, who is on his way to Rawlins, Wyoming, and who had reached Alliance, was to the effect that he was enjoying a visit with his brother, Mrs. McReynolds is accompanying him and they both are enjoying the trip.

On Friday of last week, Mesdames D. C. West and W. O. Troop were over to Plattsmouth where they were attending the county meeting of the W. C. T. U. which was meeting there. They report a very successful meeting and a large and greatly interested crowd.

While W. O. Troop and son, George, were in the west, they stopped at the home of a cousin who was selling some sheep, having a thousand head, and they report that while the stock was in fair condition some of the ewes sold as low as sixty-five cents per head.

Last week, Robert Troop and Geo. Stites, the latter of Union, were in the northern portion of the state where they purchased some 100 pigs each and which they had the Mc-Maken truck deliver to them. They will feed them and fatten them for returning to the market at the earliest date.

Miss Virginia Pollard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Pollard of Nehawka, was appointed reporter for the Daily Nebraska, the paper of the Nebraska state university. Miss Pollard is a very capable young woman, is a student in journalism and held a position on the Plattsmouth Journal during her last vacation, making an excellent reporter.

H. G. Todd and John Vantine who has been touring the west for the past sixty days, seeing Canada, the United States northwest, California, both north and south, visiting with many friends at Los Angeles, returned home last week and while they saw lots of very fine places, we venture that they never saw any place which beat old Cass county.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Rosencrans and their son, of Plattsmouth, were visiting in Nehawka and guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Wunderlich, parents of Mrs. Rosencrans. Mrs. Rosencrans has been at the national convention of the American Legion and Auxiliary at Detroit and while there purchased a box of Canadian cigars and tobacco for her father, J. G. Wunderlich, which he greatly appreciated.

Boedeker and Wehrlein, east and Boedeker and Wehrlein, west, shipped a number of cars of cattle to the Chicago market last week which sold some of them at the top prices and especially some of the baby heaves which were fed by Victor Wehrlein, brought top prices and one which was particularly fine, gained during the feeding season more than it weighed at the start, which was six hundred pounds.

Enjoyed Freshman Party.
The freshmen of the Nehawka high school on last Friday enjoyed a party at which they were initiated in the fraternity and really became indeed members of the freshman class and have now started on their educational career.

Visit Old Rock Bluffs.
Last Sunday, Assistant Postmaster Earnest Kropp, Attorney Victor Sturm and Mechanic Clifford Trotter, made a merry party who desired to see the historic and also ghost town of Rock Bluffs, or where it formerly was, drove over to the site, and there viewed what there was still to see, and imagined the rest. They also visited the cemetery on the high hill south and as well went to King Hill, which they had to walk to as they were not able to negotiate the auto over the washed out roadway of years ago. They then drove over to the site, and there viewed what there was still to see, and imagined the rest. They also visited the cemetery on the high hill south and as well went to King Hill, which they had to walk to as they were not able to negotiate the auto over the washed out roadway of years ago.

Played Golf at Council Bluffs.
Frank Lemon and wife and Albert Anderson and wife, were visiting on last Sunday at Omaha, and also at Council Bluffs where they stopped at one of the parks and enjoyed a picnic dinner which the girls had prepared and after they had eaten to their fill, assayed to play golf, but will not tell the score. However, they had an excellent time and enjoyed the trip and day fine.

Played at Nebraska City.
The Nehawka-Lewiston band were at the opening of the new pavement at Nebraska City and entered the contest which was on there for the best band, but were pitted against some older bands and were not able to win in the contest. They however, on invitation by the Mynard Community club at that place on last Sunday where they furnished the music at the morning services at the church at that place.

Home From the West.
Lester Puls, son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Puls, who has been visiting for some time at the home of his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis H. Puls, at Cornish, Colorado, where he was staying for the benefit of his health, was so far improved that he was able to return home last week and is feeling very much better.

Too Bright Lights.
While Homer Campbell and the family were returning home on last Wednesday, they encountered a car with exceedingly bright lights which crowded them into the ridge of sand, with the result that they were thrown over into the ditch with more or less injury to the occupants, cutting the face of their son, Raymond very badly and damaging their car.

Circulating Petition for Place.
Albert Griffin, who has been with the late Green Piggott in the road work and who knows just how the work should be done and is willing to do it was out with a petition over the district which is served from Murray asking the voters to sign the petition for his appointment to the position made vacant by the death of his uncle, Mr. Piggott. We think that this young man will make a good man for the place.

Return From the West.
Messrs. W. O. Troop and George Troop, who have been at Manitou, Colorado, where they accompanied Mrs. George Troop to the sanitarium where she is to receive treatment for affected lungs and where she has already shown improvement, return-

Chickens and Eggs Worth 27 Million in Year

Nebraska Farmers Produce 988 Million Eggs in Year, Receive 18 Cents a Dozen.

Nebraska produced 23,124,000 chickens last year, according to the state and federal division of agricultural statistics. Approximately 9,000,000 chickens were consumed and 14,000,000 were sold. A total of 988,000,000 eggs were produced, valued at $14,700,000. Chickens produced were worth $13,811,000. Total value of poultry production was $27,731,000.

Poultry production was carried on a large scale last year. Nearly 40 percent of the total production was consumed and the balance sold. A total of 14,773,000 chickens were on farms at the close of 1930 or slightly less than those on hand a year earlier. They were valued at 54 cents per head as compared with 80 cents a year earlier and the total value was $12,495,000 as compared with $13,877,000 a year earlier.

Egg production reached the enormous total of 988,000,000 eggs. Approximately 25 percent or 248,000,000 eggs were consumed on farms. The balance were sold at an average value of 18 cents per dozen which brought $10,350,000.

Chickens brought $8,415,000 and those consumed on the farms were worth $5,246,000, making the total value of production, $13,661,000. Eggs consumed on the farm were worth $3,720,000 and those sold brought $10,350,000, making the total value of production, $14,070,000.

Early History of Plattsmouth is Recounted

ders of the voters at Rock Bluff or upon the canvassing board is a moot question. But the fact remains that the courts sustained the canvassing board and on February 21, 1867, the legislature of Nebraska Territory ratified the conditions laid down by the Congress for admission to the union. The bill was signed by Governor Butler and Nebraska was now ready to send its Republican re-inforcements to continue the congressional assault upon Andrew Johnson.

On July 25, 1891, the Plattsmouth Saturday Mirror recorded the death of Jerry Hutchinson of Rock Bluff which occurred July 19. The newspaper recalled that he had been a member of the Rock Bluff election board in the statehood referendum of 1866 and that he had taken the ballot box home with him when he went for his dinner on election day. It was further pointed out that it was known on election day that the constitution would be defeated if the Rock Bluff votes were counted that that this was desired by the Democrats, but that W. H. Potterenger succeeded in having the vote thrown out. In defense of Mr. Hutchinson, The Mirror claimed that "he was a vigorous Democrat, but that it was for no foul purpose that he took the ballot box home, for he thought he was its proper custodian and little dreamed that the event was to defeat his party and call into existence a new state."

There are no more interesting narratives in the records of town history than those which deal with warfare for the possession of the county seat. This type of village conflict provides the most colorful and forward competition to be found in inter-city rivalry. The organization of new states is invariably the signal for a county seat squabble of the first rank. Or if the county seat went to a town originally without a fight, the rise of any other new town in the county usually provided the "focus bell" whereby the new town tried to wrest away the seat of government. Both type of quarrel may be found in Nebraska's history and occasionally they persist to the present moment.

In Cass county, the county seat controversy appeared in both forms mentioned above. It achieved its acme in both fury and zeal in the classic struggle between Weeping Water, the rising new town and Plattsmouth, the ancient river town. When the county was young, there were two towns eligible for the honor, Plattsmouth and Rock Bluff. Both were located on the river in the "Cassus belli" of the county but there was little, if any, settlement in the western part of the county at this time so location east and west was not a question. However, the argument of Rock Bluff against Plattsmouth in 1855 was that the latter was too far north to which Plattsmouth retorted that Rock Bluff was located too far in the southeastern part of the county. But not to be outdone in their efforts to persuade the territorial legislature to their point of view, the members of the Plattsmouth contingent convinced the legislature had a map prepared by one Henry Coulson which showed the mouth of the Platte to be situated ten miles farther north than it actually was, thus making Plattsmouth appear to be nearer the center of the county north and south. This argument was sufficient to convince the House and Council of the wisdom of the selection of Plattsmouth, at least there are no other important considerations which can be traced. But Rock Bluff put up a stubborn fight in the legislature. Her fight in the house was led by Rep. Kempton of Cass who was Chairman of the Committee on Boundaries and County Seats. His committee reported House File No. 26 providing for the location of the seat of government at Rock Bluff. Rep. Latham, also of Cass, countered with an amendment to strike Rock Bluff from the bill but his motion was tabled. Two petitions, one signed by seventeen and the other by twenty citizens of Rock Bluff were presented to the House, praying that body to locate the court house at that place. These were duly received by the House and placed on file, the usual legislative practice in matters of this kind. But the next day, or February 2, 1855, Mr. Kempton reported to the House to authorize the selection of Plattsmouth as the county seat. In the Council, Lafayette Nuckolls of Plattsmouth, introduced Council File No. 89, January 31, 1855, to designate his town as the county seat. It was this bill which was agreed to by both houses, fixing the boundaries as well as designating the seat of government.

But Rock Bluff had not yet passed into the limbo of the forgotten as a town and did not permit the action of the legislature to deprive her of the prize without a referendum at the polls. Having lost in the House and Council, she now sought victory in a direct expression of the people of the county. On January 11, 1861, the legislature authorized an election to be held on the third Monday in April, 1861, at which the people of Cass county were to express their preference on the matter of the county seat. In case no town received a majority, a second election was to be held with the choice being between the three highest and still a third vote on the two highest should no town receive a majority in the second referendum. The results of the election were as follows: Plattsmouth, 368; Rock Bluff, 223; Mt. Pleasant, 109 with 23 others scattered between other localities. This gave Plattsmouth a narrow majority of 8 votes but it marked the exit of Rock Bluff as a contender for the county seat. Plattsmouth has since grown while her rival began to disintegrate.

See Results of Corn Variety Test.
P. H. Stewart, Extension Agronomist, will be at the meeting to discuss "Better Varieties of Corn" on Friday, October 9th, at 2:00 p. m. at the Carl Day farm, three miles south and 1/2 mile west of Weeping Water.

About twenty different hybrid and local varieties of corn have been planted in the plots and these will be shucked out and weighed at the demonstration. Although the yield has been cut down some by the weather, there is enough good corn to give conclusive results on the use of hybrids. Many other current topics on crops in general will be discussed at this meeting.

Destroy Grasshopper Eggs Now.
Now is a good time to make a start toward reducing the grasshopper infestation of next year. While the damage for 1931 is past, we must look ahead to 1932, and see just what prospects we have for trouble with grasshoppers in 1932, and just what steps can be taken to prevent it.

During the past two years, warm, dry falls have favored egg-laying; mild winters have favored wintering the eggs; and warm, muggy springs and summers have favored hatching of the eggs and development of the young grasshoppers. Should these conditions continue, we may expect trouble in 1932. A wet fall and spring with much alternate freezing and thawing the coming winter would be unfavorable for the pests and would reduce the prospects for trouble in 1932.

The adult grasshoppers are laying their eggs now, and will continue egg-laying until severe freezes put a stop to their activities. They prefer to lay their eggs in compact, well-drained places, preferably covered with vegetation although some eggs are laid in bare soil. Alfalfa fields, fence rows, ditch banks, weed patches, grass sod and dry lagoons are favorite egg-laying grounds. If the soil is compact, very few eggs are laid in corn and stubble fields unless the soil is very compact and a considerable growth of grass is present. Buffalo grass and grama grass sods are favored spots for egg-laying. Roadside strips of sod are also popular for this purpose.

The female grasshopper bores a hole in the ground with the ovipositor at the rear end of her body. The eggs are laid in this hole, usually from twenty to a hundred in a place, and are covered with a sticky, gelatinous fluid that hardens to form a protective coat or case. These egg pods are usually in the upper inch or inch and a half of soil. The eggs are long and slender about an eighth to a tenth of an inch long, and are yellow to reddish brown in color.

In many places these eggs cannot be reached, but where fall plowing is possible, they can easily be destroyed. If they are plowed under deeply, the young hoppers will never reach the surface even if the eggs do hatch. Such plowing should be done at least six or seven inches deep.

Repeated fall diskings of egg-infested grounds are sometimes advised, and are partly although not wholly, effective. Disking of alfalfa, fence rows, ditch banks and wild pastures will break up or expose many of the egg pods, but cannot destroy all of them. If diskings is resorted to, a good plan is to disk first shortly after the first killing frost and continue the diskings at ten day intervals until the ground freezes. However, repeated diskings may seriously injure alfalfa. Before undertaking such a disk, a close examination should be made to see whether the eggs are actually present in such numbers as to warrant such measures. Dry lagoons should receive particular attention as they are very likely to be heavily infested.

Turning up of weed patches, fence row, ditch banks and waste areas will not destroy many grasshopper eggs, as most of them are too deeply imbedded in the soil to be reached by the heat. It will destroy some adult hoppers and some other injurious insects, but if some before egg-laying is completed, it will make such places less attractive to the grasshoppers. Many insect pests winter in such locations and the burning off of such shelters is usually advisable as a general insect pest control measure.

While it is impossible to kill the eggs, the use of the methods outlined above will get rid of great numbers of eggs, and reduce the danger of serious grasshopper trouble next year. It is well worth while, and should be done wherever it is possible.

Now Is the Time to Kill.

Weeds with Chlorates
The latest information on killing weeds is that: three pounds of dry sodium chlorate per square rod may be enough of the chemical to kill bindweeds on ordinary land, but especially rich soil may take two to three times the usual amount of chlorates. This conclusion has been reached by the crops and soils men at the agricultural college after looking over many tests on farms in Nebraska.

Experience seems to indicate that it is practically impossible to kill bindweeds or thistles or other bad weeds on old straw or hay stack bottoms unless all of the old straw and hay is removed from the surface of the soil. Even then the amount of chlorate necessary to do the job is almost prohibitively impossible to handle.

Sol moisture also seems to have much to do with the success of the treatment. It seems that the wetter the soil the more effective the chlorate work. This is particularly true in the fall and early spring after the first chemical has been applied to the ground where the weeds grow. Generally speaking, the chlorate treatment has been most successful when the farmers removed all of the top growth of weeds and other vegetable matter and allowed the chemicals to work on the roots of the weeds in the ground. More detailed information can be obtained at the Farm Bureau office.

Project Clubs Start Year's Work.
Worthwhile pictures for the home will be the subject for discussion by project leaders and club presidents at their first training meeting in October.

Each month a demonstration will be given, suggesting some means whereby homemakers may make their home attractive by making use of what they have on hand or with a very small expenditure of money.

Training meetings will start promptly at 10:00 a. m. and close at 2:30 p. m. Following is a schedule of dates for the first meetings and a list of clubs which will be represented at the different centers:

Tuesday, October 6th—Congregational church basement, Weeping Water; Maple Grove Extension, Pleasant View, Weeping Water Extension, Triangle, Happy Day, Housekeeper's Union, Clover Leaf, and Four Seasons.

Wednesday, October 7th—Mrs. Eva Bailey's home, Elmwood; Morning Glory, Cottage Homemakers, O. St. Homemakers, Fairview Club, Willing Workers and Blue Bird.
