

Residents of the County Plan War on Hunters

Irresponsible Parties Driving into Country Side From Cities Destroy Property.

A move is being started among the residents of the country districts west and south of this city to protect themselves and property from the invasion of irresponsible hunters, a most worthy move and one that is being made necessary by the acts of the hunters.

The greatest trouble seems to be from persons from Omaha who on Sunday drive out in the country districts to wage a general warfare on all game or the property of the farmers if they fail to find any other targets for their marksmanship.

The parties who commit these acts do not seem to recognize the rights of the land owners or farmers in the least, invading the farms and shooting recklessly over the places, endangering the live stock and persons who may be in the vicinity of their hunting activities.

The farmers are as a rule not against the legitimate hunter who may come and secure their permission to hunt and then conduct themselves as real sportsmen instead of a bunch of bandits which is the usual attitude of some of these persons who have raided the Cass county farms.

A few days ago a party of hunters killed two shots for one of the farms in the vicinity of Rock Bluffs and another farm suffered the loss of a number of chickens, shot by the Omaha hunters.

It is proposed that a general association of the farmers be formed that will embrace those north and west of Plattsmouth, east along the river and west and south of Murray to the Eight Mile Grove church, this territory seeming to be the chief sufferer from this outlaw hunting. The farmers will not permit any hunting on the farms unless they have given written permission and the members of the association will investigate any and all of the hunting parties they may find to learn whether or not the hunters have the necessary permission.

CALICO PARTY

Last evening a number of Methodist mothers and daughters held a pleasant luncheon and program in the dining room of the church from 6 to 8 o'clock. It was under the charge of the Woman's Foreign Missionary society who invited any mother and daughter or anybody to secure a daughter and participate. A pleasing number were present despite the many other interests to take time and attention.

The party commemorated the days of 1869 when the society was first organized in Boston, and two of the founders, the first president and the streets of Boston in calico dresses than fail to send these two young women to India. Those two young women were Isabelle Waburn who founded the great college now at Litchwood, India for girls, and Dr. Clara Swain, the first secretary of the society in the days of organization. So the dresses of print with little print bags to match in which the offering is to be brought each month were initiated into service and the program this year is to follow the thought of simplicity.

The newly elected officers present were installed with appropriate ritual by ex-president Mrs. F. L. Barkus, as follows: President, Mrs. Harry White; vice president, Miss Emma DeHart; recording secretary, Miss Margaret Mape; corresponding secretary, Mrs. R. H. Hayes; treasurer, Mrs. H. A. Lightbody, standard bearer leaders, Mrs. E. H. Westcott for senior girls, Mrs. E. G. Shellenbarger for junior girls; supervision of light bearers and king heralds, Mrs. Hayes; publicity, Mrs. Barkus; missionary education, Mrs. Wm. Howland.

The story of Standard Bearers was given in word and song by all present. Miss Virginia Trively reading the story, and Miss Helen Schulz leading the songs interspersed with a playlet "Calico Mites" was given by auxiliary members with the help of three daughters. The first scene where the idea of the calico dresses and bags originated was in the home of a mother, Mrs. Barkus and her two daughters, which parts were taken by Louise Rishel and Margaret Lahoda and a girl joining in their plans being Frances Lillie. Second scene was a meeting of the society later in the year, when eight members met and reported how they had saved the money in the little calico bag. The program closed with singing of "God Be with You 'Till We Meet Again," and announcement of the next get-together to be held in late winter called the "Mystery Mother" luncheon.

MANY ATTEND COFFEE

Wednesday afternoon the ladies of the altar society of the Holy Rosary church held a very delightful coffee at the church parlors, very largely attended by the residents of the city. The ladies served a fine luncheon of chicken sandwiches, cake, kolache and coffee. The proceeds of the coffee will apply on the church work.

SHERIFF REED CONTINUES TO IMPROVE

From Thursday's Daily—
Sheriff Bert Reed today was very much improved and the patient apparently was making very rapid progress to recovery. He has had two good restful days and now has so much improved that will wish to be up and around as well as to enjoy a real meal. The condition of the patient is such, however, that he will be kept to the house for some time yet and on a diet until he is well out of danger of a relapse.

Governor Bryan to be Guest at Happy Hundred

Event Will be Held at the American Legion Community Building, on Tuesday, Nov. 10th.

The first of the Happy Hundred suppers of the present fall and winter season is to be held in this city on Tuesday evening, November 10th, the supper to be held at the American Legion building.

As the guest of honor of the evening Governor Charles W. Bryan of Nebraska, will be present and deliver the main address of the evening. The governor will cover many of the problems of our great state in his remarks and will be a great opportunity to the Cass county people to hear the facts as to the state presented by one that is most conversant with them—the governor.

The local Chamber of Commerce that sponsors the Happy Hundred suppers, is extending an invitation to the residents of the various communities over Cass county and whose residents it is hoped will be here to receive the message of the governor.

The supper will be served by the American Legion Auxiliary ladies and will provide a great treat in this part of the evening program. The price of the plates will be seventy-five cents. Those who are contemplating attending are urged to get in touch with E. W. Knorr, L. O. Minor or E. H. Westcott, the supper committee, so that reservations may be made for them.

PRESENT DEMONSTRATION

From Thursday's Daily—
Wednesday afternoon at the high school and last evening at the public library auditorium, there was presented a very interesting and scientific lecture and demonstration of meat selection and preparation, that was a real revelation to those who attended.

At the high school in the afternoon, Prof. W. J. Loeffel, in charge of meat work at the University of Nebraska, gave his lecture on the selection of meats, the preparation of the various cuts for the greatest advantage in economy and food. Special stress was laid on the preparation of cuts of lamb to give the use of practically all of the carcass. The demonstration in the evening at the public library, was attended by many of the residents of the community, who found a real treat awaiting them in the practical demonstration of meat cutting given by Mrs. O. Cullen, who was assisting Prof. Loeffel. The lecture of Prof. Loeffel was covering the use of the meats as a part of the diet of the family.

The demonstration of cutting so that many excellent cuts of lamb could be secured in addition to the chops and leg cuts, was one of real interest, showing that practically all of the lamb carcass can be used and that the cuts that are seldom used can be made into most appetizing dishes for the meat ration of the family.

This lecture and demonstration was sponsored jointly by the University of Nebraska, the National Live Stock and Meat board and the local meat dealers to bring to the residents of the community a great deal of information concerning the use of lamb as food, which has been generally overlooked in the past. Those who attended felt amply repaid for their time in the clear and practical lecture given and the demonstration of Mr. Cullen in the cutting of the lamb.

ENTERTAINS QUEEN ESTHERS

From Friday's Daily
Last evening Mrs. Henry Ote, Jr., was hostess to a number of members of the Queen Esther's of the Methodist church at her pleasant home in South Park. The home for the occasion was arranged with the black and orange colors of the Hallowe'en season, the lights shaded with the orange coloring and making a very attractive setting.

As the guests arrived at the home they were met at the door by a ghostly figure that escorted them into the home and where they found a program of the Hallowe'en games and amusements had been prepared for them. The members were all required to pay a visit to the "torture chamber" where many startling experiences were prepared for them.

The refreshments of the evening were in keeping with the Hallowe'en season and were most delicious and thoroughly enjoyed by all of the members of the class.

An Early Bird, Home Talent Play, Pleases Audience

Comedy Presented Under Auspices of the American Legion Is Very Much Enjoyed

From Thursday's Daily—
Last evening there was presented at the Platt theatre a comedy of American modern day business life, "An Early Bird," the cast being composed of local people and under the sponsorship of the Hugh J. Kearns post of the American Legion.

The cast has been under the direction of L. D. Hiatt, an actor of a great many years experience, whose training was reflected in the stage presence of the participants in the play and the manner in which the play was presented.

The play opened in the office of the P. D. Q. railroad, where Cyrus B. Kilbuck, president of the railroad, (Carl Schneider), decides that his son, Tony, who has been dismissed from college, (Jean Spangler), must make his own way, the father disgusted with his attempts to train the boy along the lines of a practical business man.

The remainder of the scene of the play is at "Flagg Corners" in Flagg county, where a railroad is to be built and over the two routes suggested is woven the plot of the play, "Barney Bird" (D. G. Taylor), the land magnate of the county, is seeking to have his land purchased by the railroad, and as well unload a part of his other land holdings on an unsuspecting purchaser. To Flagg Corners comes "Tony" with the girl of his dreams, "Jessamine Lee" (Madge Garnett). Tony buys the river road land only to find that the railroad has signed to buy the north road that is owned by Bird. Bird, who is engaged in a flirtation with "Rosa Bella Beavers" (Mrs. Mary Beverage), thinks that "Jessamine" is Mrs. Van Dyne, (Ruth Janda), the wife of the railroad in the land purchase, on the declaration of "Jesse" that she is interested in the river road, "Bird" sells the north road to Tony for the river road and $1,000, only to find his mistake and that he has lost the sale of the land to the railroad. President Kilbuck of the railroad finds that his son is more clever in a business way than he thought and the railroad pays the price for the north road to Tony.

John Svoboda appeared as "Mr. Mulberry," attorney of the railroad; Walter Gabriel as "Bruce Ferguson," clerk in the railroad office; Ed Wehrlein as "Artie," the office boy; Miss Jan Vallery as "Imogene McCarty," the stenographer in the railroad office. As the play swings from the railroad office to "Flagg Corners," the play introduces the various characters of the residents of that locality, "Perry Allen," a gentleman farmer; John Turner; "Mrs. Beavers," the boarding house keeper; Mrs. J. A. Capwell; "Mrs. Perry Allen," Jessamine's chum; Mrs. Ray Herring, and "Dilly," the maid of the Beaver household; Mrs. Gilbert Hinz.

All in the cast acquitted themselves in a delightful manner in the various characters that they were representing. The play was one of the best of the home talent plays that has been presented in this city.

During the course of the play an interesting specialty in dancing numbers was given by pupils of Miss Faustene Potts.

The dancing numbers were furnished by Jean and Jane McNabb of Omaha, charming little artists who were very handsomely costumed for the dances. The little ladies are twins and made a most pleasing team.

The musical features of the show were provided by Charles Nowacek, piano, and Anton Bajzek, xylophone, talented musicians of the city.

LOOKING AFTER GRAVEL

From Friday's Daily
County Commissioner George L. Farley was out in the country today looking over some gravel work that is being done on the west of this city from Murray to the point where the road joins No. 75 near Oreadpolis. This road was a part of the detour used while No. 75 was being paved, the gravel being placed on the road at that time and is now being replaced. In a number of the sections of the roadway the gravel has become very light and this is being resurfaced to save the road, the highway being a great convenience to the residents of the section through which it passes. The part of the road from the Oak Hill cemetery west to the junction with the main gravelled road at the Tritsch farm is also being resurfaced.

TO RESUME TEACHING WORK

Miss Gladys Bushnell, who has for the past month been largely confined to the home in this city, has so far recovered as to be around and was able to attend the second district teacher's meeting at Omaha Thursday. Miss Bushnell has been under the care of physicians for the past several weeks. She is hoping to be able to resume her school work at La Platte the coming week.

SHOWS REAL SPIRIT

James W. Holmes, secretary of the Plattsmouth lodge of the Elks, has received a letter from Theo A. Anderson, well known Pacific Junction resident, who is now at Los Angeles, renewing his membership in the lodge here. Mr. Anderson states in the letter that he has played over a lot of golf courses this summer, but on these found nowhere as jolly and genial a group as the members of the Plattsmouth Elks golfers. When home Mr. Anderson is a frequent visitor here and one of the popular members of the local golf club.

Platters are Crushed by the Auburn Eleven

Nebraska County Team, Undeatable This Season, Rolls Up Score of 22 to 0

The Plattsmouth high school football team were crushed Wednesday in the battle with the Auburn Bulldogs by the score of 22 to 0, one of the most decisive scores that the local team has suffered in many years.

The locals seemed unable to function against the smooth working Auburn football machine of skilled, heavy and well-placed players. The Bulldogs scoring almost at will.

Jogensmeier, who ranks as one of the all state high school football players, was the mainstay of the Auburn attack and with his sweeping end runs and smashes into the Plattsmouth line, scored many of the touchdowns for his team.

Eight times the Bulldogs spilled over the Plattsmouth goal line and as the game continued the local line wavered under the smashing attacks of the southeast contenders. Four of the tries for extra point were good for added scores.

The score at the half was 24 to 0 for Auburn.

All of the Platters were able to be in the game, Hinz serving at quarter while Armstrong was back in his position at left tackle of the team. In the game Donat, center and captain, had his hand injured but it is not thought that it will keep him out of the game.

The Platters will play Fairbury at that place next week, they having their three hardest battles in a row, Auburn, Fairbury and Tecumseh.

NOT SO WELL

From Friday's Daily
The many friends will regret to learn that James M. Robertson, who is at the Clarkson hospital at Omaha, recovering from an operation, was reported today as not being quite as well as for the past few days. Mr. Robertson has been getting along splendidly since the operation and Thursday was apparently in the best of condition. ## INVESTS FUNDS

The board of education is investing $10,000 of their sinking fund in U. S. bonds, which is an approved security which will return a safe and conservative interest rate to the school fund. The sinking fund is for the retirement of the high school bonds which mature in 1936 and through the investment of the fund as it accumulated the board has been able to make a pleasing saving in interest that they receive from the fund invested. For years the fund was uninvested but in the late years it has been kept at work and producing a good return to the taxpayers.

Life Sentence of Mrs. Wever is Sustained

Supreme Court in Opinion by Judge Good Denies the Appeal and Sustains the Verdict

Mrs. Inas Wever, convicted here last February at a trial in the district court of murder in the first degree, must serve the life sentence imposed by the verdict of the jury, the supreme court decided Friday in an opinion delivered by Judge Good. Mrs. Wever was charged with first degree murder by County Attorney W. G. Kieck, the charge being that she caused the death of her husband, George Wever, on December 9, 1930, by the administering of poison.

The trial court admitted evidence tending to show frequent quarrels and controversies between the couple extending over a period of several years, and this was one of the errors pleaded. The court says the objection is not well grounded since the defendant, as a witness, gave similar evidence. Admission of incompetent evidence is not prejudicial where evidence of the same facts is established by the complaining party. Remoteness of date does not affect the rule when the condition continued up to the time of the homicide.

The state contended that Mrs. Wever was infatuated with another man, who had secured a divorce in order to marry her, and that she administered strychnine to free herself so that she might wed the other man. There was evidence that the day before she bought arsenic for Wever's death, but evidence as to this was stricken from the record in the trial court since death was caused by strychnine. The defendant admitted the purchase of the latter poison, but claimed that it was to kill rats. The court questions this story in view of the fact that the day before she bought arsenic for the same purpose, and sufficient time had not elapsed to determine that arsenic would not kill the rodents.

The supreme court summarily dismisses the claim of defense that a fair trial was denied her because of hissing and applauding during the trial, by saying that the evidence that there was any such disturbance was slight and that as the defense did not ask them and there for a mistrial it cannot now be heard to complain. The record shows the court promptly stopped one demonstration, and the rule of law is that if this is done and it is probable the jury was not prejudiced demonstrations by spectators is no ground for a new trial.

The principal ground of complaint was that the evidence did not sustain the verdict. The defendant claimed her husband died from a habitual use of poison hooch. He died Tuesday, Dec. 9, 1930, and the evidence was that he had worked as a painter in the railroad shops the day before, but had stopped work because of stomach pains. Before that he had been in good health. Although attended by a doctor, he grew worse rapidly and died at noon Tuesday in convulsions, the symptoms being typical of strychnine poisoning. The wife said she bought the strychnine at the direction of her husband to feed to rats, but the court says the story is unbelievable. It expressed similar doubt of the theory that Wever could have got hold of the poison bottle.

QUARTER BOAT MOVES

Quarterboat "D," used in the government work on the Missouri river, which has for several weeks been located just south of the Missouri river bridge doing work in that locality, is moving to the vicinity of King Hill southeast of Murray. There are a number of local men engaged in the work on the river and who will now make their home on the boat as it goes to the new location, they formerly having found it possible to remain at home at nights, but who now will be quartered on the boat.
