HELD ON FRAUD CHARGE

Philadelphia—Clifford R. Skinner, named by federal authorities as one of six men involved in what they described as a 1 million dollar mail fraud of international scope, was arrested at his home here and held for officials at Houston, Tex. The alleged swindle, authorities said, was based on a scheme to sell stock in a machine which was said to be able to crack oxygen atoms and provide great power.

FIND NO 'HOPPER EGGS

Blair—Fred D. Butcher, federal entomologist, and County Agent George Bates failed to find a single grasshopper egg in the fields where poison was spread according to directions last summer. The men found an average of twenty cases of grasshopper eggs per square foot in the soil where the 'hoppers were bad last summer, but received no poison. The number of eggs in a case varied from twenty to forty, Butcher said.

Butcher has been sent to Nebraska by the United States department of agriculture to help local authorities make a survey of the entire state to find out if possible how serious the grasshoppers will be in 1932. The climatic conditions may take care of the situation, he says, since the grasshopper eggs will be killed in the ground by freezing and some of the young grasshoppers may be drowned next May or June by heavy rains, or some of the natural enemies of the hopper may kill some of them.

The men gathered some grasshopper egg cases and have them on display in the county agent's office here. A grasshopper digs a little hole in the ground and deposits the eggs in a gelatinous substance which hardens to form a pod or case to protect the eggs during the winter. The soil along a fence row, or in a pasture is a favorite egg laying place of the grasshoppers. They deposit their eggs about an inch and a half below the surface of the ground.

SPEAKEASY FIXTURE CONFISCATION UPHELD

Washington, Nov. 23.—Dry agents may confiscate speakeasy fixtures and furnishings under a decision Monday by the supreme court.

The government, after liquor law enforcers raided establishments operated by George Lewis and George Anderson, in Butte, Mont., in 1929, took the furnishings and bars, brass rails and all.

The owners of the equipment protested when the government said it did not intend to give the property back.

The government replied personal property seized in prohibition raids could be confiscated under the internal revenue laws.
