Woman's Club Has Washington Program at Meet

Several Very Interesting Papers and talks Given on Life of First President of U. S.

From Tuesday's Daily
The Plattsmouth Woman's club last evening at their session at the pleasant home of Mrs. J. E. Wiles on Chicago avenue had featured a George Washington program that was very much enjoyed by all of the membership.

The high school boys' quartet composed of George Adam, David Robinson, Otto Stodola and James Nowack, were heard in two very artistically given numbers, Miss Cora Williams, head of the music department, playing the accompaniment.

Mrs. L. O. Minor was called upon and gave a review of the ancestry of George Washington, a very fine and interesting story of the members of the family of the first president through several generations, from the early home of the family in England to their new world branch in Virginia.

The homes of George Washington were sketched by Mrs. Robert B. Hayes, who had visited a number of the dwelling places of the family in Virginia and particularly at Mt. Vernon, the last residence of the great leader of the American colonists.

S. S. Davis was present and gave a short talk urging support of the

The club voted to present to the public library a large globe of the world for the use of the students who might desire it for reference.

The high school girls who were guests at the meeting were Stella Parkening and Anna May Sandin.

At the close of the evening the hostesses, Mrs. J. E. Wiles, Mrs. James G. Mauzy, Mrs. W. A. Wells, Mrs. Fred Lugsch and Mrs. Ralph Anderson, served very dainty and delicious refreshments to add to the pleasures of the event.

Floyd M. Cole Files for Office County Sheriff

Well Known Farmer of Near Weeping Water Asks Name Be Filed on Republican Ticket.

From Tuesday's Daily
Another entry was made in the sheriff contest for the coming primary election, Floyd M. Cole, of Weeping Water, filing his name at the office of County Treasurer John E. Turner today.

Mr. Cole is a well known young farmer of the vicinity of Weeping Water and a member of one of the old families of the county, his grandparents coming here at an early date and settling in the farming sections of the county. Mr. Cole is well known and highly respected in his home community and his many friends will be pleased to see him entered in the race. The new candidate is a cousin of the members of the Cole family residing in the vicinity of this city.

This raises the republican slings to three, Rex Young and Pat Reed having filed some time ago, while two candidates are now in the race for the democratic nomination, W. H. Porter of Union and H. Sylvester of Weeping Water, having tossed their hats in the ring.

It is expected that there will be several others file on both tickets before the bags are up on March 3rd, the last day for filing.

W. C. T. U. Has Splendid Lincoln Day Observance

Miss Olive Gass the Speaker on the Life of the Great Civil War President, Yesterday

The W. C. T. U. held a very pleasant meeting on Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. V. T. Arn, secretary of the Union. There was a very pleasing number of the members in attendance. The topic of the meeting was that of Abraham Lincoln, the great Civil War president, whose birthday anniversary is to be observed on February 12th.

The main feature of the afternoon was the story of the life of Lincoln, prepared by Miss Olive Gass, who was unable to be present and which was read. The very able story of Lincoln is given below:

"Abraham Lincoln was born February 12, 1809, and died April 15, 1865. There is really very little that is new that we can say about Lincoln.

"He was such a many-sided man that it is difficult to decide what phase of his life to discuss. But, as the old saying goes: 'Everybody loves a lover,' so I shall discuss 'Lincoln and the Women whom he Loved.' I wish to use the word 'love' in its broadest sense, to include his mother, his step-mother and his sweethearts.

"Lincoln owed little to his father except that he was his progenitor, but to his adored mother he often gave unstinted praise for the religious instruction which she gave him. He said, 'My noble mother read the Bible to me at a very early age and her daily prayer was that I should become a pious boy and man.' This mother was Nancy Hanks Lincoln. She was only permitted to live the first ten years of Abraham Lincoln's life, yet the precepts she instilled into his mind always remained with him. The Bible was always a great source of comfort to him, he turned to it constantly and when he left Springfield for Washington to take up his duties of president, his last words to his friends, in making his farewell address were: 'Pray for me.'

"We are all familiar with the picture of the humble log cabin in which Lincoln was born and of the poverty-stricken conditions of the place. Yet he was born great, not on account of renowned ancestry, but because the spirit of greatness was in him from birth. He seemed predestined to meet the profoundest crisis of his day. No other man could fill his place.

"This natural greatness was no doubt fostered by the women he loved.

"This brings us to the second woman whom he loved and who had a controlling interest for good in his life. She was his step-mother.

"Before his own mother's death, the Lincoln family had moved to Indiana. Here the mother died. When Abraham was about 12 years old, his father married again. He married a widow, Mrs. Sally Bush Johnston. This good woman was destined to play a larger part in Abraham Lincoln's life than his own mother, for she was living yet, at the time of his assassination.

"She was a real wife and an ideal step-mother. When she consented to become the wife of Tom Lincoln, she did not know that he would take her to a home that was little more than a shack. This shack had no floor, no windows, no door. But this step-mother, who had come from a comfortable home, made no complaint. Tom Lincoln was not a 'self-starter,' but she induced him to put a floor in the house, and a door and windows.

This second wife of Tom Lincoln had children of her own by a former marriage and these, with the Lincoln children, made a large family. That reminds us of the 'old lady who lived in a shoe, and had so many children she didn't know what to do,' but not so with this tactful, capable mother. She immediately dressed the Lincoln children in some of the clean, warm clothing that belonged to her own children, and by her continued kindness won the love and devotion of the little Lincoln children.

"As Abraham Lincoln grew to maturity, we hear of Ann Rutledge, his first sweetheart. The letters exchanged between these two, show Lincoln's great love and consideration for her, especially during her falling health, for she died at the age of 22 years. We now come to Mary Todd, the woman Lincoln loved and married. We often hear it said that opposites attract. This was true in the case of Abraham Lincoln and Mary Todd. We can scarcely conceive of two persons more unlike in environment, social status and personality than these two.

"Yet there was one quality with which they were equally blessed, and that was ambition. Mary Todd was determined that her husband should be president of the United States. She used every influence to bring this about and her happiest moment was when she actually became 'the first lady of the land.'

"I wish to add a few words in regard to conditions in the United States during the last few years that Lincoln was president, prior to his assassination. There were many who opposed his policies, even in his own party. Some wanted him to abdicate, but he replied, 'I am master.'

"The year 1863 opened with dark forebodings and threats from enemies. On New Year's day he stood, receiving great crowds who wished him 'A Happy New Year' which they feared he would never enjoy. But before the year ended, he had not only signed the proclamation of freedom for the slaves, but he was complete master of the nation's destiny. The Union was saved that year, and Abraham Lincoln saved it!

"In all reverence, I ask, is there not a similarity between his life and death and that of Jesus Christ? I quote from Isaiah, 53rd chapter: 'He was despised and rejected by men, a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief. Surely he hath borne our sorrows. . . . He was wounded for our transgressions. . . . and with his stripes we are healed. The Lord laid on him the iniquity of us all. He was cut off out of the land of the living; for the transgression of the people was he smitten.'

"But through all this darkness, love lighted the way—the love and encouragement of good women. We shall never know how much these influences helped to build the character of this matchless man, who, as Joaquin Miller says, had

"The strength of a Hercules,
The sense of a Socrates."

Other Views of Emancipator

The meeting produced a number of very interesting and well presented sketches of Lincoln from various viewpoints, Mrs. F. G. Morgan giving a general review of the life of the man and the president; Mrs. Lois Troop on "What Lincoln Failed to Understand;" Miss Elizabeth Spangler on "Lincoln as a Lawyer;" Mrs. Adelaide Boynton on "Lincoln and His Old Horse;" Mrs. W. L. Propst on "Lincoln's Step-Mother."

Mrs. C. R. Troop, who with Mrs. John Elliott was in attendance at the conference held recently at Omaha, gave a very fine and thorough report of the meeting, which was much enjoyed.

The musical portion of the afternoon was featured by Miss Beatrice Arn with two piano selections and Miss Leona Metinger, who also gave a very fine piano offering.

At the close of the afternoon, Mrs. Arn served dainty and delicious refreshments that were very much enjoyed by all of the party.
