Central School Holds Washington Exercises

Young People Produce Splendid Entertainment Under Direction of Teachers.

From Tuesday's Daily

Today the Bicentennial celebration of the commemoration of Washington's life has been duly opened, beginning with the activities conducted by President Hoover at our national capital and the shrine of Washington, Mt. Vernon and extending all over our great territory, through schools and organizations of various names. Not least among these was the splendid program arranged by the teachers of Central grade school, and carried out by 150 of their 260 some pupils. The plan was not exactly carried out in episodes and yet the scenes depicted were all centered about the historical and social life of Washington's time.

That the audience might know, without printed programs, what event or scene was to be given, a page—Jane Rebal—dressed in green costume and with silver trumpet, announced each part of the program with a poster, giving acts and time action. The children on the program took places on east bleachers in the gymnasium of the high school and remaining pupils and visitors sat to the west. At signal from the principal, Miss Martens, the entire assembly arose as the children burst forth in the full song, "America." Then followed a review of the months of the year in "Queen of the Months," given by pupils under direction of Miss Diehm, third grade, and Miss May, fourth grade teacher. Of course February, altho scoffed and tased because the smallest of the months, was finally crowned queen because of the birthdays of Abraham Lincoln and George Washington, not forgetting a tap dance for Valentine's day by three little ladies of the same grades, Shirley Mason, Jean Taylor and Shirley Peterson. At this point a special dance was given very artistically by Dorothy Jean Turner, dressed in costume appropriate to the occasion.

Now came "Washington" (Bill McMaken) "and the Thirteen Colonies" given by members of the same class whose names are not at hand, especially called to decide upon forming a constitution for the new nation and planning a flag. Washington said its colors should be red, for Courage, white for truth and blue for loyalty; the red and white to be in form of thirteen stripes alternating and the upper left corner a field of blue upon which to place thirteen stars. We were indebted to Miss Muenster and Miss Bly for this able depiction.

Of course the "Making of the Flag" should follow this and Shirley Keck as Miss Betsy Ross, very ably carried her plan with the three generals, Philip Rosenkrans, Warren Rice, and Glen Carlburg representing Generals Washington, Morris and Ross, who came to ask her to make the first flag of the new nation. The five pointed star was to be used instead of six points, and the thirteen stars arranged in a circle on the field of blue. This scene was under the direction of Miss Nolting and Miss Martens.

No colonial program is complete without the modest "Minuet" which was given by tiny tots from first and second grades under Miss Martens and Miss Ault. The leaders of this minuet were Walla Smith and Frankie Krejci, who seemed mere babes in school and yet with some twenty other miniature dancers, very precisely and in time, presented the stately dance of Washington's day. The remaining children of these grades came racing in to the tune of "Yankee Doodle," each wearing a Yankee Doodle paper cap with the feather of blue and red curled paper. The audience appreciated the contrasting dances, knowing how well it suited the temperament of young people.

Somewhere we must get the story of the Indians of our early history and this was given by pupils of sixth grade under Miss Nolting's direction. The scene was in the kitchen of the Mt. Vernon home where the "Negro mummy," Jean Knorr, was busy with baking, and Washington's two step children, Patsy Curtiss, Frances Cloldt, and Jacky Curtiss, Niel Lancaster, were begging her to tell them stories of the Indians. She told them "Marse George" would soon be home to tell some of his experiences to them and shortly Washington, Harley Minnier, arrived and reviewed some events of the French and Indian colonial wars, while the children were all excited and full of questions as children are over thrilling stories.

Most fitting as a close came the Play Drill by eight boys and eight girls of fifth grade under Miss Hiatt's direction. Everybody enjoys seeing the march with the flags; the steady keeping time to martial music and the children seemed to enjoy the doing of the drill. Finally, standing in groups at attention around the room, Miss Liberty, Janet Westover, came to the center of the room, dressed in white robe and golden crown carrying a large flag as the song "O Columbia the Gem of the Ocean" was sung. Uncle Sam, Donald Burcham, took his place beside her during the singing, and Alfred McFarland and Ronald Rebal joined them as the representatives "of army and navy forever." To represent the Pilgrim Band from which our nation had grown, Catherine Shellenbarger and Georgia Blue joined the group in pilgrim costumes. Led by Miss Liberty and Uncle Sam, and attendants, the entire company gave another march around the room and stood in outline position while one verse of "America the Beautiful" was sung. Miss Liberty then carried the flag to the center of the room and paid tribute to it in well chosen verse and the program closed most fittingly with salute to the flag.

Miss Williams, director of the music department, added very much to the program by playing for all songs and drills, as so much depends on music in such a program. The audience was enthusiastic in their praise

DEDICATE TREE

From Monday's Daily
This morning at 10 o'clock on the lawn at the public library building was dedicated a tree to the memory of George Washington, first president of the United States. The tree was dedicated by the Plattsmouth Woman's club as a part of the great national wide program to honor the memory of the great leader.

The tree, a beautiful spruce, was secured from Henry Jasper, local florist and greenhouse owner, who also with the assistance of J. H. McMaken, prepared the resting place for the tree.

A number of the representatives of the patriotic societies of the city were present at the library as the brief and impressive ceremony was conducted, the chilly wind serving to keep many from attendance at the event.

The invocation was offered by Rev. Canon Pettey, of the St. Luke's Episcopal church.
Mrs. E. H. Wescott, state regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution, presided at the dedication.

The girls' octette of the high school, Miss Cora Williams, directing, gave the very appropriate number, "Trees," the young ladies presenting this in a very artistic manner.

The planting and dedication of the tree was conducted by Mrs. James T. Begley, president of the Plattsmouth Woman's club, who in a few remarks presented the tree to the library board as a monument to the remembrance of George Washington.

Mrs. Clayton A. Rosenkrans, state president of the American Legion Auxiliary, spoke briefly of the observance of the Washington bi-centennial which opens on February 22nd and will continue until Thanksgiving.

The acceptance of the tree on behalf of the library board was made by E. H. Wescott, president of the board and who for the library pledged the care of the tree and the appreciation of the spirit that had prompted its gift.

VISIT AT HOSPITAL

From Tuesday's Daily
Mr. and Mrs. Herman Smith, of Nebraska, were in the city for a short time today, being en route to Omaha where they spent a short time with their son, Lawrence, at one of the hospitals there. The son is at the hospital recovering from injuries received in an auto accident near Irvington, Nebraska, last fall, which resulted in a broken back. The accident occurred in November and since that time the young man has been under the care of specialists and is gradually improving. He is gaining strength and it is thought that in time will be able to be around. He was paralyzed from the waist down for several weeks but this has disappeared with the exception of a small section of the leg and feet but which is gradually coming back to normal condition.

Two years without a zero day is Chicago's record, according to the federal weather observer. The city
