If the meek are smart they will put off inheriting the earth as long as possible.

Real femininity has returned. Little girls are all wearing "long dresses" when they play "dress up."

An observer in the New York zoo says the armadillo, when it gets cold, curls up into a ball and lets itself freeze solid. Very much like business.

Losing weight at the rate of 100 pounds a year is all right for people like Paul Whiteman, who can afford new clothes every little while, but it's out of the reach of most poor fat people.

A statistician is a man who discovers information like this: 50 per cent of married people are women.

Blessed are the poor. They can go downtown without buying another little doodad to clutter up the living room.

A preponderance of boy babies is said to be a sign of war, yet no one has ever tried to prove that a preponderance of girl babies is a sign of peace.

Speaking of this here dollar-heard question, it's just possible that there wouldn't be so many slackers now, if there hadn't been so many slickers a while back.

Interior decorators say old-fashioned horsehair furniture is coming in again. Where are they going to get the horses?

Golf-widows are advised to follow their husbands round as a slimming exercise. Our thoughts are with the husbands.

If the Literary Digest puts on another poll for the President, it will go a long way toward wiping out the Post-office deficit.

You would have thought, wouldn't you, that woman suffrage might have resulted in the improvement of conditions in government bureaus?

Still, it's worth what it may cost to rid the land of the arrogant youngsters who sneered: "Aw, thirty a week ain't cigarette money."

We wish the political parties would hurry up and nominate their candidates so that the Literary Digest can get to work and find out who's going to be elected.

A Kentucky legislator proposed that all the bachelors in that state be rounded up at the end of each year so that the unmarried girls in the respective counties can take their pick.

VALUES MONEY CANNOT BUY

Sometimes we wonder what would be the effect if things should go on about as they are now indefinitely. How much worse off would we be as a people if the present standards of income should prove permanent?

It all depends, it seems to us, on where you stand when you look at the world. If you're standing on a dollar-mark things are pretty bad right now. But there are other points of view. Why do we want prosperity to return? So we can all have more money. But if we had more money, what would we do with it?

It seems to us that during those boom years when money, for a lot of people, was easy to get, it proved to be pretty hard to hold. And from what we saw and heard and read about what people did with their money, especially people who had never had any experience with money before, it didn't do many of them much good. On the contrary, it seems to us, it was a genuinely bad influence. And is there any reason to believe that people, speaking generally, would get any more lasting value out of easy money if boom times came back? We think not.

Of course, we want everybody to have a job. We not only hope that but we expect that conditions will change so that there will be no unemployment to the extent of widespread distress and privation. And we realize that there will always be some people who will have more money than they know what to do with, and who will continue to spend it foolishly. But it does seem to us that in the effort to make everybody rich our system has not succeeded in making anybody very happy; and we wonder whether we have not somehow, as a people, lost our grip on the more enduring things of life in the struggle for the mighty dollar.

There are spiritual values which are immensely more important than riches, which are not at all dependent upon wealth, which, in fact, are likely to be destroyed by the possession of more money than is needed to keep the body warm and fed. Perhaps these lean years may prove to have a disciplinary value in turning people's thoughts away from mere pleasure to the soberer but more important things of life.

SPEED GOVERNORS—FOR A FEW

The question of using a mechanical governor to limit the speeds of passenger automobiles is under consideration again in some states. However, it has reappeared in a guise that should make its contemplation by the motoring public more palatable than in the past.

Motor vehicle officials, insurance underwriters, and even automobile designers, have shown an interest, but they do not summarily propose governors for all motorcars. Nor do they suggest their use on any specific motorcar without the most careful investigation.

Present discussion among these authorities goes no further than speculating whether safety might be increased by requiring mechanical governors on the cars of those who might be classed as habitual speeders. Speeding is a bad habit that grows out of the faulty judgment of many drivers. Neither fines nor jail sentences suffice to break the habit in some instances. Suspension or revocation of the driving privilege has a wholesome effect, but in certain instances seems rather drastic. Hence some believe a more effective penalty would be to equip the offending driver's car with a mechanical device, sealed by the state, that would prevent him from exceeding a specified speed.

The three groups considering the subject recognize a palpable misunderstanding of the performance characteristics of modern automobiles on the part of some owners who see no reason for making fast cars if they cannot be driven fast. Motor experts point out that to have a satisfactory cruising speed an automobile must have a high top speed, but that to drive much above the cruising speed is neither economical nor sensible. Yet even when this is explained, some apparently refuse to comprehend. For them, perhaps, the governor may be useful.

Harry Bannister and Ann Harding are to obtain a divorce, because Mr. Bannister is rapidly losing his identity as an actor by being "Ann Harding's husband." It is high time. We, for instance, were no longer certain that Ann Harding had a husband.

We are all healthier, the insurance companies keep on insisting, since these peculiar times have come upon us. General Prosperity has apparently been superseded by Corporal Wellbeing.

THE WHIP CRACKS

Dr. Clarence True Wilson, head of the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals, says that if the republican party adopts a plank which favors submission of repeal of the Eighteenth amendment to the people, the dregs "would go to extreme lengths to repudiate what they would consider a policy of Judas Iscariot." They "would either put up an independent candidate or would vote for the other side, even though it were wet, as a rebuke of that kind of leadership."

The threat is aimed at Mr. Hoover, and in the light of what happened in 1928, it cannot be regarded as an idle threat. It is a policy of rule or ruin, a policy the dregs have pursued often enough to warrant suspicion that they are not merely bluffing. But what is the deep-rooted objection of the dregs to a proposal that, in the light of 10 years' experience with the law, the people shall be allowed to pass upon national prohibition as a sound method of promoting temperance? There can be but one reason—fear that the vote will be impressively adverse. They cannot doubt that there will be at least 13 states standing fast to prohibition, enough to prevent immediate repeal of the Eighteenth amendment. But with the law breaking down before hostile public opinion, additional proof through a referendum that majority sentiment of the country is against it would be a final blow.

Four years ago the G. O. P. rejoiced and profited from the havoc prohibition wrought in the democratic party. Today it is informed by the leader of the dregs that it must not even dare to approve reference of the amendment to the will of the people. Things do have a way of squaring themselves.—Baltimore Sun.
