Last winter Miss Margaret Meier was united in marriage and has since been making her home at St. Joseph, Mo., and last week came to Weeping Water to visit with the parents and her many friends in Weeping Water seized upon the opportunity to give this excellent young woman a miscellaneous shower. The shower which was in honor of the bride of a few months, Mrs. Margaret Sandley, was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Burch and was sponsored by Misses Wilma Burch and Bettie W. Woolcott. A most delightful gathering was had and all present enjoyed the meet and also extended to the bride their wishes for a long, happy and useful life.

Make Gruesome Find.
While the people of Weeping Water who are so greatly interested in the fascinating game of horse shoe pitching were making their new courts they found a tombstone with the following inscription thereon: Sara Harmon, daughter of M. Harmon, died January 14th, 1872, aged 22 years, 5 months and 14 days.

The find created a good deal of interest and much speculation was rife as to whether the body was buried there or not, and after much digging it was concluded that there was no one buried there, but that the stone had been left there by some one.

Making Excellent Playground.
Many people of Weeping Water love the game of pitching horse shoes and have been enjoying in a limited way with two places to pitch horse shoes, in the rear of the blacksmith shop of Newton L. Grubbs and while the place is an excellent one, with shade and away from the streets, it did not accommodate enough to satisfy all who desired to play the game.

Like Weeping Water does and which is manifested in the manner that they cared for the preparing of the grounds and buildings for the Cass county fair, they all worked, and in this case they all worked, making the work light. Like in the rebuilding of the walls of Jerusalem, "They all had a mind to work," and thus have gotten the grounds graded, using a tractor, teams and many men with shovels, the working man, the merchant and the tailor all taking turns at the work as well as the retired business man and farmer. However they have gotten the grounds in good condition and provided a good place for recreation, having eight places to pitch, which will accommodate some thirty-two playing at the same time. While Weeping Water had many expert horse shoe pitchers they are expecting to have more. The court will be lighted at night, providing for games at night, and Weeping Water extends a cordial invitation for lovers of this game from other places and no matter where, to come and enjoy the sport. They will later hold a tournament and invite teams from other places to come and enjoy the sport.

Truck Tire Ignites.
O. Silvertread, a truckman from Raymond, was looking after some business matters in Weeping Water on Wednesday afternoon, and as he stopped on the payment near the north end of the drug store of J. J. Meier, the tightening of the brakes caused the tire to slip slightly on the pavement which was hot and at the same time the tire was overheated by its running, and a slight spark was caused which as the car stood there grew into a larger fire and was discovered by people in the offices when they carried water to put the fire out which seemed to have but little effect. The wheel was removed and the tire and rim separated, and finally the tire was dragged to the creek where it was drenched in the water before the fire quit burning. We had been hearing people say that it was a hot day, but we did not think it was that hot. But we were convinced that there was a hot time in the old town.

Eight Deaths are Blamed on Severe Storms

States of Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma Are Struck by Tornadoes and Floods.

Kansas City, Mo.—Storms, flood waters and heat harassed the southwest over the week end, claiming a toll which mounted to eight deaths and wide property damage.

In various sections of Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma houses were unroofed by tornadoes and lowlands were flooded and streams filled to overflowing by rainfall ranging upward to six inches.

Kansas bore the brunt of the elements. Heavy rains thruout the southern and eastern part of the state drenched the wheat nearly ready for harvest and in some places washed out other crops.

Windstorms swept down on Wichita, Kansas City, Independence, Newton and other towns. Two hangars and several airplanes were damaged at Wichita.

Streams were swollen near flood stage. S. D. Flora, state meteorologist saw the possibility of overflows of the Marias des Cygne river at Ottawa and of the Cottonwood around Emporia.

A severe wind and hail storm hit Johnson county, Missouri, around Warrensburg. Windows were broken and roofs were ripped from houses by wind and hail. Hailstones were said to have been as big as baseballs.

Similar effects were reported from a tornado in the vicinity of Kingsville, Mo.

Deaths attributed to the elements were reported as follows:

Versailles, Mo.—Harve Stueck, president of a Kansas typesetting company, swept from a houseboat on the lake of the Ozarks and drowned.

Kingsville, Mo.—Glenn Burton, 25, farm hand, struck by flying timber.

Hutchinson, Kas.—Edward E. Hughes 17, and Arthur Johnson, 14, drowned in a sandpit swimming hole swollen to treacherous depths by rain.

Arkansas City, Kas.—Harold Paek, 40, knocked from a ladder in attempting to close transo mat his cafe, suffering fractured skull.

Guthrie, Okla.—Milo F. Ball, 65, died of heat prostration when the mercury soared above 90 degrees after electrical storm.

Emporia, Kas.—Clyde Eubank, 19, drowned when flood swollen Cottonwood river carried rowboat over dam.

Harrisonville, Mo.—Glen Burton, 23, struck by flying timber from demolished hoghouse while doing chores.—State Journal.

NORRIS FAVORS MODIFICATION
Washington, June 20.—"If prohibition is not satisfactory—and it is not—I believe the United States must try some modified or compromise plan to deal with the liquor question," Senator Norris (R., Nebraska, one of the oldest stalwarts dries of the senate, declared Monday.

While declaring himself not yet ready to advocate resubmission of the Eighteenth amendment, Norris declared he has been considering the question of a change in prohibition for some time.

"I do not believe in resubmission for outright repeal, without any substitute," he said, "because that means the return of the saloon, and the saloon must never return."

"I have long been interested, however, in proposals for beer and light wines, and it may be that some such modification will answer the question. We have never had a chance to try that, you know. It might solve the problem."

He protested that he is not yet ready to advocate resubmission, "because we are going to do nothing right away."

He added, however: "There is a possibility the plan of Governor Smith, for state dispensaries to sell liquor, with strict provisions that none shall be consumed on the premises, might be satisfactory. Or the plan of Colonel Anderson, of the Wickersham commission might also be satisfactory."
