The Coal Shed Burns
The coal shed at the rear of the store of Theo. Harms on last Tuesday afternoon was found to be on fire and as everything was very dry, it was impossible to check the flames and the shed burned to the ground. The citizens of Manley, however, responded very promptly, all coming with two buckets of water and working to protect other property. It was fortunate that the wind was in the south, greatly diminishing the hazard of the other buildings. The fire was watched and cared for until the danger was over.

Give and Take in Baseball
Some time ago the Manley ball team was over to Ashland, where they played ball and were able to win over the Ashland team by a score of 7 to 5. Last week Ashland played here and the score was reversed, the visitors winning by exactly the same score. Well, you know, "Turn about is fair play."

Fire Destroys Barn

Last Thursday evening, the barn on the farm of Joseph Wolpert was discovered to be on fire and was consumed as there was no way of fighting the fire. The mow of the barn had been filled with clover hay, which it was thought ignited from spontaneous combustion, as the uncurd hay was going through the heat period. Glen Meisinger lives on the farm and had some harness in the barn, but we did not learn whether they were saved or not. Mr. Wolpert carried insurance on the property, covering the barn, but probably insufficient to cover his loss. Mr. Meisinger telephoned in and a number drove out to the place.

Did Very Clever Work

With the construction of the Manley school building there were left places which demanded Thamin Fen some panels for later decoration. These panels were artistically decorated with mosaic work concrete with stones inlaid and with the many colors made a most artistic bit of work. One panel contains the former school building, which was constructed in 1881 and which served for a half century as a place of instruction for the young people of this community, in which the building was shown in miniature in many colors of stone work and stands there a memorial of the service to education for the fifty years and a testimony to the very clever work of Mr. Jamison. Another panel was used to depict the pyramids and is also a very fine bit of work, while a third panel shows an open book, which signifies the acquisition of learning and from it a ladder reaching upwards, signifying that by continued application to ones tasks and to study it is possible to climb round by round up the ladder of progress and fame, and also that it is up to most of us what we make of ourselves. When in Manley take a peep at this bit of very fine work.

Angel food cake, Joan Cook, first, and La Verne Holka, second. There was only one spice cake there and that belonged to Verna Vickers. It was very nice.

DENY REHEARING IN GAS LINE VALUATIONS

Lincoln, July 20.—The Nebraska supreme court Wednesday declined to retreat from its stand that the state board of equalization erred last year in arbitrarily reducing assessments of natural gas pipe lines 17 per cent.

The court overruled the board's motion for a rehearing in the case, which had been brought by Attorney General Sorensen and Gage, Dakota and Saline counties.

The court also denied a rehearing in an action of the receiver of the Nebraska State bank of Norfolk against the school district of the city of Pierce and the state. The issues involved interpretation of the legality of certain set-offs in accounts between the bank and the governmental units.

Court Hands Down Law on Bank Draft

Purchaser is Buyer of Bank's Credit and Funds Lose Trust Character.

New banking law was written into the records Friday when the supreme court, in an opinion by Judge Frost, acting as a member of the district court of Dawes county in litigation involving a draft issued by the First State bank of Alliance and which had not made the rounds of the mails before the bank was closed. The draft represented a deposit in the bank by the clerk of the district court, who was custodian of funds realized from the sale of lands under an order of partition, and who used a check on these funds with which to buy the draft sent to the party to whom the money was due.

The court says that even tho a deposit made in a bank by a clerk of the district court is made out of trust funds which are known to be such by an executive officer of the bank, still, when the representative of the beneficiaries of that trust fund asks the clerk to purchase a draft in payment thereof and in response he receives and accepts the draft so purchased, he becomes a creditor of the bank and loses his right to any preference which he may have had over the depositor.

A purchase of a bank draft, the court holds, is a purchase of the bank's credit and a holder of exchange, and as such is entitled to share pro rata with depositors and other holders of exchange in the assets of a failed bank and in the depositor final settlement fund, but, in the absence of special circumstances, is not entitled to have his claim allowed as a trust fund. No such special circumstances are found to exist in the case at bar.
