CUT DOWN MILITARY EXPENDITURES

Every nation in the world, apparently, except France and Japan, is anxious to accept President Hoover's proposal to the Disarmament Conference that all countries shall reduce their offensive armaments by one third. Japan at the moment is under the control of the military party, and its members do not like the idea of losing their jobs, while France, as usual, demands "security."

France is the most heavily armed nation in the world, and intends to remain so unless the rest of the world will guarantee that Germany will not make another attempt to gobble her up. We can hardly blame France for her fear of Germany, in view of the fact that the attempt has been made from across the Rhine twice in the memory of men still in their prime. But the French people are groaning under the weight of taxes for military purposes as much as the rest of the world. The proposal would not affect France's defensive fortifications and guns, and would lessen the strength of any attacking power.

To cut the French army to "police" size would release 500,000 men now under arms, for useful productive labor, with corresponding saving to the taxpayers of France. Our own country's share in the estimated saving of $25,000,000,000 for the whole world would be around four billion dollars. It would be much more for France, with its population less than half of ours.

We are hopeful though not overconfident, that out of the Disarmament Conference will come something tangible which will at once enable the world to reduce taxes and at the same time give better guarantees against another war than now exist. The most definite assurance of security that could be offered to France is the proposal made by Chancellor von Papen, of a military alliance between Germany and France. If that was made in good faith then it seems to us that the French, if they do not accept it, will simply be proving what the Germans believe, that the aim of the French politicians is not security but conquest.

A change of occupation and of scene sometimes widens the mental horizon and makes the mind more receptive to new ideas. There's Al Capone down in Atlanta prison. "Rackets get you nowhere except here," he is quoted as saying to a visitor, "as pegged away in the prison shoe shop. As long as he was in Chicago Al probably never dreamed that some day he would hand out that particular pearl of wisdom."

VALUE OF SERVICE AS BASIS OF RATES

The Wisconsin public service commission has ordered a one-eighth reduction in the local rates charged by the Wisconsin Telephone company's 102 exchanges. In theory the commission based the new rate on the value of the service to subscribers, rather than on a "reasonable return on a fair investment." The ruling is going to be widely hailed as that sort of an interpretation (and it would be a revolutionary one), but in fact it is not nearly that bold.

In the first place, the commission holds that because the depression has increased the purchasing power of dividends by 50 per cent, and since the average family income has been greatly decreased, the value of phone service in proportion to the rates charged has also declined markedly. Had it stopped there, the new rate would have been decided on the "value of service" basis. Just how the commission would then have determined upon the 12 1/2 per cent cut, it is difficult to see. For the exact decline of the average family income is an elusive thing, and it would be purely speculative in any event to hold that an intangible value such as telephone service had declined accordingly.

Thus the commission actually had to come to the matter of reasonable return, if only indirectly. And it does so by pointing out that the phone company's risk is slight, that it enjoys a monopoly, that it reaped substantial earnings over a long period, and that therefore it must be satisfied during this period with a return of 6 per cent on the exchange investment—"in an economic crisis of the gravest proportions, ... a reasonable and, indeed, a liberal return."

What the Wisconsin dispute really involved was the charging of part of the toll system's operation costs to the exchange system. And what the commission did principally was to deny the costs of the former in computing the exchange rates. If temporarily that reduces the company's return to a point where the "value of service" theory looks plausible, the commission did not actually limit the company to that return. Instead, it recognized the toll rates also as an open question, and hinted that it would consider an increase there. But it insisted that the exchange patrons should bear the cost of their own service only, and not have to carry also the cost of the toll service.

Perhaps the higher courts will not even uphold that distinction, but at least it will be erroneous to conclude that the "reasonable return" theory has been thrown overboard. The Wisconsin commission disguised it a bit, but it is still there.—Des Moines Register.

If a young man is looking for a wife, it will be best to pick one whose father has been rich, but who has lost his money; she will have learned how to cook by this time; a girl whose father has always been poor has been so busy looking for a wealthy husband that she hasn't had time to learn about housekeeping.

It would be strange if we should owe our recovery from economic stagnation to the American hog, whose not so distant relative got us into the mess in the first place.

MAYBE HE DIDN'T REMEMBER

When seven hundred bonus marchers invaded the capitol plaza in Washington yesterday, Vice-President Curtis called out the marines. However, they did not fire into the ranks of the veterans. Somebody telephoned General Glassford, Washington superintendent of police, and he burned up the roads getting to the capitol and calling the marines in again.

General Glassford used to be in the army himself, and he is well acquainted with the fact that marines are employed to fire on none but non-Nordics, Haitians, Nicaraguans and so on may be handled by the sea-soldiers, but turning them on citizens of the United States is something else again. It just isn't done.

So the superintendent of police precipitately rescinded the vice-president's order, and the marines marched away, leaving not a single ex-infantryman dead on capitol plaza with a marine bullet through him.

What thoughts passed through General Glassford's mind as he hastily undid the vice-president's work we cannot know. It may be that not even once did he remember the only memorable remark made by Mr. Curtis in the campaign of 1928—the time when he remarked to a heckling constituent, "You're too damn dumb!"—Baltimore Evening Sun.

Mrs. Buster Keaton is suing for divorce because she says her husband hasn't explained a number of absences from home. Perhaps he's trying to think, and should be given a little more time.

WEEPING WATER

Dr. E. H. Kintner was attending the funeral of his friend Clarence W. Flasielchman at Weeping Water on last Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Crozier at Hospital. Mrs. John T. Crozier who has been very poorly was taken some time since to the Bryan Memorial hospital at Lincoln, where she has been under observation for some time. On last Tuesday Mesdames Jennie Reed, Maude Hillman and Zora Jergensen, were over to visit their friend.

Both Quarries Working. The Western Limestone quarry is now employing a few men and will in a short time be ready for a large number. They have had a crusher shipped here and will have to install it, as well as they will have to install the one they have here in the other quarry. When the two machines have been installed they will be ready for many men and will begin shipping the stone for the paving. The new quarry east of town is working a number of men under the direction of Ole Olsen and which is creating work for some dozen or fifteen workers.

Celebrated Passing of Birthday. A number of young people, friends of Miss Thelma Cole, being informed of the passing of her seventeenth birthday anniversary, gathered and gave this very popular young woman a very pleasant evening, they having a supper in honor of the occasion and after going to Louisville where they had a swimming party at the sand pits. They also gave the young woman a very beautiful present as a remembrance of the occasion.

Getting Ready for Fair. A cortege of workmen with tractor and teams have been busy during the past week in getting the grading done for the big hog barn which is soon to be erected and gotten in condition for the display of many fine hogs which the farmers of Cass county and from elsewhere will have on display at the county fair, which will be held from September 13th, to and including the 16th, and soon the workmen will be on the structure proper. By the way, the fair board and the citizens of Weeping Water and vicinity are to be congratulated in the very worthy plans of co-operation which they have manifested in doing the work in putting over the best fair which any county holds with a lack of funds. With every succeeding year the fair for Cass county held here is getting better notwithstanding the times which have been with us.

Announce Change of Dates. It is hereby announced that the concert which the Weeping Water band had arranged to give the city of Murdock and which had been announced last week as to have been on August 2nd, has been postponed until August 9th, one week later. Also the concert which the band here has arranged to give the members of the Masonic Home at Plattsmouth has been changed to August 21, instead of August 14th.
