Community Banquet to Honor Football Team

Dana X. Bible, Head of Athletics of the University of Nebraska to Be Speaker.

The Plattsmouth community is to honor the Plattsmouth high school football team by a banquet to be held near the middle of December, the preliminary work of arranging the same being now under way.

The banquet will be sponsored by a committee of the citizens and Hilt Martin, John Sattler, Jr. and Carl Ofe, who assisted in getting the banquet last spring for the basketball team, will again be at the helm of this event.

The speaker of the occasion will be Dana X. Bible, head of athletics at the University of Nebraska, one of the leading football coaches in the country and who has had a part in the formation of the rules by the national association.

This banquet is an event in which the community should enter with all enthusiasm, a fitting recognition of the fine record that the high school team has made on the gridiron this year. With one defeat and one tied game the Platters are looking forward to the last game of the season Thursday at Nebraska City, where two well matched teams will battle in their annual turkey day meet.

The team this year has carried on for the blue and white in a fine sportsmanship manner and as this is the last year for a large number of the players it is a pleasure to have the opportunity of paying them honor. George Luschnisky, George Adam, Robert Hinz, Theodore Yelick, Captain Sam Arn, William Wetenkamp, Robert Rummel, Stuart Porter, Greth Garnett are the seniors who will leave the squad this year.

TO TEACH MUSIC IN GRADES

Miss Lillian Garrett has been employed by the board of education to fill the vacancy which was caused by the resignation of Miss Grace Nolting. Miss Garrett was selected for this position because of her experience in the 7th and 8th grade work and her musical ability. Miss Garrett has had considerable experience with 7th and 8th grade children and understands the teaching problems of this department. In addition to her work as 7th and 8th grade teacher at Douglas, Nebraska, she had charge of the music. She will teach the music and art in these grades. It is the intention to organize a glee club of boys and girls to appear before the public when musical programs are given. The board of education feels fortunate in being able to present to the school a teacher with the experience of Miss Garrett.

Following the close of the business session of the chapter the remainder of the evening was given over to the Washington program, featured by several talks by the members of the chapter on the life of Washington. Mrs. E. H. Wescott, state regent of the society gave a very interesting and thorough talk on Mt. PLATTSMOUTH TEAM LOSES

Junior Class Presents Very Clever Play

Well Chosen Cast Seen in "A Full House," Comedy Drama—Given at the High School.

From Wednesday's Daily
The junior class of the Plattsmouth high school presented the comedy drama, "A Full House," last evening at the high school. The play was greeted by a large audience and which was generous in its appreciation of the fine manner in which the play was carried out. The young people have spent some time in preparing for the play and their fine presentation was one that they can feel proud of giving.

The play was directed by Jack Figley, member of the high school faculty, whose work brought the young people to such a high standard of efficiency in their work. Miss Florence Beighley, class sponsor, also assisted in the training of the young people and the arrangement of the play, both of the instructors deserving much praise.

The comedy drama was laid around the theft of the Pembroke jewels, the love affairs of "Ned Pembroke," (Edwin Kalina) and the complications that befell "George Howell" (Earl Lamberson) new bridegroom, and his devoted bride of a few days "Ottily Howell" (Mary Ann Rosenkrans). The well chosen play gave the young people an opportunity to display their talents in the way of dramatic art and which was much enjoyed. As the aunt, "Miss Winnecker," Lois Bestor gave a realistic presentation, while as "Daphne Charters," the beloved of Ned, Margaret Taylor brought charm to the part. As members of the city's "finest," John Kubicka, Wayne Hiner and Oliver Taylor represented the law enforcement department in search of the Pembroke jewels. The role of "Vera Vernon," erstwhile love of Ned, was presented by Gertrude Brink, and that of Mrs. Fleming by Eleanor Black. As Nicholas King, Bernard Knoflick gave one of the most effective characters of the drama and gave some of the big moments of the offering. Dorothy McCarthy was shown in the role of "Mrs. Pembroke," owner of the missing jewels, and the mother of "Ned." In the comedy roles as "Parks" and "Susie," William and Helen Gilmour were exceptionally clever and entertaining in their parts.

Preceding the play and during the intermission the orchestra under the leadership of Edward Egenberger gave a number of much enjoyed selections. The orchestra was composed of Edward Egenberger, Marvin Tritsch, James Comstock, Stuart Porter, Robert Hall, Sam Arn and Miss Virginia Samek.

Between the second and third acts, Mary Ann Rosenkrans, class president, expressed the appreciation of the cast to those who had helped make the play possible. The co-operation so essential to a task of this kind was splendid. The stage managers, Inga Reichstadt, Anna Margaret McCarty, Kenneth Armstrong, Gerold Keil, Edward Martin, Maynard McCleary, William Ronne and Joe Graves, did considerable work in getting the properties arranged. The neat programs were prepared by Miss Wilhelmina Henriksen and Gertrude Brink. Mrs. E. H. Wescott loaned furniture and Mrs. J. H. Davis helped in making up the members of the cast. In building additional sets, the manual training class under Mr. Rothert gave valuable assistance. The general manager in charge of the stage was James Robertson, who saw that the long list of properties was collected.
