Bible School Lesson Study!

Sunday, December 11th By L. Neitzel, Murdock, Neb.

"The Christian's Use of Leisure"

Neh. 8:10-17; Mark 6:30-32.

This topic has never before been studied in the Bible school. It is forced upon us, of the leisure that has come to the masses. Machinery has lessened the hours of labor and will lessen them more. But we have come into this happy condition quite unprepared to utilize it wisely. The average man or woman does not know how to use his or her spare time to the best advantage. The matter must be studied and the study must begin with youth. People now must be educated for leisure as much as for vocation. All the Scripture material should be used to solve this problem, "How to Use Our Leisure." Lev. 23:39-43; Neh. 8:9-18; Zach. 8:5; Matt. 11:6-19; Mark 6:30-32; I Cor. 10:23-33. In the first scripture, Lev. 23:39-43, God enjoins people to take a eight day vacation. The Harvest Home or Thanksgiving festival, during which time the Jews were to live in booths or tabernacles, in commemoration of their dwelling in huts, going through the wilderness, and the giving of "Thanks" for the harvest gathered. The key-note of the passage is "Ye shall rejoice before Jehovah your God." That is the thought which we are to take from it into our rest and recreation, we are to rest and rejoice as in the presence of the Lord, and in such a way as will please him. Without him, rest becomes mere sloth and recreation becomes mere frivolity. With him they become beautiful preparations for the joy of heaven, and the "rest that remained for the people of God." (Heb. 4:9). The second passage, Neh. 8:9-16, teaches us that our joys, recreations and pleasures are to be shared with others; we get only a part of the profit ourselves.

All blessings are enlarged by usefulness. Sunday is not only a day of rest; it is a day of exulting in God, and that is true worship. As the people, under Ezra, read the Bible, they became conscious of their shortcomings, but resolved to live up to the law. This was a great revival, reminding us of great revivals of former days—of the great outdoor meetings, camp-meetings, assemblies and other great gatherings.

Zachariah shows us a beautiful picture of children at play. (Zach. 8:5. This is a vision of the prophet, who sees Jerusalem rebuilt, not desolated, as made by war, but of peace and safety and joy; he could not have expressed the new and happy condition better than by saying that "the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls, playing in the streets thereof."

What would streets be like without boys and girls? Like men and women, the children stand between two extremities—the eternal past and the eternal future—but between the two eternities they trust and play.

In Math. 11:16-19, we see our Lord watching children at their sports and remembering his own childish games. Jesus watches us while we play. He knows how we feel, and what we say. If we are bad and cross and selfish and hard to please, he knows it and doesn't like it. The playground is a good place to show how unselfish and patient and kind and gentle we can be. We find a pleasing picture in Mark 6:30-32. Jesus and Rest. It was the third year of Christ's ministry. The twelve had been sent forth two and two, to spread the good news of his kingdom; they had worked hard preaching, casting out demons and healing the sick; now they came to report to Jesus. When he saw how tired and exhausted they were, he suggested a period of rest. We also are to report to Jesus. He sends us to our tasks, and we are able to come back and talk it over with him, all our successes and failures. How fortunate we are in having such a counsellor—so gentle and patient, so understanding and wise.

Christ's plan for his disciples' "rest" is one of the many examples of the kindly thoughtfulness of Jesus; one of those touches of soft humanity which bring his life into the midst of all we know and love in home. There are three elements of rest provided for those who are able to gain leisure—communion with outward nature, true human fellowship and closer and simpler access to Christ himself. To sum up the whole matter, St. Paul brings it down to this one simple sentence: " whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." (I Cor. 10:31).

The Christian has no choice in the matter; as his life is not his own, it belongs to him who has redeemed it—he has "presented his body a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable to God." (Rom. 12:1). He would not go where Jesus would not go, nor do what Jesus could not sanction; ever and always would he say: "What would Jesus do?"

Would a Christian disregard the admonition of Ps. 1:1: "Walk not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor stand in the way of sinners, nor sit in the seat of the scornful?" No! "His delight is in the law of the Lord, and in his law doth he meditate day and night." (Psalm 1:2).

In all joys and pleasures and leisure, a redeemed soul will be about the "father's business," redeeming the time.

An Appropriate Poem

"Jesus calls us from the tumult of our life's wild, restless sea! Day by day, his sweet voice soundeth saying, 'Christian, follow me.'" satisfactory results. It was concluded that the patient would go to Savannah, Mo. where there is a special hospital for the treatment of this kind of disease.

Mrs. Sporer and son Charles departed Wednesday morning for the south where she will take an exhaustive clinic and treatment and there is extended a hope that she will receive much benefit from the same.

Returned to Hospital

Henry Heebner, who was at the hospital at Omaha for an operation and treatment and who has been home for some time, again this week returned to the institution where he is receiving further treatment.

Successful Meetings Closed

The series of revival meetings which have been in progress at the Christian church of Murray were concluded on last Sunday evening. There were a number of additions to the church and a general feeling manifested of determination of all members to work for the betterment of the church and Bible school.

Many Attend Services Sunday

The revival services which have been in progress for some time at the Christian church at Plattsmouth received a bit of encouragement on last Sunday night and also on Wednesday evening when many members of the church here attended the services and assisted in the work of the meeting. There is a lot of interest shown in the work at Plattsmouth where the Rev. W. A. Farmer is conducting the services. Take a night off and attend these services.

Visiting Friends Here

Mr. and Mrs. I. M. Davis of Lincoln, parents of Mrs. E. W. Milburn, were visiting in Murray on Monday of this week and looking after business matters as well. They were accompanied by Mrs. J. A. McAllister of Long Beach, California but who has been visiting in Lincoln. After visiting many relatives and friends here they returned to Lincoln on Monday evening and from there Mrs. McAllister will soon depart for the coast to spend the winter.

Writes From San Pedro

Leases the Milling Interests

The Murray mills which was operated by Jarvis E. Lancaster up to the first of December was leased to Thomas Jennings. Mr. Jennings is a hard worker in whatever he engages and will put forth every effort to make this institution the success which it deserves. Mr. Jennings desires to make a living from the business which adds to the business interests of Murray.

Dr. J. F. Brendel Still Poorly

Dr. J. F. Brendel has been at the hospital at Omaha for the past two weeks receiving treatment. He was expected to be operated on before this time but his condition is such that it was thought best not to hazard the ordeal until his constitution has become better. It is thought that the operation will occur some time the coming week and it is hoped that when it is over he will entirely recover his former good health.

Library Notes.

The following new books were added to the library this week: Barbary Gate.....Jane Abbot Seed.....Chas. Morris Wild Wind.....Temple Bailey Sunset Pass.....Zane Grey The Silver Platte.....Lida Larimore Children's Stories.....Dickens Little Lame Prince.....Murlock Alice's Adventures in Wonderland.....Carroll Dr. Doolittle.....Lotting In the reading contest between the second and third grades, Clarke Churchill read the greatest number of books during book week.

Buy Christmas Seals.

Mrs. J. F. Brendel will head the local committee in charge of the 25th annual Christmas seal sale of the Nebraska Tuberculosis association. She is now perfecting her plans and will have the able assistance of Mrs. C. Spangler, vice chairman, the following helpers: Mrs. Guy Wiles, Mrs. Milburn, Mrs. R. Kennedy and Mrs. Tyson. Supplies from the Omaha headquarters of the Nebraska Tuberculosis association have arrived. These include the 1932 seal sale poster, which is an enlarged picture of this year's seal. Schools, churches, business houses, and residences will place this poster in a prominent place during the campaign to remind the public that their annual health drive is on. Christmas seal envelopes are also at hand and quantities of Christmas seals.

This year's Christmas seal is unusually attractive and appealing. It is multicolored and shows two lucky children singing carols in the snow. In their hands is a huge song book.

Since Christmas holds a special significance for children, this year's Christmas seal is particularly potent and appealing.

Cass County Farm Bureau Notes

Copy furnished from Office of County Agent Waincotte

How to Make Hens Lay?

Many calls have come to the Farm Bureau office the past two weeks, asking, "How can I get my hens to lay?"

Of course this is a very timely question with eggs selling for 24c per dozen. One of the reasons for this price is because too many people didn't ask, "How can I make my hens lay," two months ago. As a result of these calls many field visits have been made by the agent and some of the findings are: The old hens have laid well during the summer and late fall and are now in a molt. They are consuming the feed that should be going into some prospective good pullets. A hen will lay on the average about 80% as many eggs as a pullet so the old hens should have been given a ride if the pullets needed the room and feed and the owner did not wish to keep them for his breeding pens.

Overcrowded conditions, insufficient feed of the right kind and poor housing facilities are the three chief reasons why pullets are not laying. Thin out the less desirable pullets and old hens that are out of production and not being bred for breeders and make plenty of room for the pullets. A hen needs about three square feet of floor space in the house.

Even though we have more feed on Cass county farms than we have had for four years, thousands of hens are going hungry. It is easy to see that in order to fatten a steer or a hog, feed has to be kept before them all the time and of the fattening kind. The same thing goes for a hen. She must have feed at all times and of the kind that produces eggs. The more feed you can get into her system the more eggs you get out. What she picks up at the grain elevator and hog lot puts her in the steer class for producing fat and not eggs.

A good ration that is economical is: Ground corn 200 lbs.; ground oats, 100 lbs.; ground wheat, 100 lbs.; ground alfalfa, 100 lbs.; tankage or meat scraps, 100 lbs.; salt, 10 lbs.

There are many other good rations but four of these ingredients are available on most farms. Bran can be substituted for the wheat if necessary. This ration, kept in good feeders and plenty of them, will produce eggs when other conditions are favorable.

The third reason why pullets are not laying is because of poor housing conditions. A dark, clammy house will not lend any help to the hen in purchasing eggs. Many houses can be easily fixed up by tearing out the partitions, putting some muslin or glass frames in front, putting a straw left above if the roof is higher than 8 or 9 feet and by banking the house with manure, straw or dirt.

Yes, all of these things should have been done in September but it is not too late to start yet.

Seedling Trees Again Available.

Farmers in Cass county have ordered 30,000 trees through the Farm Bureau and extension service for windbreaks in the past five years. These seedling trees are again available and every land owner should make the starting of a windbreak a part of his spring program. It is a real weather protection, fuel saver in winter, and adds beauty and hominess to his place.

Practically the same varieties that were offered last year will be available this spring. C. W. Watkins, extension forester, says. Though some red cedar seedlings will be available for planting, the distribution of this variety will be restricted to western Nebraska in order to help prevent the spread of cedar rust among apple trees.

In the past six years it is estimated that Nebraska farmers have planted approximately twelve million seedlings for woodlot and windbreak purposes. Last spring 950,000 were distributed in practically every county in the state. Favorable weather conditions made ideal growing conditions and the percentage of survival was large.

Tax Primer Available.

The first four copies of the University of Nebraska tax circular is available at the Farm Bureau office. Farmers are already calling for this publication. One office caller said, "I have found that the other fellow's views may be misleading on the tax proposition and if we want a change we need to know what and how the present system works, so I want to study the question myself."

The circulars will cost 5c each or 50c for the set of 12.

WESCOTT'S

Start a "Fix-It" Club.

Nebraska boys and girls are to have a new 4-H club, a committee of agricultural extension agents announced today. The new project will fit in particularly well with the times.

Like the content of the new club lessons, the name of the new project is to be just a common, everyday sort of name. For want of something more dignified, the committee decided the new club should be known as a "Fix-It" club.

Just what the "IT" that is to be fixed will include, has not been definitely decided. The committee has started work on hundreds of suggestions that have come to it. At present they are looking on nine main divisions, including repair of farm and farm home equipment, buildings, clothing, house furnishings, removal of fire and accident hazards, a general cleanup of the farmstead, pest control, and home and community recreation.

Games, stunts, and tricks to provide entertainment for the family and for small groups of people are to be a definite part of the Fix It club project. The committee felt that recreation on the farm during the depression needs fixing as much as material things.

Written lessons will include definite instruction regarding specific repair jobs. Members and leaders will have to scratch their heads and use their ingenuity in working out problems not mentioned in the lessons. Contrary to usual 4-H club custom, the lessons in the new project will not be put out in sequence. Members and leaders can start their activities at any season of the year and have plenty of timely things to do. The committee hopes to have the written material completed by the first of February. This club will be organized and carried out on the regular 4-H club basis. It is designed to help give the young folks that are through school but just staying at home, something worthwhile for the winter months. If there are five or more young people in your neighborhood why not get in touch with the farm bureau and let them help you organize a "Fix-It" club.
