Material Ready for "Fix-It Club"

Most of the literature for the new 4-H Fix-It club project arrived in the county agents' office the past week and the one remaining circular will be available by about the first of February.

The circulars available include one on recreation, one on accident and fire prevention, and one on pest control. The circular that is to come deals with the fixing up of the farmstead, farm buildings, farm equipment, home equipment, home furnishings and clothing.

The recreation circular has in it a number of games, stunts, puzzles, and tricks which young people and even the old folks will enjoy at home and in small neighborhood parties and entertainments. The circular urges the boys and girls to learn to lead games, put on stunts, do tricks, and solve puzzles for themselves and other people.

The accident and fire prevention and the pest control phases of the project are minor requirements but they offer possibilities for boys and girls to correct situations around every farm and home.

Choose Proper Vegetable Varieties.

Requests coming to the Farm Bureau office indicate that the lovely weather of the past few weeks is giving many people the garden fever. Now is a good time to make plans for your vegetable garden, as to location, size and plan for planting.

Special thought should be given to seed and varieties. When purchasing seed for a farm vegetable garden it pay to obtain seed of good quality and of a good variety. It pays to depend upon proved varieties, differences between varieties are very slight; in others it is important to select the variety with care. These and other pertinent suggestions are emphasized in Extension Circular 1211, "The Farm Vegetable Garden" published by the Nebraska College of Agriculture.

A complete list of the varieties of vegetables adapted to general use in Nebraska are given in this circular. Ten different varieties of tomatoes are listed as suitable for this state, while the number of varieties of peas is limited to four. Quality and adaptability to Nebraska conditions have been considered as the factors of first importance in developing this list. This circular also deals with plans, problems, and management of the farm garden. Copies may be obtained at the office of the county extension agents.

"Jesus Chooses the Twelve"

Mark 3:7-19.

The popularity of Jesus had increased to such proportion that people came, not only from Palestine, but from Tyre and Sidon, to the north-west, and from east of Jordan, Idumaea, the country settled by Esau.

Such a movement to hear a famous preacher has never been known before nor since. Had John the Baptist stirred up the masses by his peculiar preaching; Jesus by his unique work of preaching, teaching and healing had aroused the people to such a state of mind that they wanted more—they had gained an appetite for religion. They brought their sick with them.

The fame of Jesus had reached the highest point; the synagogue could not hold the multitude, hence he held open air service; and then the people pressed upon him to touch the hem of his garments, that he had to find a way that he might preach so that all could hear. So he selects Peter's boat for a pulpit. The shelving beach gave the people a chance to see and hear the preacher.

If our modern day preachers had a message from God, they would not have to talk to empty pews.

The work was very exacting—there was no let up, and Jesus' great heart was wonderfully stirred as he saw the havoc sin had wrought. The unclean spirits also were greatly disturbed, for he had come to destroy the works of the devil. How did they know him? Well, their wrath against Jesus was great, because it was on his account that they were cast out of heaven. He did not need their testimony. He also told those whom he healed not to make it known, because it would endanger his life and hinder his work; it would stir his enemies to action.

The work had become too heavy for Jesus himself. Besides, he knew that his time on earth was short, and it was necessary to train men who could carry on the work after his death. The choice of the twelve was one of the most important incidents of his whole ministry. In preparation for this event, Jesus spent the previous night in prayer. How much more should men call on God for wisdom and guidance in the great moments of life, for then we would blunder less and make fewer mistakes.

The place where Jesus selected his apostles is given as the Horns of Huttin, or the Mount of Beatitudes, west of the Sea of Galilee.

There were, in the cases of the leading apostles, three stages of this call. First a call to faith in Christ, given where John was baptizing; second, a call to follow Christ, given by the Sea of Galilee, to Peter, Andrew, James and John, and third a dedication of the entire company of twelve to be Christ's intimate companions, his special pupils, his representatives before the world, and his continuers of his work after his death.

There are four lists of the apostles: Matt. 10:2-4; Mark 3:16-19; Luke 6:14-16; Acts 1:13. (Memorize the names). Twelve were appointed, one for each tribe of Israel—a small number with which to win the world, but then they had the Son of God for their leader. "That they might be with him!" That was their education, being constantly with Christ, hearing his marvelous addresses, witnessing his wonderful works, holding intimate conversation with him, and aiding him in ever more effective ways.

From that time, the training of the twelve was perhaps Christ's most important work, a work in which he could not be thwarted by his bitter foes. They were taught how to preach, given authority over demons. They learned by their successes and failures, the same as men do today.

A characterization of the twelve would be in place:

1—Simon Peter. He was a rough fisherman, impetuous, wayward, non-cowardly, heroic, but a man of staunch loyalty, always ready to take the lead. He was so emphatically human, so full of good intentions, so often blundering, so laden with familiar regrets, so compassionate.

2—Andrew, the patron Saint of Scotland. He never preached a great sermon; he never jumped into the sea, or cut anybody's ear off, like his famous brother. He was the man of decision. His greatest work was in bringing Peter to Christ. He is the "Finder."

3—James. He is the first of the apostles to suffer martyrdom. A man of fiery temper. Very ambitious; he with Peter and his brother John belonged to the inner circle.

4—John. We have three sets of brothers. Can you name them? He is the disciple whom Jesus loved. Five books in the New Testament are from his pen. Can you name them?

5—Philip. We know little about him. He brought Nathaniel to Jesus and it was he who asked Jesus, "Show us the Father."

6—Bartholomew. He wondered if any good thing could come from Nazareth. He was a mystic, a man of contemplation.

7—Matthew. Noted for his humility and quick decision in following Jesus.

8—Thomas. We speak of him as "doubting," but "courageous" is better. He was ready to go and die with Jesus. (John 11:7-16).

9—James, the son of Alphaeus. Nothing is known of him, only he was one of the twelve. A faithful worker.

10—Simon (Zelotes) or Zealot, belonged to a patriotic party advocating insurrection against Rome. Nothing further is noted about him. Jesus had need of him and had work for him.

11—Judas, the brother of James (See number 9), also called Thaddeus; only reference in scripture is John 14:22. He is one of the least known of the apostles. Faithful in little. That is the triumph and final achievement of fidelity.

12—Judas Iscariot. Jesus could not save him. He had the chance, but turned thief, a traitor, a betrayer.

Such were the men whom Jesus chose to represent him and his cause to the world.
