Heavy Life and Property Loss on the West Coast

Earthquake There Friday Night Toppled Buildings by Scores—130 Among the Known Dead

Reports today from earthquake-stricken Long Beach and surrounding country indicate a larger death list than first anticipated. The number in Long Beach is now over 100 and the total for the area exceeds 130.

Information is still coming in slowly, and names of the dead are not yet available. One former Nebraska resident is among the known dead, Ira Horton, 41 years old, who resided in Omaha up until eight years ago.

The safety of all the Plattsmouth and Cass county people residing in the stricken zone, numbering more than thirty families, has not been determined.

Violent earthquakes shook southern California last night, resulting in more than a hundred dead and several thousand injured, together with widespread destruction of property that will run into millions of dollars.

Shortly after the first great tremor, which was the heaviest of a total of 130 of varying intensity that followed, announcement was made on the radio causing apprehension for the safety of scores of former Cass county and Nebraska people now residing in southern California.

The brunt of the terrific convulsion was borne by Long Beach, where live the greater part of the people from this immediate locality who have migrated to California to make their homes.

Information was slow coming in, due to the fact that telephone and telegraph lines were down, and it was not until well after midnight that authentic reports were being received on the situation.

The heaviest death toll was at Long Beach, where 55 are dead and a thousand injured. In Los Angeles, 12 were reported dead and 3,000 injured.

Farmers Holiday Meeting On Thursday of last week the Farmers Holiday association of Cass county met at the Manley hall, with a very interesting and worthwhile meeting being held.

The Red Cross in Washington awaited word from its regional headquarters in San Francisco before arranging to swing its huge resources into action.

The big tremor was followed by five other lesser ones of varying intensity. The seventh at 7:55 showed a marked diminishing in force, and hope was engendered that the quake was over, but the eighth, an hour later, rocked with greater strength, adding to the wreckage and casualty list.

A veritable army of volunteer surgeons and nurses was recruited and as calls came in the nearest volunteer doctors were assigned.

Shortly after midnight a company of 150 sailors and 100 marines from the U. S. S. Pennsylvania were assigned to patrol duty in the devastated areas.

The cause of the disturbance is laid to a mighty upheaval in the ocean southwest of Long Beach. The area of destruction extended from Santa Ana, in Orange county, to Hermosa Beach in Los Angeles, with the force of the tremors being felt to lesser degree throughout southern California.

Ask $5,000 in Damages for Auto Wreck at Murray

Silas M. Tyson of Nebraska City Sues Emery F. Marshall for Collision of Cars.

From Saturday's Daily An action was filed in the office of the clerk of the district court today, in which Silas M. Tyson, of Nebraska City is the plaintiff and Emery F. Marshall, the defendant.

The plaintiff alleges in his petition that on December 14, 1932, he was driving his Ford coupe south on highway No. 76 and going at a very low rate of speed and when approaching the junction east of Murray of No. 1, the car had been brought almost to a stop.

The defendant was coming east on No. 1 and when coming into No. 76 had swung his Whippet coach northwest and crashed into the car of the plaintiff, Tyson. It is claimed that the car of Mr. Marshall was traveling at a high rate of speed at the time.

The plaintiff further claims that in the collision he was caught between the steering wheel of the car and the door and suffered a severe spine injury. It is claimed that the plaintiff was rendered a permanent cripple as the result of the accident and for which he asks the sum of $5,000 and also to recover for the damage to the auto in the sum of $145.

HAPPINESS

A mouse and a frog started one day. In quest of happiness which was just over the way. They traveled along until the sun sank in the west. And entered an inn where they thought to find rest.

There was no room that could be found To entertain the personages so profound. So they sought shelter elsewhere. For such honored guests, Fearing they might become constant pests.

The next morning they took an early start, And met on their way a doe and a hart. Informing them as to their singular quest, Became strangely filled with a spirit of zest.

So trudging together they came to a farm. And entering in without fear of harm. They saw a reaper mowing his hay. And inquiring of him which is the right way. But as they consulted, a fox came along And sang to the seekers quite a song.

They knew the fox was a wise old jay. So they stayed with the farmer to help make hay. The man was interested in what they said. So took them in and supplied them with bread. And prepared a place where they could sleep And offer their prayers for such an upkeep.

Nert morning they arose with a gracious smile. And saw the good man's face radiant all the while. For a cup of cold water he gave them to drink. They left full of gratitude and began to think. That the place they sought is found just at hand. Where you are sojourning in your own nature land.

This is a fable as you already know. And to find the place for happiness to grow. Is not on the mountains' lofty peak. Nor down in the valley where rumbles the creek. But within man's consciousness where burns the desire. To start where you are, and the Master aspire.
