Prowlers are Routed from Country Home

From Saturday's Daily. Last night near the midnight hour, Mrs. E. J. Ferrie, residing south of this city along highway No. 75, was aroused by the sound of a car approaching along the roadway in the yard and looking out saw the lights of the car in the farm yard road. She had gotten up and started out into the yard, thinking it was someone in trouble, but as she drew near the scene she saw two men in the roadway and who started toward where the car was parked some distance away, having been driven some distance from the roadway north, the driver going on the wrong side of the road and parking the car. Mrs. Ferrie reached the vicinity of the car but was unable to see the number owing to the fact that the lights were turned off on the car and the flashlight that she carried was not strong enough to see the number plates of the car. The men stated that they were from Fort Crook and were soldiers but later on being questioned by Mrs. Ferrie they stated that they were from Omaha. Mr. Ferrie later appeared on the scene and at which the driver of the car stepped on the gas and drove away before the car number could be secured.

Party of Three Motorists Pay Call at Ferrie Home South of This City, But Frightened Away.

The description of the three men in the party given by Mrs. Ferrie to the office of Sheriff Homer Sylvester was excellent and should aid in the identification of the men if they are found trying to raid other places.

One man was reported as being in the neighborhood of six feet two inches, light complexion, weighing about 185 pounds, while the second man on the outside of the car was reported as about five feet four inches, dark complexion and with sleek black hair. Both of these men wore golf pants and sleeveless sweaters and were hatless.

The man seated in the car and driving could not be seen as well but apparently had dark trousers and white shirt and wore a straw hat.

The Ferrie family have suffered the loss of chickens and gasoline several times in the last months and it is thought that the party may have planned another raid on the place had not Mrs. Ferrie aroused and drove them away.

TO EXCHANGE SERVICES

Omaha.—Business Managers M. B. Parks and Mrs. E. J. Wolcott announced that the "Omaha co-operative exchange" will be formally presented to the public here Thursday night.

Under this plan, which has been operating experimentally a short time, the doctor who needs patients, groceries, auto repairs and plumber services, or Mr. "X" and Mr. "Y," who have services or commodities which they can give or need, but no money, would be able to have some of these needs filled. As Mr. Parks explained it:

"A dentist was one of the first to join. He offered $200 worth of service and was given credit for that amount. The dentist needed a painter at his home. This painter had a sister who needed dental work."

The group believes this will prove a practical plan for effecting that long sought teamwork between money shy farmers and city laborers.

"The exchange will handle all kinds of professional services, artistic talent, labor and material products," the managers said.

President Sets July for Start of Big Program

Roosevelt Opens Sweeping Offensive in Economic Emergency; Granted Wide Powers.

Washington.—President Roosevelt, with full power from congress, opened a sweeping offensive on the economic emergency on all fronts and designated July as the beginning of our national movement back to work."

In a day of almost unparalleled activity at the white house, he ordered into immediate operation the vast public works, industrial stimulation and railroad reorganization programs and designated the field marshals to administer them.

Earlier he had signed the bills authorizing these all-inclusive powers. He signalled Secretary Wallace also to begin the active campaign for improved agricultural prices and orders were issued for acreage reduction and the levying of a processing tax to provide the estimated benefits of 150 millions to wheat growers.

Cotton comes next. Two special cabinet boards were appointed to work with the administrators of public works and industrial supervision who were designated formally as Col. Donald H. Sawyer and Hugh S. Johnson, respectively.

A fund of 400 millions was made immediately available for highway construction in co-operation with the states. An immediate start on the 238 million naval construction program was ordered with its goal of thirty-two new ships under the London limitations treaty.

Mr. Roosevelt appointed Joseph B. Eastman of the interstate commerce commission as the newly created railroad co-ordinator. Eastman announced an intention for early exploration of the possibilities of reorganizing the carriers in the interest of economy.

Waking up Friday to find the last of his emergency bills received from the adjourned congress, Mr. Roosevelt went eagerly and confidently to the task he has placed upon himself to guide the nation to better days.

Jubilantly he received congressional leaders to witness the signing of the final batch of measures they had guided thru. In rapid order he affixed his signature to the Glass-Steagall banking reform, the public works-industrial control and the railroad re-organization measures.

Then he summoned to the white house his cabinet and the men he has had working on the emergency proposals. Before boarding a train Friday night for a two weeks ocean cruise up the north Atlantic coast he had the machinery in operation.

The president made it clear that he is placing his greatest hope for breaking the depression upon the public works-industrial bill, which he described as the "most far reaching legislation ever enacted by an American congress."

He outlined at length in a formal statement his policies for this administration. "Between these twin efforts," he said, "public works and industrial re-employment—it is not too much to expect that a great many men and women can be taken from the ranks of the unemployed before winter comes. It is the most important attempt of this kind in history. As in the great crisis of the World war, it puts a whole people to the simple but vital test: 'Must we go on in many groping, disorganized, separate units to defeat or shall we move as one great team to victory?'"

WRECK PIANO "FOR FUN"

Omaha, June 16.—It was all good clean fun when the boys hacked the piano with axes, but it provided some few tense moments. The annual outing of the Omaha Executives association was the setting. One feature was a vocal by Leslie J. Strain in the clubhouse at the Lakewood club. Scattered boys greeted the singing. When Strain continued three huskies marched into the room and attacked the piano with axes, smashing it to bits. Sometime later, it was learned that the entertainment committee had paid $5 for the piano, and had moved it into the club on the sly in place of the regular piano.
