Prohibition to be Enforced as Long as Lawful

Postmaster General Farley Says There Can Be No Letup Unless Repeal Comes.

Washington.—From the justice department's reorganized prohibition bureau and from Postmaster General Farley came assertions that enforcement of the dry law would continue unabated as long as it is on the statute books. While the radically shaken-up enforcement unit was readjusting itself under the bureau of investigation of the justice department, Farley, leader in the repeal movement, told newspapermen: "The prohibition law is in the statutes of the United States and will be there unless and until the eighteenth amendment is repealed. And as long as it is there the law will be and should be enforced."

Attorney General Cummings, from his office at Greenwich, Conn., revealed that 800 employees of the enforcement bureau had been dropped in the reorganization. Officials here had estimated only 600 had lost their jobs. As Cummings described the reorganization, President Roosevelt's executive order had abolished the functions of both the bureau of investigation and the prohibition bureau. In their place was created immediately a "division of investigation."

Virtually all of the old bureau of investigation's employees had been rehired, Cummings explained, and the head of the bureau, J. Edgar Hoover, became chief of the new division. John S. Hurley, assistant director of prohibition enforcement, was made his assistant. "The net result of the foregoing steps," the attorney general said, "is a consolidation of the powers of the two abolished bureaus and the re-employment of the personnel of both, except about 800 employees in the bureau of prohibition, whose services, in view of the economies effected, will be no longer required."

Cummings had only this to say of the retirement of A. V. Dalrymple as director of the prohibition bureau, who charged "double-crossing" on the part of some of his associates: "The new set-up automatically eliminated the position formerly held by Major Dalrymple, who for that reason will no longer be connected with the department of justice."

While the new division went about the enforcement of the dry law, it was stated by one of its officials that no relaxation was intended so long as the eighteenth amendment remained in the constitution. Should the amendment be repealed, it was said, the division would devote most of its attention to enforcing laws prohibiting shipment from wet to dry territory.—State Journal.

"IN TRANSIT" TAGS OUTLAWED

"In Transit" automobile cards are unlawful in this state following the going into effect of the new law on Wednesday night. In speaking of the matter the Nebraska City News-Press gives an interview with County Treasurer Charles Kelley of Otoe county:

Automobile dealers have made inquiries at the office of the county treasurer as to how they are going to accommodate buyers who live in other counties after August 10, the date on which paper tags are discontinued under the law.

Treasurer Kelly has advised dealers that it would appear to be necessary for the dealer actually to make delivery of the vehicle to the point in the county in which the purchaser resides.

"There is a provision of the law that requires plates to be carried on all motor vehicles operated on the highways. There is a definite prohibition against using temporary numbers, except for cars in transit from the factory or assembling plant to the dealer's place of business," Treasurer Kelly said.

"Under these conditions it appears there are but two ways in which this can be accomplished; one is to have the purchaser, that is the new owner, have the car registered in his county before delivery starts, the other is for the dealer actually to make the delivery, using his dealer's license plates," Treasurer Kelly concluded.

ASKS CASE BE DISMISSED

Erza P. Carey, defendant in a $15,000 damage suit filed by Mrs. Bertha Lewis, has filed an answer to her amended petition recently filed in district court, making a general denial of the allegations.

Plaintiff brought the damage suit following an automobile accident which occurred a short distance northwest of Plattsmouth on October 22, 1932. She set out that she had purchased a second-hand automobile of the defendant a short time before and that he guaranteed the car to be in good condition. It is further set forth that while driving to Omaha on the above mentioned date the car went into the ditch and that the accident was due to a broken spring. She asks $15,000 for permanent injuries, $12.55 for hospital and $6 for physician's services.

Defendant in his answer sets out that plaintiff was driving her car at a high rate of speed and in a careless and negligent manner and that when she drove off the pavement onto a hardsurfaced road, which was rough, she lost control of the car and went into the ditch.

He asks that the petition of plaintiff be dismissed.—Nebraska City News-Press.
