Bible School Lesson Study!

Sunday, August 20 By L. Neitzel, Murdock, Neb.

"Samuel"

I Sam. 3:1-10; 12:1-4.
The stirring scenes of this lesson are only equaled by the life of Moses and St. Paul. Born in answer to prayer by a pious mother, consecrated to the services of God before his birth; serving in the tabernacle at the age of 12 years; called to deliver a message to Eli, regarding his two sons that lived to displease God, who foretold their doom; when this came to pass and Eli died, 98 years old, it was Samuel who took up the work to judge and rule Israel. Those were dark days, but Jehovah sustained him.

The call of Samuel is a very interesting study. As he lay asleep in the court of the tabernacle, in a time when the spiritual life of the people was at a low stage and no spiritual leader among them, before the lamp went out, at an early hour in the morning that God called Samuel; an inner voice aroused him from his sleep, and he "ran" to the priest. Would to God that all whom God calls would make such haste to obey his voice! Many have lost the opportunity of finding God because they did not obey. Where are the boys who run at the call of duty? They are the successful men of tomorrow!

But Samuel was not acquainted with God in his consciousness and spiritual life, knew him not as a living person, giving commands to men to obey. Three times the call is repeated, but Samuel shows no impatience. He does not say: "This is the third time you have called me, and twice for nothing. Now what do you want?" Samuel was sweet tempered; he evidently pitied the infirm old man, and deeply honored him. Eli perceived by this time that Jehovah had called the child and gave him proper instructions. How may we know the call of God? God uses various ways to make his will known to men. The inner voice, impressions that we cannot shake off; through incidents in our life; the call of the church—some ways that he uses. In some cases God has appeared to men in visions and dreams. But the call is unmistakable if the heart of man is attuned to God.

Now comes a great catastrophe over Israel. A war against the Philistines is lost; in their desperation they take the ark of God into battle (which God had not ordered as at the fall of Jericho) and it falls into the hands of the enemy. Jehovah punished the Philistines when they placed the ark in the temple of Dagon, their God. It was sent from one capital to another—Ashdod, Gath, Ekron—finally back to Israel in the house of Abinadab at Bethshemesh, where it remained until David brought it to Jerusalem.

The Philistines oppressed Israel for twenty years and introduced Baal worship with the beastial rites of Ashtaroth. But Samuel's influence was gaining with the people—an assembly was called to Mizpeh for a revival of Jehovah worship; this occasion the Philistines improved and came with an army—but Samuel's prayer and Jehovah's "thunder" gained the victory; and a monument was raised up called "Ebenezer." After this Samuel returned to his birthplace, got married and had two sons, Joel and Abiah. Then Samuel circuits and holds court in many places and welds the people together into a solid group and becomes the new founder of the Hebrew state. Now the time is ripe for a monarchy—caused principally by the same error that Eli had made before him. Samuel had not trained his boys right and the people rejected them as judges. So long the government had been a theocracy, i. e. the Lord was their king. To exhibit and confirm the great truth of monotheism was the chief end of all their institutions. To guard this they were isolated and placed in the holy land, and had but one place of worship. Samuel re-monstrated with them, but to no avail. "Give us a King" is their cry.

We are to study next week the stirring story of the choice of Israel's first king, the sturdy young farmer, Saul. This must have been the saddest time of Samuel's life.

Visualize with us:
The last call has gone out for an assembly at Gilgal, and here he gives his farewell address. Who is not moved with a deep sense of admiration as we behold the giant in his masterful presentation of his life among them from child up. No one can point out a flaw in his walk and conduct. Many opportunities there were as a judge to take a bribe and enrich himself. Boldly he challenges any one to witness against him. (Here we are reminded of the saying of our Lord: "Which of you convinceth me of sin?" John 8:46.)

We admire the old gray-headed judge; he gets a clean bill from the people. How many can point to such a record? Who is there among the children of men who would dare to challenge the world to find a flaw in their life? Only as men are washed and cleansed in the blood of Jesus Christ do they become spotless and pure in the sight of God—their unrighteousness God will remember no more for ever. (Isa. 38:17)

Here is the proof that man can live a faultless life. Samuel did. "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." (Phil. 4:13.)
