Schools Face Serious Time This Fall

Decreased Budgets in Practically All Schools and Increased Enrollments Is the Order.

Nebraska school officials have before them this fall the enormous task of providing adequate educational opportunities for more pupils, with fewer teachers and smaller budgets than ever before in the history of the state. With continued scarcity of jobs and efforts at minimizing or abolishing child labor, high school enrollments this year are likely to approximate the increase of five per cent represented in the enrollment of 73,255 pupils a year ago—this in the face of the fact that there has been eliminated, on the average, one teacher in each of the approximately 700 high schools in the state.

Present indications show that enrollment of free high school tuition students will again increase. A year ago the enrollment of 22,371 tuition pupils represented an increase of about five per cent over that of the preceding year. School districts have the problem this fall of giving training of undiminished quality to tuition pupils at a tuition rate reduced twenty-five per cent by action of the legislature this spring. The new rate is $81 a year as compared with the old figure, $108.

"Reduced valuations and reduced tax levies, coupled with increasing costs of supplies and equipment, and increasing costs of living forecast a critical year for schools," Secretary C. A. Dowers, State Teachers Association, indicates.

Added Responsibilities for the Schools—

Nebraska schools, along with schools throughout the country, are faced this fall with addition responsibilities, despite reduced budgets, as a result of the abolition of child labor by provision of several codes devised under the NRA program. Nearly 16,300 children between 10 and 18 years of age, were gainfully employed in the state, according to the 1930 census. Some 3,200 children aged 10 to 15 years inclusive, were engaged in gainful occupations in Nebraska, a 1933 report of the National Child Labor Committee states.

Stewart, Mrs. Charles Boedecker II, Mrs. Herman Richter, Dorothy Todd, Ellen Nora Meisinger, Geraldine Sudduth, Mrs. Leonard Lutz, Mrs. Fred Meisinger, Mrs. Fred Lutz, Marie Lutz, and the guest of honor, Mrs. Brandt.
