HE TALKS STRAIGHT STUFF

Whether the agricultural adjustment administration, the A. A. A. that is the twin sister of the N. R. A., eventually succeeds or fails, Secretary Wallace is doing useful and intelligent work in telling the public—not the farmers alone but all of us—what the problem is. Not promising the earth with a fence around it, not blustering at any who get in the way, he takes up the thing that is before the country; he puts down two and two and makes four of it.

Mr. Wallace said in a recent address that "President Roosevelt George Peek and I and all of us in the agricultural adjustment administration are convinced this dilemma of bursting warehouses and starving multitudes must be solved." No one in the country is going to disagree with that. But the solution does not rest with Wallace, Roosevelt and Peek alone.

Unless we restore world trade, we must "take out of use the 40 million surplus acres which were planted during the wartime boom," Wallace says. "As long as we remain a creditor nation with high tariff policies, refusing to accept foreign goods in payment, those acres should not be tilled."

No government and no nation can pay for surpluses—of anything—that are not consumed. It might be done once or twice, but the surplus must then disappear. "Until our people have the vision to adopt a long-time world trading policy which is in keeping with our position as creditors, we must engage in the delicate process of adjusting basic production downward."

This is hard saying for the farmer. But it is better than lying to him. It is better than promising him that if he will vote to maintain a home market at high prices for industry, there will somehow be something in it for him.

The farmer hasn't had a square deal and knows it. Yet he has not been willing to execute his long-standing threat that if he could not be the beneficiary of the sky high tariffs, there should be none. And the market for his products was sold out. It was sold out because it depended on the foreign purchasers being able to sell goods in this country in return.

The American farmer went to the polls and voted for governments which instead of taking care of the wheat he could produce better and more cheaply than anyone else, proceeded to bar out, for instance, pocket knives produced better and more cheaply abroad, in order to make a market for someone who wanted to produce pocket knives over here. The farmer's market was traded for the benefit of those who wanted to make big money and make it fast. But when you make big money fast, you don't give employment to as many people as were employed in producing from the soil at a small margin for subsistence.

Now we are at a place to which this policy led us. Mr. Wallace has to tell the farmers that so long as we stick to our policy of not letting the rest of the world pay in goods, we must reduce our production. We can't buy the surplus hogs forever, although it is the thought of those who ship in the pigs called for, but not the hogs, that government can keep on buying. We can't get the money from those who profited unjustly. They have not, all put together, enough to pay for the production that is not usefully consumed.

Mr. Wallace is engaged in the unpopular task of telling the truth. He tells it to men who have been fooled and betrayed often enough. He knows it is better than pretending that the government by making paper money for all can help the farmer.—Milwaukee Journal.

Tailored Finishes Give Style. Suggestions on the choice and construction of appropriate finishes and other details that help to put style into garments were given to project leaders at the training meetings the past week.

72 leaders representing thirty-six clubs received this training and will present the work to the women in their home community.

Attend the first meeting of the local project club in your community and learn how to make various tailored finishes.

4-H Finish Up

The week of October 25th has been designated as "Nebraska 4-H Achievement Week." We hope that all Cass county clubs may be completed by that time and that all reports and leaders summaries will be filed at the Farm Bureau office.

The increased enrollment this summer calls for a higher percent of finish-up to maintain the average of the past few years. Have you filled out your report yet? If not get the blank from your local leader, make it out and return as soon as possible. Candidates for trips and awards are named from those having filed reports. Will you be eligible?

English Apple Pie

The following recipe, of Mrs. True Homemaker's, is easy to make and provides a delicious dessert:

- 1 C. light brown sugar.
- ¾ C. flour.
- 1 C. butter.
- ½ t. salt.

Blend together the above ingredients as if making pie crust. See that the butter is thoroughly mixed with the dry ingredients and that no large lumps are left. Have ready 10 apples which have been peeled and cut in thin slices as for pie. Place these in a baking dish. (It is not necessary to butter the baking dish.) Over the apples place the above mixture. Do not add any moisture to this first mixture. It is dry, in fact it has the appearance of pie crust before the liquid is added. Place a cover over this and put in moderate oven and bake one hour or longer. At the end of this time, remove cover and let brown. Cool and serve either with whipped or plain cream.

Rooter's Day

The 1933 Rooter's Day for the swine producers of Nebraska will be held at the University of Nebraska college of agriculture on Friday, October 20.

Although no definite program for the day has been arranged as yet, a discussion of the agricultural adjustment act as it applies to corn and hogs will be taken up. Two representatives of the corn-hog section of the adjustment administration will be in Lincoln for the session. Prof. Wm. J. Loeffel of the animal husbandry department has charge of the entire program.

Cass county farmers will be particularly interested in the 1933 Rooter's Day, it is thought, since the economic side of swine production will be stressed. Dan Hildebrand of Seward, president of the Nebraska Livestock Breeder's and Feeder's association and who acted as one of a committee of 25 in working on the emergency hog situation, will appear on the program. Particular attention is expected to be directed toward a discussion of the corn-hog program which may get under way within the next two months.

Experimental livestock at the college of agriculture will be on display for visitors to the campus on Rooter's Day. Reports on tests recently concluded will be another feature.

Treat Bindweed Now

This is the time to kill the European Bindweed, or commonly known as Creeping Charlie. This is Nebraska's worst weed and it can be killed by applying 3 lbs. of sodium chlorate to the square rod.

Inquire at the Farm Bureau office for full instructions about applying the chemical.

Bible School Lesson Study!

Sunday, October 15th By L. Neitzel, Murdock, Neb.

"Paul in Antioch"

Acts 11:19-30; 12:25.

Much of historical data goes into this lesson study. Claudius becomes Emperor of Rome A. D. 41. The church at Antioch was founded A. D. 38-41. Barnabas goes to Antioch A. D. 43. Saul goes to Antioch A. D. 43. Aid was sent to Jerusalem by Saul and Barnabas A. D. 44 or 45. Return of Saul and Barnabas, with Mark, to Antioch, A. D. 45 or 46. The student of history will find these dates of great help to fix the work of the church in his mind.

The martyrdom of Stephen was only the beginning of an increased persecution of the Christians. The raging Saul led the attack, backed by the Sanhedrin. They were bound to exterminate, if possible, this "Way," as the new religion was then called. The flock was scattered, but they took their religion with them. That is not always the case when people move to new localities. Many church members are lost that way. The persecution proved just the opposite of what it was intended to do. In all directions, the disciples went "speaking the word" only to Jews. "The word" was the Gospel, the word of life, the good news that God had come to earth in the person of his son and had died on the cross to save men from their sins. Christ had confined his mission virtually to his own people. Some of these were men of Cyprus and Cyrene. Who would not think of pentecost, were sixteen nationalities named! Cyprus was the home of Barnabas. Cyrene an important city in northern Africa, belonging to Greece, in the country we call Tripoli. Simon of Cyrene carried Jesus' cross on the way to calvary.

When these came to Antioch, they spoke unto the Greeks also—preaching the Lord Jesus. The whole Greek language was spoken over Syria and throughout western Asia; Greeks being regarded as the highest type of non-Jews. God honored the work of these men, so that great numbers believed and turned unto the Lord.

Antioch came into existence about 300 B. C., being a creation of Alexander the Great. In Paul's time it was a great city, being counted as the third city of the world, Rome being first, Alexandria second and Antioch third. A description of its beautiful location on the river Orontes, with its surrounding hills and its main street four and a half miles long, with an arcade on each side, making this street unrivaled among the cities of the world, and other features, such as its water supply, would be very interesting to students of antiquity, but would require too much space. In all this beauty and grandeur looms up the infamous grove of Daphne, five miles out of Antioch, the chief center of licentiousness in the ancient world.

In Paul's time the city had 500,000 population, shrunk now to about 28,000, with only about 4,000 Christians. Of note here is the Brotherhood with other races. Christianity destroys all barriers; it is love in action; it knows no color or race, all are one in Christ Jesus. These Christians of Antioch were such. The report of this glorious work came to Jerusalem. The mother church took notice and sent Barnabas, who made a thorough study of conditions and found everything in perfect order, which made him exceedingly glad. He was a fine delegate, brought up among Gentile surroundings and able to understand the people. It was Barnabas who introduced Saul to the church at Jerusalem and spoke for him; he was a Levite and a cousin of that Mary, the mother of John Mark, in whose house the Lord's supper was being held. The exhortation to cleave unto the Lord was very timely and necessary, because of the proximity of the Grove of Daphne, where temptation was very great.

"Cleaving unto the Lord" implies more than allowing Christ to hold on to us; it implies an eager and even passionate holding to Christ. Christianity must be full of purpose, alive with will; nothing less than that can withstand the fiery darts of the evil one. The record of Barnabas, as recorded in verse 24, is as follows: (a) A good man; (b) Full of the Holy Ghost; (c) Full of faith. A noble record.

He realized a helper of the caliber of Saul of Tarsus would be a great asset. He goes and finds him and brings him to Antioch. These two devoted friends had not met since the night the brethren in Jerusalem escorted Saul to Caesaria and sent him to Tarsus. This team worked together for a whole year, with great success. Here the followers of Jesus adopted the name of "Christians." This name is only mentioned three times in the New Testament, here, in Acts
