History of the Area Surrounding Camp Wheeler

As Prepared by David A. Young and Read by his Son, Rex, at the Camp Opening Sunday

The history of the locality where the new Scout camp has been established, prepared by David A. Young, aged pioneer, and read by his son, Rex, as the camp opening Sunday, is as follows:

Early Indian Territory

To the Boy Scouts of Camp Wheeler, Cass county, Nebr. Your cabin stands on historical grounds. This county was Otee Indian territory. The old Indian trail up and down the Missouri river ran right where the "Telegraph" road, west of your cabin, runs today.

All Indian tribes traveling north and south used this immediate neighborhood as a camping ground. There were no battles fought near here. On one occasion there came near being a trouble. Within a mile west of your cabin, a white man shot a dog belonging to the Indians. Several young Indians immediately journeyed to his home and were preparing to massacre the entire family. The Indian chief learned of the trouble and hurried to the scene of action. He arrived in time to prevent the massacre. However, he moved his tribe on at once to prevent trouble when darkness came.

The old freight road from Rock Bluffs ran along the foot of the hills on the north side of the valley, and joined the Plattsmouth road north of Murray. Many a wagon train load of corn was hauled over that road by teams of oxen to Denver.

The old government stage road crossed the creek a short distance east of your cabin, going north up the valley from Wheeler's barns and south through the Pollock farm. A good many years later (about 1875) I helped my father survey the road which is used today, from "Superior street" west in Rock Bluffs the entire length of the county.

One time a vigilante committee of citizens was bringing eight horse thieves from down south to Plattsmouth for a trial. They stopped near the place where your entrance road leaves the main road, and had a consultation to decide whether to hang the thieves or give them a court trial. There were fifty or sixty men in favor of hanging at once, but one man who lived nearby was opposed, so they were taken to Plattsmouth for trial.

In the early days, the citizens would meet in the valley just south of Rock Creek school house, which was open prairie, and drill in military tactics under the territorial governor, General Thayer. Each man was furnished with a rifle, which he was permitted to keep.

The women would ring dinner when the men drilled, and have a picnic just south of the creek and across the road west of your cabin. This was a natural picnic grounds of grass and big trees.

There were two or three Fourth of July celebrations held in this grove and horse races furnished amusement on the flat north of your cabin.

Most of the first houses were built of logs. In 1856 my father, William Young, built a two-room log house, one and a quarter miles northwest of your cabin. In 1857, there was a subscription school taught there, which was the first rural school in this county. Pupils came two and three miles. Miss Mary Stocking was the teacher. Isabel Davis was a pupil. She became the wife of Burwell Spurlock, who was county clerk of Cass county for four terms.

In 1891 Mr. and Mrs. Spurlock were given charge of a national institution for children, Mothers' Jewish Home, at York, Nebr. They remained there until their deaths a few years ago.

Doctor Capitola (Reed) Graves, wife of Julian Graves of Peru, Nebraska, was a student in this first school. She had a picture of the log house enlarged and presented it to the Plattsmouth library several years ago.

Mary Jane (Polin) Taylor, mother of Mrs. Jack Stamp, also attended this school and afterwards was a teacher for several years.

James Polin and myself are supposed to be the only ones living who attended the first school.

The first public school house in the community was a mile west and a quarter mile north of the present Rock Creek school. About 1870 the district was divided and the first Rock Creek school house was built across the road east of the present school. About the same time, a Christian church was built where the school now stands. The church was moved to Murray when that town was started. The school house of today was built years later. While the church stood there, a great many people were baptized in the creek, just west of the bridge. Many religious revival meetings were held there also, usually during the winter. After meetings, we would have coasting parties on a big coaster, from the top of the hill south to the bridge.

While the old school house was still standing, many spelling schools were enjoyed there. People came for miles around. Often the people could not all get in the building.

I have hunted and gone fishing and swimming along that creek ever since I was a boy. I was born near Glenwood, Iowa, March 23, 1851, came with my parents on a boat to this territory March 5, 1855, landed at old Kenoza, then by wagon to the home, where they built the log house that I have described. I lived here twelve years before Nebraska became a state.

This log house served as a residence until 1893. It was the birthplace of six of our children. The picture was taken in 1902, just before it was torn down and rebuilt.

I am now donating a picture of the log house with a poem, and this sketch of early history, to the Camp Wheeler Boy Scouts, to be kept in remembrance of an old pioneer. I was 83 years old March 22, of this year.

Written April 21, 1934. DAVID ANDREW YOUNG.

Officers Patrol Highways After Bandit Alarm

Report of Five Men in Large Sedan Armed With Machine Guns on Highway South of City.

Officers over the eastern section of Nebraska were busily engaged Monday afternoon in searching for a large sedan car which was reported to be traveling west to Lincoln and containing five men armed with machine guns.

The car was first reported when they were seen south of Murray where they had stopped the car of Martin Lohnes and inquired the most direct route to Lincoln and Denver. Mr. Lohnes reported the matter as soon as possible and Sheriff Homer Sylvester and State Deputy Sheriff Jarvis Lancaster were soon in pursuit of the car and patrolling the highways in the section where the car was last seen.

The alarm was given from the office of State Sheriff Fred Benton and state deputies, sheriffs and other peace officers in this part of the state were ordered out to maintain patrols of the roads.

The search was kept up into the night but without result as there were no more reports of the car being seen.

The car was reported as having an Illinois license plate on the rear but none on the front.
