Mrs. George Troop, Mrs. W. O. Troop, Mrs. Earl Troop and daughter, Miss Avis, Miss Lois Troop, were over to Plattsmouth on last Monday afternoon where Mrs. W. O. Troop was meeting with the W. C. T. U. and the remainder of the party were visiting with friends.

Merritt Pollard who suffered so severe injuries some weeks ago at the feet, not the hands, of a fractious horse, and which fractured his leg in four places, is getting along better at this time and is able to be out and at work harvesting. He purchased a new harvester and was cutting his wheat on last Monday.

Stuart Rough, the manager of the Nehawka elevator, was a visitor in Iowa City, Iowa, and was accompanied by the good wife where they spent last Sunday at the home of their two daughters who make their home in that town. While he was away, James M. Palmer was looking after the business at the elevator.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Rood of Burr, were visiting in Nehawka on last Sunday and was accompanied by their daughter, Caroline, when they returned home, they left the daughter to visit for a week with grandfather and grandmother Nels Anderson and wife. The little girl was tickled that she might stay and visit for a week but not near as much as were her grandparents.

Enjoyed Father's Day.

There was a happy gathering at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Troop of near Syracuse on last Sunday when Mr. and Mrs. Robert Troop entertained for both fathers, the father of Mrs. Troop being George Bray of Syracuse, where the party Mr. and Mrs. George Bray, parents of Mrs. Troop and Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Troop, parents of Mr. Troop, and a most enjoyable day was had with an excellent dinner which was enjoyed by all.

Mrs. John O. Yeiser Better.

Mrs. John O. Yeiser, who by the way is daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Sturm, who underwent an operation at the hospital at Omaha some two weeks since is doing better at this time. However, she was very sick for some ten days and was denied even a drink of water for five days. She is making good improvement at this time. She was visited last week by her mother, Mrs. Sturm and by her own sons, Andy and Jack Yeiser, who found the patient much better.

Much Ado About Nothing.

Some small boys, who like the out of doors, were out strolling along the banks of the Weeping Water, shall we call it a creek or a river? when they sighted a man well advanced in years with no pants on in the shallow waters. They thinking the man was in the act of drowning hastened to town to give the alarm and secure aid for the rescuing of the unfortunate man. Mr. VanPool and Taylor hastened to save the man's life, while the lads traveled on towards town. Herbert Kunz was looking over his garden thinking how long it would be before he could get a meal of icicle radishes, when the lads and a woman came and told him a man was drowning in the creek. Mr. Kunz jumped into the auto and commanding the lads to direct him to where a casastrophy was being enacted, when they arrived at the place they perceived two men coming up out of the river and asking them they smiled and said the man had been fishing and dropping his rusty pocket knife which went into the water. The unfortunate man who was well past the meridian of time and not desiring to get his pants wet, pulled them off and carefully waded into the water extending his hand down into the water to search for his knife, which caused the lads to think he was drowning, when he was only seeking his pocket knife. He was somewhat peeved that such a commotion had been created about nothing at all. However, the intentions of his would be rescuers was very noble to say the least.

Strange Things Happen.

Winfield Scott Norris was standing on the bumpers of his car and feeling himself slipping, assayed to jump off but the slipping was bad, and he slipped and was thrown to the ground fracturing his heel. That was some four weeks since, and Mr. Norris had to remain at home until the broken foot healed, the first time he was able to be down town on foot was last Monday and the fracture was four weeks ago. Olaf Lundberg who was accustomed to have his friend Mr. Norris with him every day suffered much of loneliness while his friend was laid up. The smile which flitted over the face of Olaf was like a ray of sunshine in the darkest night. However, with the foot doing so well the boys can see each other now every day. Be good boys and do not get into mischief.

There Is No Place Like Home.

Some people like home, some people love their homes and others surely delight in staying there. Henry Lindsay was a resident of Cass county for the past sixty years and has been to Plattsmouth but one time, thirty-six years ago. Henry likes staying in his own home town.

REDUCTION ON FORDS

Detroit, Mich.—Reductions of $10 to $15 in list prices of 1934 Ford V-8 passenger cars and $10 to $20 in list prices of Ford V-8 commercial cars and trucks were announced last week by the Ford Motor Company effective Friday, June 15.

Ford prices had remained unchanged since the introduction of the 1934 V-8 last December, the Ford Motor Company not having participated in the recent general automotive price increase. The reductions announced are, therefore, a decrease in the original price.

The price reduction on the standard and de luxe Tudor Sedans, most popular individual models in point of sales, is $15. Prices of other standard and de luxe body types were reduced $10 except prices of the Roadster, Phaeton and Cabriolet, de luxe types which remain unchanged. Both standard and de-luxe passenger cars have the same V-8 engine and 112 inch wheelbase chassis. Body types for both are identical except for the de luxe equipment.

Supreme Court Holds Taxing Law Invalid

Revision of the State Intangible Tax Law Held Unconstitutional by State High Court.

The Nebraska state supreme court Monday handed down their decision that the revision of the state intangible tax law, made by the last state legislature was unconstitutional and invalid.

The law changed the tax rate on money and savings accounts from 2½ mills to 5 mills, on stock of banks, trust and investment companies from 8 to 11 mills, and ordered all other securities and credits taxed at the same rate as tangible property instead of at 8 mills as formerly.

The law was attacked as discriminatory as between bank and other stocks and was criticized because a merchant with a due bill would have to pay several times as much tax on the account due as on cash on hand, if he had been able to collect the bill.

Classification Revised.

The legislature started to repeal the intangible tax law, but instead revised it, classifying the former intangibles as special classes of tangible property.

The decision left the former intangible tax law in full force and effect. The court's decision was written by Judge Bayard Paine.

The decision held House Roll No. 9, the intangible revision law, is void "among other reasons, because not all of its objects are expressed in its title, and the act is very much broader than its title. Amendments have been made in this act which are in no way germane to the subject matter of the sections amended."

The opinion also held that where the title of the bill provided for repeal of certain sections of the statute, "the legislature cannot by said bill re-enact the substance of the sections so declared repealed in the title, nor can amendments be made to the sections declared to be repealed." This was done in House Roll No. 9.

"Saving Clause" Ineffective.

The law contained a "saving clause" providing that if one part was held unconstitutional, it should not affect other parts. The court said, however, that where sections of a law are an inducement to passage of an act, then the entire act is void, notwithstanding a saving clause.

"One of the purposes of the act," it said, "was to establish a new plan for the taxation of intangibles by the simple device of calling such personal property tangible. The various sections are so interwoven with that one theory that it would be impossible to leave a few sections standing by themselves."

Enforcement Enjoined.

Such a finding would leave the law, under which the state tax commissioner and county assessors must proceed, in such a chaotic condition that it would be absolutely impracticable and unenforceable, and doubtless law suits would arise which would hamper and delay the collection of the needed revenues to run our state and each of the subdivisions thereunder.

The opinion was written in the case brought by Moeller, McPherrin and Judd for a declaratory judgment. Judges Eberly and Good concurred in the result, without agreeing to all the statements in the opinion. The court also granted the injunction requested by Cohen Brothers, Inc., against Sarpy county officials to prevent enforcement of the law.

State Tax Commissioner W. H. Smith said county assessors would have no difficulty in adjusting assessments back to the old basis.

"The assessment abstracts," Smith said, "were made up this year to meet this contingency. The new classes of 'tangible' property, formerly intangibles, were listed separately so assessors will have to change only the totals."

LOUP CITY PAIR ARRAIGNED

Loup City, Neb.—Two more defendants in the Loup City riot case pleaded not guilty in county court here Tuesday and were released on $500 bonds pending trial June 26. They are Carl Wicklund and Harry Macdonald. Previously John Squires had furnished bond in the same amount. Three more men are sought. Three others were returned to jail at Grand Island after arraignment last week. The rioting charges against the group grew out of a pitched battle on the court house lawn when a group of outside "agitators" rode into town last week to get employes at a produce plant here to quit.

Decreased Highway Program in Sight

State to Get $3,960,000 This Year and to Match Dollars Thereafter if Possible.

A "half-size" highway construction program for Nebraska from new federal appropriations compared with the program made possible by federal funds allotted last summer, was foreseen by State Engineer Cochran as President Roosevelt signed a $22 million dollar road authorization bill.

Cochran said information he received from Washington was that 200 million of the total would be available this year on the same basis as the 400 millions included in last year's PWA appropriation. The remainder would be allotted 125 million next year and the same amount the following year to be matched by state funds.

Last year Nebraska had $7,828,000 while Cochran said it will get only $3,960,000 from the new appropriation for this year. Whether this will be made available before late summer, Cochran said would depend on how quickly the federal roads bureau prepares regulations and instructs state highway departments to proceed.

Frankly worried at the reduced size of federal appropriations for road work, Cochran said, there was some advantage, however, in knowing what would be available the two years following.

"We will be allotted about 2 1-2 million dollars a year apparently for next year and the year after," he said, "which we will have to match with state funds. It will take all available state funds for construction for federal projects."

Cochran said if the next legislature should divert another half cent of the state's 4 cent a gallon gasoline tax from the state to the counties as has been recommended in some quarters, the state would not be able to match the federal funds.

"It will be very close as it is," he said, "and at the best we won't be able to do better than match the federal money with what funds we have available for construction."
