Quick Action Saves the Life of Murray Seedman

Ray Fredrick Misses Having Truck Struck by Train by Only Slight Margin Near St. Paul.

Ray Fredrick, the Murray seed man, had a very narrow escape from death on last Friday evening about seven o'clock as he was approaching the city of St. Paul, Nebr., when he with some ten thousand pounds of seed corn was making a delivery of seed to a client at St. Paul. Mr. Fredrick was well acquainted with the country but the road had been changed and as he was driving along with his truck making about 45 miles per hour and was nearing a railroad crossing a short freight train shot out from behind a sand hill but little over a hundred feet in advance of his truck. Ray first applied the breaks, but seeing that would put him on the railroad track about the time the engine was there he quickly turned the truck to the old road, but as he passed over the shoulder he struck soft sand and into which the front wheels of the truck sank up to the axle and when the rear wheels struck the ditch the truck rolled over and over, the second time righting itself, throwing Mr. Fredrick a number of feet into the adjacent field.

Another car was following and was also attempting to pass the truck at the time and seeing the truck turn over turned the other way to the right and were able to stop.

When Mr. Fredrick was thrown from the car he passed through the windshield and lost consciousness but immediately got up and came back to the truck and the people took him in their car, taking him to St. Paul—three miles away and placed him in the hospital. This was on Friday night and Mr. Fredrick did not regain consciousness until last Saturday morning and was brought home on Sunday.

He is getting along nicely now considering the severity of his injuries. He is kept in bed for the present. Mr. Fredrick remembers of having fifty-three dollars in his pocket but when he came to himself at the hospital he only had twenty-nine dollars, where the remainder went no one knows. The firm to whom he was taking the seed corn hearing of the accident took their truck and went to get the corn. Mr. Fredrick is hoping to be out in a few days.

Urge Harvest Laborers to Remain at Home

Unusual Weather Conditions Have Brought Harvest in Most of Wheat States at Once.

"Due to lack of moisture and intense heat, this year an unusually large area of the Big Wheat Belt has been thrown into harvest at the same time. This week, with continued favorable weather, Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas and Nebraska will be cutting and threshing simultaneously. In spite of heavy abandonment of sown acreage and light yields in most sections, this condition results in the temporary employment of a large number of harvest laborers. Yet laborers should not go to the Big Wheat Belt with the expectation of securing work, since the unemployment situation in these states makes available many local men. Even those who secure work in the harvest fields will be employed but a short time.

In south central Kansas, from the Oklahoma line to Wichita, harvest is about 50 per cent completed. By the first of this week harvest should be under way to the north line of the State and starting in southern Nebraska.

A special agent of the Farm Placement Service is in the Panhandle of Texas, another in Oklahoma, and three in Kansas—all patrolling the highways in automobiles, giving information, placing laborers among growers, turning back such workers as are not needed and helping to prevent surpluses in towns within the wheat area. They report sufficient labor to meet needs, with surpluses at only a few points, and these mostly boys or men inexperienced in harvest work.

Wages quite generally are $1.50 to $2 per day for shocking and 20c to 25c per hour for threshing. There is a wide range in wages for combine operators, probably averaging from $2.50 to $3 per day.

Nebraska will produce only about one-third of a normal crop, while small grain in the Dakotas is no near a total failure that available labor within the states will be far in excess of harvest demands.

All harvest laborers should remain at home unless they have made previous and dependable arrangements with individual wheat growers for jobs.
