Conducting One Man Show

In the October number of the Pictorial Review there is a picture of Justin Sturm showing this gentleman engaged in his work as a sculptor and the further announcement that he is to conduct a one man show with a score or more of busts of famous people which he will have on exhibition. The picture showing Justin at work is an excellent one of this active hard-working American.

In the same issue, beginning on page 7 is a story written by Justin entitled "Where the West Begins." Better secure a copy and read this fascinating article from the pen of the former Nehawka-lad, who is stepping up the ladder of success rather rapidly these days.

Mrs. James Palmer Better

Mrs. J. M. Palmer, who has been at the hospital of Dr. Wilson, a former resident of Nehawka, and who for a time was a practitioner of medical science in this place, but left here many years ago and established a hospital at Oskaloosa, Iowa, where he has built up a splendid reputation in the treatment of disease, writes that she is making good progress, following a recent operation performed there for the benefit of her health. The many friends of Mrs. Palmer will be pleased to know of her convalescence, and also to know of the success that has come to Dr. Wilcox.

Honored by Their Friends

Incident to the wedding of Mrs. Mary Ahrends Schaeffer and Walter Engelkemeler recently, a large number of their friends assembled on last Saturday night at the Engelkemeler home, where they appropriately charivariated this happy couple and as the week's work had been done, the celebration was continued along into the night with a dance in which all joined and a most pleasant evening was had. Congratulations and good wishes were expressed by the happy assemblage and in departing all voiced the further wish for a long and happy wedded life together.

Library Completed This Week

The Nehawka public library—an achievement of interest to everyone in the community, young and old—has now been fully completed and is ready for the public to use. Its completion fulfills a dream of long standing of some of the women's clubs of the town and stands as a testimonial to their untiring efforts along this line. The one thing that brought success much more quickly than would otherwise have been possible was the advent of CWA in Cass county last winter. The library backers saw in that an opportunity to move rapidly ahead with their plans and secured approval thereof as one of the most worthy of all CWA projects undertaken in the county. From then on, the work moved rapidly, although the curtailment of hours and subsequent shutting down of CWA work left the job still unfinished and a burden on the hands of the sponsors to get completed. Willing hands took up the remaining task of manual labor required to complete it, while the ladies redoubled their efforts at raising the required money for material. How well they have succeeded may best be realized by a visit to this new building that will house the reading matter—books, magazines and newspapers—for the people of the community to read and enjoy.

Constructed of logs, it is a fitting monument to pioneer life in the great mid-west and a building that will serve its purpose for many years to come.

Tells of Trip to California in Gold Rush

Miss Olive Gass Relates Experiences of Father in the Rush West in '48 and '49.

In connection with the parade of the '49ers at our fall festival, I shall give an authentic account of one of these wagon-trains, as told me by my father, Mr. Perry P. Gass. At the time my father joined the wagon-train, he was a young, unmarried man, about 20 years old, and lived in Ohio.

He and Dr. William Wintersteen were studying medicine at the same school. But my father contracted a "fever" that was incurable, and that was the "California Gold Fever." He abandoned the study of medicine, and joined an overland wagon-train for California.

There were two principal ways of travel. One was in ships, around Cape Horn, and the other was by wagon-trains drawn by oxen or horses, by the "overland" route.

This wagon-train left Ohio and traveled directly to St. Louis. They crossed the Missouri river at a point between where Kansas City and St. Joe now stand. Then they took a westerly course, and veering a little to the north, they came up into Nebraska, and passed the military post of Ft. Kearney. They then started on the long journey to Salt Lake City, through a country inhabited only by Indians. They rested at Salt Lake City for a week at which time they had the privilege of hearing Brigham Young preach. They then started on the last lap of their journey to California.

The trip across Nevada proved to be the hardest of the entire journey. The rough and sandy deserts of Nevada made the trip unbelievably difficult. In traveling down the Humboldt valley, hundreds of travelers, oxen and horses perished.

A remnant of the number who had started across the plains finally reached the Sacramento river in California where gold had been discovered.

When they arrived, they found that thousands of young men had preceded them. In fact, they came in such numbers that in 1849, one year from the time of the discovery of gold, the people of California set up a state government, without authority from congress.

The members of the wagon-train to which my father belonged, followed a tributary of the Sacramento river up into the very heart of the Sierras. There they made a camp and laid 600 feet of flume for hydraulic mining.

Not many letters were sent in those days as postage was so high. Often the men in California had no stamps, but the postmaster would "receipt" you the face of the envelope for the amount of postage which was sometimes 20c and even 40c on a letter. But my father felt that he got his money's worth, as he wrote from 10 to 20 pages to "the girl he left behind him."

But life was not so dull, although camps were widely separated, because "troupers" from the east went from camp to camp giving entertainments of song, dance and magic, and gold was literally thrown at their feet.

My father's chase for gold was much like the legendary chase for the elusive pot of gold at the end of the rainbow.

In 1852 he returned to his home in Ohio, by way of the isthmus of Panama.

OLIVE GASS.

AUBURN WINS GAME

The Auburn team of the Nemaha valley league were the winners over the Plattsmouth Red Sox Sunday at Auburn by the score of 9 to 1. The game was played in a miniature tornado as the wind was high and dust obscuring the vision of the players a great deal of the time.

Alex Schilschke scored the lone run of the Sox in the sixth when he doubled and scored on Svyoboda's cut. Auburn did all their scoring in two innings, the second and seventh when the wind caused several passes to be given that resulted in runs.

DEPARTS FOR SCHOOL

Miss Anna Margaret McCarty departed Monday evening for Columbia, Missouri, where she is to enter Stephens college. Miss McCarty is a member of the graduating class of the Plattsmouth high school in 1934 and is expecting to major in English and music at the widely known college. Stephens is one of the most popular two year girls' school in the west and has a large number of students from Omaha and Lincoln in attendance at the school each year.

Mrs. H. F. Hendricks, of Omaha, was a visitor in the city over the week end with her son, Vern Hendricks and family as well as with the many old time friends. While here she was a caller at the Journal to renew her subscription.
