RETURNS FROM CHICAGO

From Tuesday's Daily James Stander, prominent resident of Louisville, returned this morning from Chicago, where he was in attendance at the Century of Progress. Mr. Stander, who has been an extensive traveler, found that the exposition was a real treat and well worth the trip. Our old friend stopped for a short visit at the Journal office before continuing on to his home. He has had a most delightful time and will long remember the happy occasion.

Cochran Carries Message to West Part of State

Placing Record Before the Voters of Nebraska Meets With a Fine Response.

R. L. Cochran, democratic candidate for governor, continues his campaign for the chief executiveship of the state with the same vigor he has shown all through his public life.

Wherever he appears hundreds of new friends rush to him as their ideal of the man they want to administer their executive affairs as governor, and from state headquarters comes word that the "Cochran for Governor" memberships have swamped the staff of clerks in charge of their handling.

Out over the state Mr. Cochran has been making a great effort to "smoke out" his opponent, Mr. Griswold. Lots of time has been spent by the opponent in an effort to attack Mr. Cochran's career as state engineer, and in that capacity directly responsible for the wonderful paid-for highway system that covers Nebraska today.

While his opponent continues his hammering at what he thinks is a flaw or two, it has been directly declared by Mr. Cochran that it was this same man, Griswold, now the republican candidate for governor who as senator or representative several times gave Mr. Cochran a clear bill of health so far as his administration and personal work was concerned. These came through reports to legislatures of which Griswold was a member, and in some instances chairman of the committees that highly commended the work of Mr. Cochran as state engineer.

The fight centered last week around the west part of the state, and gradually Mr. Cochran is nearing the central and eastern sections, with the plan in mind, that he will keep battling right on through until the day of election, November 6th.

Editorially from all sections of the state and in papers, republican, democratic and independent have appeared criticism of Mr. Griswold's attack on the Cochran record. The trend of these comments is Mr. Cochran was good enough to be commended by Mr. Griswold as a legislator, but now that they are rivals in a political campaign, there is fault to find.

Burke's Campaign.

Without an idle moment of his working day and night, Edward R. Burke, termed by his friends, "Burke the Builder" continues his march back and forth across Nebraska in his campaign for U. S. senator.

Addressing a meeting on an average of eight times daily, usually including a big rally at some larger center in the evening, Mr. Burke still finds time make his ringing radio addresses, that have brought much favorable comment from his supporters and those who would appear neutral in politics.

The joint debates, ten of which were scheduled, between Mr. Burke upholding staunchly the administration and the new deal, and his opponent Robert Simmons, republican, who attempts to tear down the administration program, are creating much interest wherever held. Mr. Burke gains favorably before each of the audiences and his appearance on the platform on each occasion serves as a cause for long, loud applause.

As was the case in the primary campaign, Mr. Burke continues to stand up under the strain of the campaign in remarkable fashion. He never is too busy after a long talk to visit with his hosts of friends who seek him out that they may shake his hand and offer a word of encouragement.

Much favorable comment on Mr. Burke's defense of the new deal pours into state headquarters after each of the debates. One man took occasion to remark in a letter that he traveled 75 miles especially to hear a constructive argument on the issues at stake and was more than gratified by the remarkable presentation made by Mr. Burke. He added that he was a republican, but a supporter of Burke after he heard the debate.

The Nehawka Water System.

With the completion of the well which was sunk for the supply of water for Nehawka, when the test was made of pumping for six consecutive hours, it was found that the well held up under the continuous flow of water from the pumps, and when also the water which was sent to the state chemist at Lincoln came back after testing one hundred percent pure, which is well both for quantity and quality. It required some work in order to get the location right and also the fine quality of the water, but it is worth it in the end.

Getting Pumping Station Ready.

Workmen are busy building a pumping station to get ready for the installation of the pumping apparatus which consists of the pumps and the power to pump the water. They will be installed and ready for operation when the pipes have been laid, the same being distributed at this time by Chester Stone and his force of workmen. The reservoir which is being made near the home of Mr. C. D. St. John is now well along and the concrete which is to line the place is now partly poured and will be completed before the lines are ready to pump the water into the basins.

Makes the Town Lively.

The coming of the water works has made the little city one of great activity with many strangers in town and many people busy with the number of things required for the building and installation of a water system. There are iron pipes strung along the streets where the mains are to be laid and on Tuesday the machine which is to dig the trenches for the mains and lesser pipes are to be paid arrived and immediately went to work to perform their part of the work.
