World's Fair is Now Drawing to a Close

Chicago, Oct. 22.—Last few days of October bring the last of the special, long stop-over, railroad round trips to the World's Fair. The fair closes one week from Wednesday, at midnight October 31, and the vast spectacle summing up the achievements of a century of progress will be a thing of the past.

The fair swings into its closing days with many world's records safe in the bag. Largest attendance of any World's Fair in this country—close to 37,000,000 now and with crowds pouring in for the last few days. Thirty million candle power is used in the fair's matchless night illumination spectacle. Three miles of unprecedented creations of the new architecture. Fifteen foreign villages. Incomparably the greatest display ever imagined of the miracles of science. More than a hundred features in the daily program. Spectacular free entertainment every hour of the day. The $50,000,000 show winds up in a blaze of success.

Work of demolition will start November 1 as, according to the contracts, nothing may be touched before the official closing date. Cost of removing the buildings is estimated at $1,000,000. Largest building is the Hall of Science, costing $1,106,000 and with nine acres of floor space, housing nearly 500 operating exhibits in pure science, the greatest visual education project ever created. A year will be occupied in the task of clearing the lake-front park of the last vestiges of the world's greatest show.

Continuous carnival is the program of the last days of the World's Fair. Success has crowned it. The fair management has staged a daily congress of thrills. Concessionaires, dancers, entertainers, free theaters, scientists, educators, industrial exhibitions with their endless variety of attractions, all are keyed up to make a whirlwind finish of this immense spectacle to which they have given their lives for the past two years. With the final blow off, midnight, October 31, the great fair will plunge into the darkness at top speed.

Special railroad round trips to see the end of the World's Fair have ten to sixteen days stop-over privilege. The round trips include one-half-rate admission to the fair and to a number of its principal pay concessions.

There was to have been a meeting and rally of the democratic party at the Avoca town hall on last Friday and which was attended by a goodly number of the party in this vicinity, and as they waited for the gathering of the crowd they played pinocle and bridge for a while and became so interested in their games that it was difficult when the time came to talk turkey, to break away from the fascinating cards. However they held a good meeting and did much to further the interests of the party.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. George Paasch of Millard, Paul Ottens and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Maseman and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Marguard. A very pleasant time was enjoyed.

Travels With Party.

It is being demonstrated that the democrats were wise in the selection of Elmer J. Hallstrom for their chairman of the county central committee the way in which he goes after the work and the effectiveness with which he gets the work done is evidence of his ability and willingness to work for the success of the ticket and the ideals of the democratic party. He was with the party of senatorial speakers, meeting them at Plattsmouth on last Monday morning and remaining with them in their tour of the county until they came to Avoca, and bidding them success as they departed for Syracuse. Elmer has proven himself a hustler.

President Calls Upon People to Assist Charities

Would Lighten the Government's Load of Providing Unemployment Relief.

Washington.—President Roosevelt called upon the people of the nation to lighten the load of government expenditures for unemployment relief thru the 1934 mobilization for human needs.

In an address opening a campaign for private charities, headed by Newton D. Baker, of Ohio, Mr. Roosevelt said the government counted upon a continuation of private contributions to private organizations. He called for a "decentralization of relief."

"I hope that you will well realize," he said, "that it is contrary to a sound public policy to transfer more burdens to the shoulders of government if it can possibly be avoided, and therefore, that private charity should, as a matter of good citizenship, be maintained at least at current levels."

Mr. Baker joined in the program inaugurating the 1934 private relief campaign. In his address, President Roosevelt said in part:

"For the second successive year I am making a direct and frank appeal to the country to give support to worthy local charities of all kinds. You will recognize the necessity of the general rule which prevents the president of the United States from asking for assistance or contributions on behalf of any specific or individual good cause. In this case, however, there is in existence a central organization called the "1934 mobilization for human needs."

"The object of this mobilization is to encourage and tie in together the many private organizations which are seeking funds to carry on their very essential and necessary work for the coming year."

"May I very simply explain to you two facts which all of us should bear in mind?"

"The first is that the federal government, the state governments and local governments are bearing an unusually heavy load of expenditures for relief and employment purposes—a load so heavy that every good citizen should seek to lighten it in every way possible. This effort on the part of governments of all kinds to bear their share of the emergency needs proceeds very clearly on the assumption that the total amount of relief and human needs heretofore borne by private contributions to private organizations, will continue in the future at least at the same pace and in the same amount as in the past."

"The other point I would make is that none of us wants to eliminate the personal factor in taking care of human needs. Surely none of you wants to centralize the care of relief either in Washington or in your state capitol or in your city hall. The decentralization of relief—the keeping of it in the hands of private organizations as much as we possibly can—means that personal relationships, personal contacts, personal obligations and personal opportunities to do good will be preserved."

Murray Study Club.

The Murray Study club met with D. C. Rhoden Thursday. The tubject was "Taxes," a very interesting question and one that concerns most everyone. It was ably discussed with John Turner, our county treasurer, as leader. The class asked questions and Mr. Turner explained how we accumulated the tax money and how it is used. The class felt they better understood the subject after the discussion than ever before, and feel indebted to Mr. Turner for the profitable afternoon.

This club has a covered dish luncheon at noon and this noon was characteristic of all others.

In the business session the members paid a tribute to Miss Sans, who is so seriously ill at the hospital and voted to send her a remembrance. They also arranged for a Halloween party.

The teachers are no longer guests, but members and they were with us for dinner.

The next meeting is with Mrs. John Farris, with Mrs. John Young as leader, on Nov. 15th. Needless to say all will be there, as they have too good a time to stay at home. Mrs. Kidder of Falls City was guest of the club.—Club Reporter.

FORD SALES BIG

For the first nine months of 1934, the sale of Ford V-8 passenger cars not only led all other makes in volume in the United States, but recorded a national increase of 97 per cent over Ford sales for the same period in 1933, official figures showed today.

From January to September, inclusive, Ford V-8 sales this year registered an increase of 202,090 units, or 97 per cent more cars than were sold during the same period in the previous year, the figures showed.

Although increases were reported in sales of practically every make of car during the first nine months of the current year, the Ford V-8 outdistanced all other makes of cars in the Ford price class with tremendous gains. The Ford sales gain was more than 83 per cent greater than the next closest make of car in the low price field, and more than 57 per cent greater than the third closest make.

The official figures from which the gains were reported were those of R. L. Polk & Company.
