Alfred L. Marshall, Nebraska Pioneer, Called by Death

One of Outstanding Resident of Weeping Water Where He Had Long Resided.

Alfred L. Marshall was born in Scitton, Yorkshire county England, on September 29th, 1852, where he with his parents resided until he was sixteen years of age when he came to America and but a short time afterward came to Cass county and Weeping Water to reside. He was for a while a clerk in a drug store and acquired the knowledge of this line so that he was admitted a pharmacist and then conducted a drug store at Weeping Water many years ago.

He was united in marriage with Miss Charlotte Berger, December 22, 1878, at a country church where Union now stands. At that time there was a number of small towns or postoffices in that section, among which were Stringtown, Factoryville, Kenosha, Rock Bluffs, Three Groves, and Eight Mile Grove. They came to Weeping Water to make their home and resided for the remainder of their lives. The wife passed away some eight years ago.

Mr. Marshall was a member of the Methodist church and for a time conducted the Bible class in their Sunday school. After being engaged in the drug business for a number of years he disposed of it and engaged in painting and decorating, continuing this line until advancing years made it very inconvenient for him to continue. He was an excellent workman and one of the very best of citizens. He was a very profound writer, some of his writings being published in this paper as well as in other papers.

To the union of this couple there was given five sons and one daughter, there being three who have passed on. One, Harold Marshall, was killed in battle in the World war in France. Those surviving are Ray C. Marshall of Payette, Idaho; H. Lee Marshall of Haigler, Nebr., and Sidney Marshall of Long Beach, Calif. Three sisters and three brothers also survive, they being Mrs. Lucy Maw of Aurora; Mrs. Belle Jones of Weeping Water; Paul Marshall of Elmwood; Will Marshall of Douglas, Nebr.; Mrs. Lewis Evans of Sioux Falls, South Dakota; Arthur T. Marshall of Cozad, Nebraska.

During the past summer with his advanced age he was greatly affected by the extreme heat and seemed not to entirely overcome it following the coming again of cooler weather, but continued to decline until on last Friday, November 23rd, he passed away.

The funeral was held from the Methodist church, conducted by the Rev. E. S. Pangborn. Interment was at the Oakwood cemetery and directed by the Hobson funeral home.

Plans for the Corn-Hog Program for '35 Announced

Cass County Farm Bureau Provided Information as to Government Plans for the Year.

Comparison of the tentative plans for the 1935 corn-hog program with the 1934 contract brings out the following points:

1. The same kind of an organization of community committeemen, allotment of committeemen, state and federal administration will be used to handle the 1935 program. Election of 1934 committeemen will be held as soon as contracts have been filled out.
2. The years, 1932 and 1933, will again be used for the base period. Production in 1934 will not affect the base for the 1935 contract.
3. Benefit payments will be paid in 1935 on a reduction of ten to thirty per cent of the corn base and ten per cent of the hog base. Reductions in 1934 were twenty to thirty per cent on corn and twenty-five per cent on hogs.
4. Benefit payments will be 35 cents per bushel on corn and $15 per head on hogs, the corn payment being figured on the appraisal given the farm and the hog payment on ten per cent of the hog base on the contract. Fifteen cents on corn and $7.50 on hogs will be paid upon acceptance of the contract, the remainder soon after December 1, 1935. Expenses of the county association will come out of the final payment.
5. There will be no contracted acres in 1935, the contract signer merely agreeing to reduce his corn and hog production.
6. The 1935 contract will include no restrictions on the production of other crops and livestock. Corn and hogs are all that are affected.
7. Total crop acres on the farm may be increased in 1935, that is, signers may break up pastures and meadows killed by the 1934 drouth.
8. Corn yields upon which the benefit payments will be determined by an appraisal of the corn land on the farm.
9. Signers may buy unlimited number of feeder pigs from other contract signers. Purchases from non-signers are limited to the number in the hog base.
10. A corn loan may be open to signers in the fall of 1935.

Junior Class Play Enjoyed Last Evening

"The Hidden Guest" Most Cleverly Presented by Cast of the Young People.

From Wednesday's Daily

Despite the weather, a fine audience was present last night to hear the presentation of the annual Junior class play which was presented on the stage of the high school auditorium. The play chosen this year was "The Hidden Guest," a clever three act comedy. The story revolved around the escapades of a couple of college boys in being assigned to visit a house without the knowledge of the occupants. With the expected appearance of guests, this quite naturally complicated matters in the household. Against a background of weird noises, vanishing yellow slickers, stolen bonds, and the ghost of Uncle Timothy the story was unraveled and through it all a pleasing touch of romance that was to have its climax at the curtain.

Grant Howard as (John Judkins) an elderly lumberman, carried his part with ease and Arthur Wurga was effective as one of his loyal employees. To Glen Kohrell fell the task of portraying the college boy and Harvey Egling took the part of the hard-boiled policeman. Chester Keil did his part well as (Hubner) the escaped convict. Stephen Davis as (Judkin's Son) carried the male lead with a difficult part to execute and a volume of lines to learn. He well portrayed the difficulties in which the college boy found himself as "The Hidden Guest."

Among the girls of the cast, Betty Bulin as (Ruby Mayfield) carried the leading part and made a pleasing appearance on the stage. Mary Jane Long successfully impersonated an older character, (Minnie Mayfield) Ruby's aunt. Rose Mary Clodt was well adapted to the part which she played, that of (Mrs. Barrington) and easily got this part across to the audience. Anna Marie Rea appeared in a pleasing manner as (Nellie Trotwood) a society girl. An outstanding performance was done by Kathryn Armstrong as (Melanthuria) the servant girl. Kathryn admirably fitted into the character both in voice and expression and made the servant a popular one with the audience.

The task of coaching a play is a difficult one and the burden of the work fell upon Mr. Wayne Alvord who so conscientiously worked with the cast during the past five weeks. Miss Helene Perry has always been willing to offer the benefit of her experience in dramatics when called upon. Mr. J. R. Reeder, co-sponsor of the class, looked after the stage properties and the ticket sales, both very important to the play and class.

Herbert Minor's Melodians pleased the audience with their music and the committees of the class who did so much work behind the scenes are worthy of special commendation. They are:

Stage Managers—Floyd McCarty, Joe Hendrix and Edward Hadraba; Properties—Almee Jane Thomas, Jane Wohlfarth; Tickets—Edward Hadraba, Donald Wurga; Bookholder—Marjorie Fitch.

The furniture was loaned through the courtesy of the Farley Furniture company.

Mr. Lindsay, who is a bachelor and lives alone, had returned to his home in the afternoon and finding the fire low had endeavored to revive it by pouring the oil from a gallon can. The burns were of a third degree nature and it was impossible to save the life of Mr. Lindsay, he passing away at 11 o'clock Tuesday at the hospital.
