Real Winter Temperatures Over the West

Christmas Sees Rapid Fall of Temperatures in This Locality—Five Below Zero Here.

After days of very moderate but threatening weather, the warning was given Tuesday morning of the approach of a severe cold wave over the central west, shippers being warned to prepare for temperatures of from zero to ten below in this portion of Nebraska and western Iowa.

The change came rapidly near noon Christmas and a severe north wind brought with it the reminder that winter was truly at hand and ready to do business.

The mercury fell rapidly during the late afternoon and evening and this morning registered five below in this city and immediate vicinity.

Reports of temperatures of from fifteen below to ten below is reported from points in the western section of the state while the cold wave sweeps on to the east.

It is predicted, however, that the cold wave will be of short duration and the zero weather followed by much warmer conditions in this section.
