

The Stability of Our Times

WE ARE sometimes prone to think that the problems we must face are peculiar to us as individuals or as nations, or to our generation; while, as a matter of fact, the temptations that come to any one individual are common to mankind; and the problems of our age have recurred in differing forms throughout all history.

are faced with these problems, we can rejoice in progress. We can be glad that our present time is so peculiarly awake and active. Naturally, if we allow our attention to center on the impurities thus brought to the surface—on the fear, greed, injustice, and strife which have become so evident—we may become appalled and disheartened; but if we look above the seething surface we shall see clarified, purified conditions being crystallized in thought.

in Manley last Sunday evening and a most merry time was had by all present. When the Plattsmouth party was ready to depart for home they got a thrill as they turned on the switch and assayed to start their car which they will not forget soon. It seems there is manufactured for such purposes a little contrivance not unlike a firecracker which can be attached to the spark plug of a car and is as harmless as a bit of wood so long as the motor is not running, but when the juice is turned on and the car started, a heavy fog of smoke comes from under the hood and a few seconds later a terrific explosion occurs that will fairly raise the hair on any one's head. It was one of these that was attached to the car of the Plattsmouth men and when the explosion occurred they could not get out of the car and away from the scene fast enough.

When the excitement was over and they had been advised of what it was all about, everyone enjoyed a hearty laugh, even to the Plattsmouth parties who took it all in good nature, but vowed they would get even.
