

Wabash News

H. P. Hinds was a visitor in Lincoln last Saturday, where he was calling on relatives and friends and locking after some business matters as well.

L. R. Standley was in Lincoln twice last week for goods, which indicates business must be better, for when more goods are needed to supply the trade that is most generally the case.

Frank Reese, the caretaker of the Missouri Pacific station, had another honor thrust upon him when he became grandfather on last Tuesday, a son being born to his daughter, of Lincoln. The parents are highly pleased over the event and Grandfather Reese is sure happy.

Leslie Reasoner, who has been making his home and that of the family in Wabash during the time when he is not working and that is a good deal, for the extra work is not so good a thing just now, was called to go to Plattsmouth last Sunday, and while there he reports a very heavy rain. He returned home the following day.

Mrs. Henrietta Lawton thought to visit with her friend, Mrs. J. A. Box and on account of the pressing invitation of Mrs. Box remained for a stay over the week end. While she was there the ladies enjoyed their visit and as well the quilting of a quilt for Mrs. Box. During the time while Mrs. Lawton was away, her son, Homer H. Lawton, was over to visit the mother and to pay his respects on Mother's day but was not able to see the mother.

Wabash Schools Close
The schools of Wabash have been busy with their closing exercises and the picnic, which was one of the features of the closing of the schools. The students are pleased that they are at liberty for three months before they have to return to their books and the school room. The school has operated very efficiently during the past year and all the students have made good progress.

Recovered Stolen Car
The car of Ralph Dorr, which was stolen a few days since, was recovered the following day with no damage other than that the gas had all been used and a pair of new Unionalls was missing, but notwithstanding these minor losses, Mr. Dorr was very well pleased that he was able to get the car back.

Wanted Rain—and Got It
Everybody wanted rain and among them Miss Myrtle Woods, the rural mail carrier, but she did not count on the mud which the rain brought, for it had been dry for a long time. She took some help along last Tuesday to assist with the work of getting through the mud and delivering the mail safely. Guy Hinds was the one chosen to go along and help, and he made an excellent man for the task. There is talk of graveling all the rural mail routes in Cass county as a part of the government's new work relief program, and we'll bet it would not make a single mail carrier mad.

Will Hold Memorial Service
At the Wabash cemetery, a mile west and half a mile north of Wabash, on May 26, the villages of Wabash and Murdock will hold memorial services. The principal speaker will be the Rev. W. A. Taylor, of Union, a former pastor of the Baptist church of Wabash. There will also be music and singing by the Wabash quartette. Be sure and be at the cemetery at two o'clock on May 26th, and participate in the services and meet your old time friends. The program and arrangements for the day are in the hands of Lacey McDonald, of Murdock, and Sherman Hardaway, of Wabash.

VERY SERIOUSLY ILL
The many friends of Herman Garteman, old resident of the south part of the city, will regret to learn that he is now in very serious condition. Mr. Garteman has been in poor health for the past six years and on Wednesday suffered another attack that has made his condition very grave.

Garden Club Has Interesting Meet Thursday

Splendid Talks Given on Gardens, Both Flower and Vegetable, Much Enjoyed.

The Plattsmouth Garden club on Thursday evening held a very interesting meeting at the auditorium of the Central building, with a large number of the members in attendance.

The meeting was in charge of Frank A. Cloidt and a most interesting program had been prepared for the benefit of the members that covered discussions of both the flower and vegetable gardens and the many helpful ideas that were given will greatly aid the gardeners of the community in planning their summer work.

J. H. McMaken, one of the veteran enthusiasts in home gardens, was called upon to discuss the matter of vegetable gardens and from the store of his long experience in the fields of gardening and horticulture he brought out many vital facts as to the proper means of planting, preparation of the soil and the seasonal selection of plantings to assure a continuous garden for the year.

Judge A. H. Duxbury had the subject of the flower gardens and gave a very fine talk along this line and of the many beautiful and attractive flowers whose blooming presence in the garden and lawn add to the charm of the home. Judge Duxbury referred to a number of valuable pamphlets that will assist the gardener in his summer work. Among the pamphlets were a number from the University of Nebraska agricultural college, Extension circular No. 1261, "Making an Outdoor Living Room"; Circular 1259, "Beautifying the Garden"; from the Iowa state college at Ames, Bulletin PG 172, "Garden Effects and Cut Flowers"; from the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Farm Bulletin 1171, "Growing Annual Flowers"; from the National Home Institute at Davenport, Iowa, "How to Make an Outdoor Living Room."

In addition to the various gardening talks there were two very delightful musical offerings given, a vocal solo by Betty Ann McCarty and a piano solo by Thelma Kruger, both of which were very pleasing. A. L. Tidd of the Flower Show committee also discussed at some length the coming flower show to be held on May 25th and 26th.

Mrs. J. W. Kuhl Testifies in Murder Trial

Tells of Conversations with Clarence Price as to "Something Awful" Expected to Happen.

Mrs. J. W. Kuhl, mother of Edith Kuhl, of Pacific Junction, Friday took the witness stand in the trial of the case at Glenwood where the state of Iowa is charging Clarence Price with the beating to death of Edith Kuhl. Mrs. Kuhl was called by the state.

She related that Price had gone out to the Kuhl farm some time previous to the fatal assault and had told her, "I believe you'll have to come in and take care of the girls. They don't seem to want me to take care of them. The other night they pulled their dresser up behind their door. Something awful is going to happen. I'm going away and you'll never know where I've gone."

"Oh, I wouldn't talk that way," Mrs. Kuhl testified that she advised him. "As long as we have anything to eat we will see that you have something too."

Norman Genuyn, defense attorney, said to the witness, "You didn't tell that story to the grand jury, did you, Mrs. Kuhl?"

Couldn't Remember All.
She replied that she had not been able to think of everything at that time.

Mrs. Ritte Graham also testified briefly Friday afternoon.

Florence Ellis, 15-year-old high school student at Pacific Junction, testified that the evening before the attack on the girls she visited with them in the Graham home from about 7:00 until 9:30 o'clock.

Three times during that evening, she said, Price went outside the Graham home and once took a shotgun with him. As he left with the gun he said to the girls, "I think I hear somebody out there," Miss Ellis testified.

Testimony Stricken.

Judge Earl Peters ordered the testimony of three witnesses given Friday afternoon completely stricken from the court records. They were Noah Hunt, aged resident of Glenwood; James C. Spidall, who carries mail between the depot and postoffice in Pacific Junction; and Ray Johnson, Pacific Junction, now employed in river work. The testimony of each was of remarks Price was alleged to have made to them on separate occasions about the temperaments of the Kuhl sisters.

When court adjourned Friday evening until 9 a. m. Monday, the state had called 21 witnesses, about half of the number subpoenaed by the state. The case cannot possibly be completed next week, attorneys for both sides said.

Price's Story Retold.

Price's own story of the fatal assault, for which he is on trial was given to the jury Friday morning by Frank Raynor, Mills county coroner.

Defense attorneys submitted Friday morning's prosecution witnesses to close cross-examination, and Price appeared greatly cheered. Raynor related the story which Price had told in the Mills county jail when being questioned by officers. It was, in brief, that he had gone to bed fully clothed in the west bedroom, but had been awakened about 11 to find the lights on in the living room and a moaning sound coming from the east bedroom where Edith Kuhl, and her sister, Helen, were sleeping.

Tells of Prowler.

Price told, too, Raynor testified of having shot at a prowler on a previous occasion, and of having chased one away on still another. The shotgun had been given him by the Kuhl girls' father, the story continued, that he might rout the prowler in any future molestation. Raynor revealed further that Price had named a man whom he suspected as the prowler.

"What was his name?" the prosecutor asked. "I can't recall his name," the witness replied. "Would you if you heard it?" "Probably." "Was it—" the attorney began but a defense lawyer quickly interposed an objection, which the judge sustained.

Price told the officers, Raynor recalled, that he had notified the girls' father that Helen was getting letters from one Howard Williams Price and Williams, according to the story, had a fight as a result of this.

hobo some time previous, according to Raynor.

Chris Gorn, a blacksmith and neighbor, who was summoned to the home in Pacific Junction, Ia., where the slaying occurred, testified as he approached it late that night "big flakes of fire" were coming out of the chimney, and that Price exclaimed, "My God, that fire!"

All drafts on the stove were open, Gorn said. It was in this stove that buttons were found which it is contended were from a suit of Price's underwear.

Mrs. Durkee Saw Price Run.

Mrs. George Durkee, another neighbor, testified that while her husband was dressing to go over to the scene of the attack, after being summoned, she looked out the window and saw Price run around to the girl's bedroom window and hurry back again.

Mrs. Durkee testified also as to the good character of the two Kuhl girls.

The courtroom was filled again and many of the spectators had brought their lunches. The crowd was more orderly, however, and there were fewer persons loitering in the corridors and outside.

Say Hammer Missing.

Sheriff DeMoss and Deputy Sheriff Cooney took the stand and identified a suit of underwear, offered as an exhibit, as that which had been taken from Price the night of the attack, and also identified a whole button and several parts of buttons as those which they had sifted out of the ashes of the stove in the home the next morning.

Fritz Franks, special investigator of the Omaha police department, testified Friday, substantiating the others' account of the questioning of Price. Arthur Friedman, Glenwood merchant, identified the underwear offered as an exhibit, as Price's and said the accused man had bought two such suits. Robert McIntyre, Pacific Junction truck operator, told of searching Price the night of the assault and finding only a potato in his pockets. William Woods, undertakers' assistant, gave further details to corroborate previous testimony.
